But very slight evidence on his part is sufficient to shift the burden of proof upon the defendants (vendor and vendee) who must know the real facts, and who must be in a better position to give evidence relating to the actual price (s. 106, Evidence Act). (5)—Pre emptor questioning correctness of price—Principle—Determination of amount payable by pre-emptor—Amount changing hands as consideration.—As to the burden of proof where the pre-emptor questions the correctness of the price entered in the sale-deed the rule laid down in 5 A. 184 must be followed. In determining the amount which a pre-emptor has to pay, the Court is not called upon to assess the amount which would be a fair and reasonable price for the property, but to ascertain what amount actually changed hands as consideration for the sale. (6)—Pre-emption—Fictitious nature of price in the sale deed, extent of onus on plaintiff of proving.—In the majority of cases the only prima facie evidence, which the plaintiff pre-emptor, alleging the price in the sale-deed to be fictitious, could produce, would be any admission by the vendor or the vendee of the fictitious nature of the price set forth, or more frequently, evidence showing that the market-value of the property was so much less than the alleged price, as would lead any reasonable man to come to the conclusion that the alleged price was not the real price. Where the pre-emptor, has given such prima facie evidence, it then lies upon the vendor and vendee, who set up the price in the sale-deed as true and genuine, to give such an explanation by evidence as will go to rebut the presumption raised by the plaintiff's evidence. In the present case, the defendant having given no explanation at all of the circumstances under which he was willing to give five times its market-value for the property, there was sufficient evidence before the Court upon which to find that the alleged contract price was a fictitious price and not a genuine one. (1)—On whom it should be placed.—The burden of proof must be placed according to the pleadings and any preliminary examination of the parties, and, for the final decision of the case, the burden remains upon the same party. When the party who has to discharge the burden of proof, has made out a prima facie case, in a certain sense the burden of proof shifts on to the other party, for, in the absence of any rebutting evidence, the point at issue would be decided in favour of the party making out a prima facie case. When, however, the Judge has heard the whole case, he must weigh the evidence for both parties, placing the burden of proof as it was originally placed. Supposing the party upon whom the burden of proof lies makes out a prima facie case, and it is doubtful whether the other party has rebutted this case, it necessarily follows that the prima facie case is doubtful, and the party entitled to the benefit of the doubt is the party upon whom there was no burden of proof at the outset. Any other rule would obviously be unjust. The party upon whom the burden of proof lies begins, and has the first opportunity of proving a prima facie case. It is evidently unjust that this should finally shift the burden of proof upon the other party. He would thus be at a disadvantage. W.B. INNES v. ASGAR ALI, L.B.R. 1893—1900, 456.

(9)—Conduct of plaintiff, showing that he admitted defendant's title—Burden of proof—Estoppel.—The plaintiffs claimed to recover possession of certain lands and houses from the defendants, alleging that they and the persons whom they made pro forma defendants were seventh in degree from a common ancestor, when the succession opened out, and that the real defendants, the respondents, were only eighth in degree, and were therefore not entitled to the property. It appeared from the evidence that the plaintiffs undoubtedly admitted the right of the defendants immediately after the opening out of the succession, and acted upon that admission by permitting the names of the defendants to be registered in the Collector's office, and by carrying on suits with them in the joint names of all. Held that this course of conduct although it did not amount to an estoppel in point of law, threw upon the plaintiffs a heavy burden of proof, which they had not sustained. (12)—Fiduciary relation—Burden of proof—Extent of relief.—Where a fiduciary or quasi-fiduciary relation had existed, Courts of Equity will always place the burden of sustaining the transaction upon the party benefited by it, requiring him to show that it was of an unobjectionable character and one which it ought not to disturb. The issue directed by the Court was, whether the party in possession, under a decree made in a summary suit pursuant to the Act XIX of 1841, was legitimate. In such circumstances, held, that as the title of the plaintiffs depended upon the illegitimacy of the defendant, they were bound to prove, by sufficient general evidence their heirship, in order to throw upon the defendant the onus of proving his legitimacy. The evidence upon that issue being unsatisfactory, the case was remitted to India for further proof. KHAJAH MOHAMAD GOUHUR ALI KHAN v. ASHRUFOONISSA, 2 W.R. 13 P.C. =9 M.I.A. 492 and 504.

(24)—Suit for profits accruing from village—Proof—Presumptions — Practice. — Plaintiffs sued to recover a one-fourth share in the income of a village, which was purchased by defendant 1 in 1873, alleging that the parties descended from one grandfather, and that a partition between them took place eight years before suit. Defendant 1 claimed to have purchased the property in 1873 with his own funds and to have been exclusively in possession ever since. The lower appellate Court held, (1) that, as the partition took place in 1879 and the purchase in 1873, the property must be regarded as ancestral, inasmuch as defendant 1 had not shown that it was acquired out of his own funds ; and (2) that as defendant 1 was a kulkarni, he was bound to show affirmatively that he had exclusive enjoyment, and until he were to do this, the plaintiffs were not bound to show that they had received their share of the profits from 1879 to 1898 : Held, remanding the case that the lower appellate Court had relied too exclusively on presumptions and had placed the burden of proof on the wrong party. (25)—Suit for possession—Plea of adverse possession—Plaintiff bound to prove possession and dispossession — Property lying waste — Onus.—If a plea of adverse possession is set up in a suit for the recovery of possession of immoveable property, it is the plaintiff's duty to prove possession and dispossession within twelve years ; where, however, the property in dispute was up to a short time before suit waste and unoccupied, the plaintiff need not prove acts of possession within twelve years of suit, but only a prima facie title not extinguished by limitation in such a case. Waste land allowed to remain so by the proprietor cannot be held to be discontinuance of possession, and the onus is in such a case, shifted on to the defendant to prove when his possession became adverse. Defendant pleaded that no such advance had been made by the plaintiff on the authority of his father and that the parwana filed with the plaint was a forgery. Agreeing with the decision of the High Court on the evidence in the case, the Privy Council held that the onus of proving the alleged advance lay upon the plaintiff, that he failed to bring forward the available evidence notwithstanding the impeachment of the parwana as a forgery, that all the probabilities of the case were against the allegations of the plaintiff, and, that, in the absence of sufficient evidence to establish the plaint transaction, he could not be given a decree. Further, the plaintiff might have been misled and deceived by certain other persons who detained the money away for themselves, so that the money, if any, given by the plaintiff, never actually reached the third party to whom the defendant's father had ordered the payment to be made. Hira Lal accordingly sued Ganga Bakhsh and Keshab Deo, claiming a declaration that he was entitled to the other half of the money due on the hundi. Ganga Baksh set up a defence that the joint endorsement had been made fraudulently, and that he alone was really entitled to the whole of the money. Held that under the circumstances of the case, especially as Ganga Bakhsh had joined in endorsing the hundi over to Keshab Deo, it was for Ganga Bakhsh to prove affirmatively the fraud set up by him and not for Hira Lal to show that no fraud had been committed. (50)—Principal and agent—Concurrent findings of fact—Evidence as to liability to account.—A year after the execution of a deed of release by the principal exonerating an agent from liability to account and stating that there had been a settlement between them, the Agent signed an ikrarnama addressed to the principal, stating that there had not been a settlement of accounts, and that he was willing to account from the day of his appointment to date. The agent, subsequent to this, having resigned his appointment, instituted a suit for setting aside the ikrarnama, but that suit was dismissed. In a suit brought by the principal, the deed of release and its contents were proved to the satisfaction of both the Courts below, which dismissed the suit on that ground, although the ikrarnama appeared to them, in fact, to have been made. On appeal by the plaintiff, the contention was that the onus was on the defendant to explain his execution of the ikrarnama. Held, that, as it had been found by two Courts concurrently that the deed of release was valid, and that it necessarily followed from that finding that the ikrarnama, executed a year after the deed of release so far as it expressed the agent's willingness to account was false, the onus was as much upon the principal to explain his reception of the said ikrarnama as upon the agent to explain its execution. The question as to the burden of proof had therefore been rendered immaterial by the facts proved. On the materials before them, the Courts below had rightly decided in favour of the defendant. (59)— Execution of decree—Objection by person claiming title to property sought to be sold in execution—Suit by decree-holder to establish title of his judgment-debtor—Burden of proof.—One L B, the holder of a decree on a hypothecation-bond, sought to execute his decree by bringing to sale certain immoveable property of his judgment-debtor. Thereupon, one R.D., filed an objection based mainly on his (R.D's) possession of the property in question. The objector being, on enquiry, found to be in possession, his objection was allowed, and L.B, brought a suit to establish his right to execute his decree against the property. The Court of first instance and the lower appellate Court found that the ancestors of the judgment-debtors and R.D's mother were members of a joint Hindu family and that they about one hundred years ago had partitioned the property held jointly by them. Held, that, in respect of that portion of the property which the defendant had not shown to have belonged to the ancestor through whom he claimed, it was for the plaintiff to show that his judgment-debtor had been in possession for some period within 12 years preceding the suit. of the public use, to which the property has been devoted, and it is not essential to constitute a valid dedication that legal title should pass from the owner. Nor is it inconsistent with an effectual dedication that the owner should continue to make any and all uses of the land, which do not interfere with the uses for which it is dedicated: Held, in respect of land, which had not been expressly dedicated but was used by the public as a burning ground, that the circumstances of the case should that the owner made a dedication of the user of the property for the purposes of a burning ground, such dedication to remain in force only so long as the property continued to be used as a burning ground. When the sole use to which property had been dedicated becomes impossible of execution by reason of a statutory acquisition and compulsory use, for purposes inconsistent with the original dedication, it reverts to the dedicator or his representative. Although it is an essential element of a good dedication that it should be irrevocable, nevertheless when, after a valid dedication has been made, the use for which the property dedicated becomes impossible of execution or the object of the use wholly fails, there is an abandonment, in consequence of which the rights of the public therein fail and a reversion takes place, the dedication being taken to have spent its force when the use ceases. (1 C.W.N. 698=24 I.A. 177=25 C. 194, D.) Unlike the road-land which was acquired by the Collector in the above case, the burning ground in this case, treated as such, had a market-value, which had been actually assessed. Therefore, the person who was proved to be owner of the soil was entitled to the compensation assessed. The word ghat in s. 30 of the Bengal Municipal Act does not include a tract of land used as a burning ground. The sub-soil under a ghat does not vest in the Municipality under s. 30 of the Act; but the ghat itself does. The Legislature, by enacting s. 30, intended that such roads, etc., as are private property, or are maintained by Government or at the public expense should not vest in the Municipality. Canal.

(1)—Hajiwah Canal in Multan District—Rights of Excavators and Government.—The plaintiff instituted this suit against Government claiming proprietary right in the Hajiwah Canal in the District of Multan, which was supplied with water from the Sutlej river. The Canal was excavated by the plaintiffs' ancestors with the sanction of Government in the year 1861 at a cost of about nine lakhs of rupees. It passed through lands owned by persons not parties to this suit, whose consent plaintiffs' ancestors had obtained under agreement to supply them with water. In the settlement Records the Canal was entered as the property of the plaintiffs' father. The Government waste lands of over 60,000 acres, which were farmed by plaintiffs and others, were incapable of cultivation for want of water. The Government sanctioned in proprietary right a grant of this land to plaintiffs' father. Upon the death of plaintiffs' father disputes arose among his sons, and owing to such quarrel Government took over possession and management of the Canal. The Government denied the plaintiffs' right to the Canal outside the 60,000 acres grant and relied on the 8th clause of an agreement executed by the parties. The clause was as follows :—'The Canal dug by the grantee and known as the Hajiwah shall for the present remain under the management of the said grantee : Provided always that in consideration of the premises that the said grantor, his successor and assigns shall at all times hereafter, whenever he or they shall think necessary be entitled without the consent of, or permission from the said grantee, his heirs, legal representatives and assigns, to take into his or their own hands and control the management and distribution of the water of the said Canal without payment of any compensation whatsoever, and further to clear the said Canal and recover the cost of clearance and management by a canal-rate to be levied on the area irrigated. Held, that the ancestors of the plaintiffs acquired a proprietary interest in so much of the Government lands taken for the purpose of the Canal as was required for its construction and maintenance, and also a right to have the waters of the Sutlej river admitted into the Canal so long as the Canal was used for the purpose for which it was originally designed. The principles applicable to such cases are—"If a Cantonment.

(1)—Right of military authorities to quarter troops in houses belonging to private individuals in cantonments— Military Regulations.—The military authorities have no right to appropriate to their own uses houses the property of private individuals in cantonments, except, subject to the conditions prescribed by the Military Regulations, on the faith of which the houses were built or purchased. Held by the Appellate Court that, when a person was in the occupation of a house in cantonments, he could not be ejected without due notice. (2)—Contract by Cantonment Committee, suit for damages for breach of, maintainable against Committee as body corporate—Bombay Act III of 1867, s. 11.—This was a suit for damages for breaches of some conservancy contracts entered into by the plaintiff with the Cantonment Committee of Poona. The defendants took objection to the form of the suit, on the ground that the Poona Cantonment Committee of which they were members, not being a corporate body, could not be sued as such, but that the members ought to be impleaded defendants nominatim and individually. The District Judge, however, held that the plaintiff need not bring in the members of the Committee as parties nominatim that the suit was properly constituted, and gave a decree for the plaintiff. The High Court confirmed the decree concurring with the lower Court in holding that there was nothing wrong in the form of the suit as it was brought. The Committee was created by rules made under s. 11 of Bombay Act III of 1867. These rules, though not by express words, do, by implication, create the Committee a corporation for the purposes of the conservancy of the cantonment. When the Committee has entered into contracts in a corporate manner, it is not open to the Committee to deny such corporate character when sued for damages for breach of such contracts, and it is, therefore, open to the Committee to sue and be sued in its own name on such contracts. (4)—Grant of land for building purposes — Right of Government to eject grantee--Assessment of alluvial accretions-Jurisdiction of Civil Court. —Under the Military Regulations relating to grants of lands in cantonments, a grant cannot be resumed by the Government without a month's notice, and without payment of the value of buildings which may have been authorised to be erected. The Civil Courts have no jurisdiction to assess rent on alluvial accretions to lands granted in cantonments. PATTERSON v. THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL, 3 A. 689=A.W.N. 1881, 46.

(5)—Land within Municipal limits—Suit by Secretary of State—Refusal to pay ground-rent —Cause of action—Jurisdiction of Civil Court —Right of grantee to compensation on ejectment —Certain land situate within the limits of a cantonment was granted rent-free for building purposes by the military authorities, and, on its resumption by civil authorities, the ground rents on such land were assigned to the Municipality within whose limits the land was situated. On the refusal by the representative of the grantee to pay the ground-rent demanded by the Municipality, the Secretary of State for India in Council sued him in the Civil Court, for a declaration of his proprietary right to the land, for its assessment to ground-rent, and in the event of the refusal of the defendant to pay such rent when fixed, for possession of the land by ejectment of the defendant therefrom, and for mesne profits of the land. Held —(a) that the Municipal Committee were the plaintiff's agents in demanding ground-rent, and that the plaintiff had therefore a right to sue; (b) that the refusal of the defendant to pay ground-rent, or accept the lease or to quit the land, afforded a cause of action, implying as it did a denial of the plaintiff's title; (c) that plaintiff was entitled to claim reasonable compensation for the use and occupation of the land; (d) that the suit was one properly cognizable by the Civil Court, and that the plaintiff was entitled to the reliefs he sought; (e) but that in the event of the defendant being ejected, the plaintiff would pay him compensation for his buildings to be determined by an umpire. (6)—Resumption of, with buildings thereon—Notice—Payment of compensation—Land in Cantonment—Resumption — Government.—In 1862, E, the predecessor-in-title of the defendants, obtained from the Government the land in dispute, under a grant which was made on the terms of the General Order of the 31st July 1856. The General Order provided among other things: "Permission to occupy such ground in a Military Cantonment confers no proprietary right, it continues the property of State. It is resumable at the pleasure of Government, but in all practicable cases one month's notice of resumption will be given, and the value of the buildings which may have been erected thereon, as estimated by a commitee, will be paid to the owner." E erected a bungalow on the land and in 1874 he sold the bungalow and all his interest in the land to H, whose interest devolved at his death on his executors, the defendants. On the 19th October, 1903, a notice was given on behalf of the Bombay Government to the first defendant that he should on the 1st December, 1903 quit the possession of premises and deliver them to the Cantonment Magistrate at Poona: and that the Government was prepared to pay to him Rs. 15,500. The defendants having declined to comply with the notice, the Secretary of State for India in Council filed a suit to recover possession of the property from the defendants. The defendants in answer contended that one month's notice to the remaining two executors (defendants 2 and 3) was not given and that the value of the buildings had not been estimated or tendered. Held, (1) that the giving of notice was not a condition precedent, the provision, about it being nothing more than a statement of what will be done where practicable for the purpose of saving the occupant from such inconvenience as an immediate resumption might involve. That even if it be assumed that a notice was a condition precedent to the right of resumption, it was clear that three executors on their own showing were joint occupants and notice given to one of them satisfied the provision. That payment was not made a condition precedent to resumption, though no doubt the right to that payment would arise on resumption. SECRETARY OF STATE v. VAMANRAO, 7 Bom. L.R. 735=30 B. 137.

(7)—Cantonment land, alienation of—Native State—East India Company—Rights of alienation, and management and control of the same in the absence of any treaty.—The Hyderabad Subsidiary Force, which had its headquarters in the Secunderabad Cantonment, was a force in the employment of the East India Company, and commanded by the Company's Officers, but maintained, by agreement, in Hyderabad Territory for the protection of the Nizam. It appears that there never was in existence any treaty prescribing the limits of the powers of the Nizam's officers on the one hand, and the Military Commander commanding the Hyderabad subsidiary force on the other, with respect to the management, control, and dispossession of the Cantonment and the land comprised in it. When the Nizam's Government admitted a British Force within its territory, and allotted it to the Secunderabad Cantonment as its Headquarters, it, no doubt, by necessary implication, conveyed to the military authority all powers of jurisdiction, control, and management incident to maintaining the efficiency and the discipline of the troops, and the peace and good order and convenient use of the Cantonment. But it would be going a long way beyond this to hold that the officer commanding the troops could be held empowered to alienate, in perpetuity land forming part of the Cantonment, and undoubtedly Hyderabad territory for a purpose wholly unconnected with military requirements. (8)—Cantonment, land in—Presumption in respect of such land—Adverse possession—Limitation.—In the beginning of the 19th century, one Lieutenant Young, having built a house to quarter his regiment, also appropriated a piece of land adjoining the same, situated within Cantonment limits and subject to Cantonment rules until 1874, when it was made over by the Military authorities to the Civil authorities. Sixty years had not elapsed since the acquisition of the land by the defendant. Held that the suit was not barred by limitation. A party who builds a house in Cantonments must be taken to have derived his title to occupy the land from the Military authorities, and their power to make a grant of it can only be co-extensive with their own tenure of the property and no assignment by them can subsist beyond the period the land might remain subject to Cantonment regulations. circumstances of the case, strong probability that the owner was duly compensated along with other proprietors for the change in his position as owner to that of licensee; that permission to build bungalows, though frequently given, did not carry with it any short of proprietary right, and the buildings were liable to expropriation at a price to be fixed by the authorities; that, in the circumstances, mere possession or occupation of the bungalow on the site raised no presumption that the appellants or their predecessors in title were owners in fee; that the appellants were mere licensees and the land in question had been lawfully resumed by Government. The only persons precluded from doing so are those not registered as military bazaarmen at the time the debts were contracted. Also, unless the defendant is amenable to the articles of war as contemplated by s. 4 of Act III of 1859, in which case he can only be sued in the Court of the Cantonment Magistrate, he may also be sued in the Court of the Subordinate Judge, provided the cause of action arose within his jurisdiction. The obligation imposed by law on common carriers has nothing to do with contract in its origin. It is duly cast upon common carriers by reason of their exercising a public employment for reward. The Act of 1872 does not profess to be a complete Code dealing with the law relating to contracts. It only purports to define and amend certain parts of that law. The only section in the Act in which bailment, for the purpose of carriage, is mentioned in s. 158, which, however, deals only with gratuitous bailments. At the time of the passing of the Act of 1872, there was in force a statute relating to common carriers, which, in connection with the Common Law of Enland, formed a complete Code. Had it been intended to codify the law of common carriers by the Act of 1872, the more usual course would have been to have repealed the Act of 1865 and to re-enact its provisions, with necessary modifications. As the Act of 1865 is not "expressly repealed" by the Act of 1872, nothing in the Act of 1872 is to "effect" its provisions. [F., 14 Bur. L.R. 77; R., 11 Bom. Carriers—continued.

That the duties and liabilities of a common carrier are governed in India by the principles of English common law on that subject, however introduced, has been recognised by the Indian Legislature in the Carriers' Act, 1865, an Act framed on the lines of the English Carriers' Act of 1830 (11 Geo. IV and 1 Will. IV, Ch. 68). His responsibility does not originate in contract, but is cast upon him by reason of his exercising this public employment for reward. His liability as an insurer is an incident of the contract between him and the owner, not inconsistent with the provisions of the Contract Act; and the law of carriers, partly written and partly unwritten, remained as before the Act. The combined effect of ss. 6 and 8 of the Act of 1865, is that, in respect of property not of the description contained in the schedule, common carriers may limit their liability by special contract, but not so as to get rid of liability for negligence. (10 C. 166, Appr.; 3 B. 109, Diss.) [R., 32 M. 95=4 M. L.T. 110=18 M.L.J. 497.] The Railway Act, 1890, reduce the responsibility of carriers by Railway to that of a bailee, under s. 152, Act IX of 1872, but this did not affect the law relating to common carriers, as such, laying down their liability, as insurers, on non-delivery. (6)—Goods of a dangerous nature—Duty of persons sending—Notice—Act XVIII of 1854, s. 15—Negligence—Act XIII of 1855—Suit for compensation for destruction of life.—A person, who sends, for conveyance by rail, an article which he knows to be of a dangerous and explosive nature, is bound, both on the general principles of law, and by the special provisions of the Railway Act XVIII of 1854, to give notice of its contents to the Company's servants. He is also bound to take all reasonable precautions to preclude the risk of accident. Failure to do either of these things will render him liable for the consequences, whether they occur in a manner he could have contemplated or not. (7)—Contract between Railway Company and passengers—Obligation for safe carriage—Due care—Accident—Negligence—Burden of proof—Ignorance of law as defence—Damages—Costs of suit.—An obligation to take due care, i.e., a high degree of care, attaches to carriers, and it casts on them the duty of exercising all vigilance to see that whatever is required for the safe conveyance of their passengers is in fit and proper order. Although they are not insurers against all defects, they are insurers against all defects, which care and skill can guard against. If causes owing to which loss of life and damage had resulted to the passenger were causes which could have been prevented from becoming effective, by care and skill on the part of the Railway Company, then, that care and skill the Company were bound to exercise. The burden of proving that they exercised that care and skill lies upon them. The maxim that every man must be supposed to know the law is limited to the determination of the civil or criminal liability of the person whose knowledge is in question, and cannot be legitimately made use of in a case where the parties are entirely different and distinct from him. In suits for damages against carriers for loss of life occasioned by their negligence, distinct evidence of the loss sustained or benefit expected is not necessary. The Court must award a fair amount, having regard to all the circumstances of the case. (16 B. 254, F.) In such cases, costs should be allowed on such a scale as not to exhaust the damages awarded. And if no such demand was made, the carrier would be liable for the loss of, or injury to, the goods, although the increased charge was not paid. The words of the English Act, 11 Geo. IV and 1 Wm. IV, c. 68, ss. 1 and 17 and 18, Vic, C. 31, s. 7 and the words in Act IV of 1879, s. 11 (Railways) are practically the same so far as this matter is concerned. (10)—Carrier by sea.—A carrier by sea is obliged to make an actual delivery of goods carried by him to the consignee, but such prima facie obligation may be affected by the custom of the port where the goods are to be delivered. Neither by the custom of the port of Bombay, nor by the provisions of the Customs Act, is the master of a ship bound to wait 15 days before commencing to land his cargo, but within a reasonable time after the arrival of his ship—48 hours in the case of a sailing vessel, and somewhat less in case of a steamer—he is at liberty to land goods if the consignee has not then sent boats for them ; and such landing is not unlawful, or a breach of contract as carrier, on the part of the master. The landing of goods under the above circumstances, and setting them apart for the consignee, do not constitute a delivery of them to the consignee ; but such goods, after being so landed, continue in the possession of the master as carrier. The defendant received goods on board his steamer under a bill of lading which exempted him from liability for loss occasioned by the act of God, the Queen's enemies, fire and all and every other dangers and accidents of the seas, rivers, and navigation of whatsoever nature or kind, and lawfully landed them on the Custom House Bunder at Bombay, where they were accidentally burned before they were delivered to the consignee. Held that he was protected by the above exception in the bill of lading. (11)—Proprietor of dak carriages—No common carrier—Ordinary care—Bailee for hire.—The term "common carrier" as understood in the English Law does not include a person carrying on the business of dak-carriages. Such a person should exercise only reasonable and ordinary care in respect of baggage entrusted to him ; but he is not responsible for any loss which may not arise from the negligence or default of himself or his servants. He is not bound to insure the safe conveyance of the baggage against all risk save the act of God or the Queen's enemies. He is to be regarded as a bailee for hire, and the fact that he does not deliver the baggage at the end of the journey should be accepted as prima facie proof that the loss has been occasioned by negligence for which he is responsible, and, consequently, the onus of proof lies on him that reasonable care was exercised by him. (12)—Act XIV of 1866—Government Bullock Train—Government, ordinary bailee for hire, not common carrier.—Goods conveyed by the Government Bullock Train or not entrusted to the post office for conveyance within the meaning of Act XIV of 1866. In respect of the Government Bullock Train, Government must be regarded as an ordinary bailee for hire, and not as a common carrier. As such bailee, apart from any special condition limiting its liability, it is bound to take ordinary care of goods entrusted to it for conveyance, and if goods are stolen through the negligence of its servants, it is liable to make good the loss to the consignor. But it may, as any other bailee for hire, limit its liability by conditions, provided those conditions are not repugnant to public policy or positive law. A condition that it will not be responsible for loss occasioned by the negligence of its servants is certainly not repugnant to positive law, nor a condition repugnant to public policy. (15)—Nature of obligation of common carriers—Origin of the liability—Implied agreements by carrier by water—Burma Laws Act (XIII of 1898), s. 13—Law administered by Calcutta High Court in civil case to be administered by Burma Courts—Contract Act.—The obligation imposed by Law on Common Carriers has nothing to do with contract in its origin, but it is a duty cast upon common carriers by reason of their exercising a public employment for reward, and a breach of such duty is a breach of the Law and for this breach an action lies, founded on the Common Law, which action wants not the aid of a contract to support it. Held, that the Common Law liability of a carrier in the position of the defendant rests on the same foundation as the liability of a common carrier, Held that a carrier by water impliedly engages that his vessel shall be water tight. Held, also that, under sub-s. baskets of onions were shipped from Madras to Moulmein by the B.I.S.N. Co. They travelled to Rangoon by a certain steamship and were there transhipped to two other steamships and conveyed to Moulmein in three different voyages. Three of the consignees of these onions were A, E, and P, and to them were consigned 100, 100 and 150 baskets respectively. A pleaded that he only received 70 baskets, and so he sued the Company for short delivery of 30 baskets. Under similar circumstances, E and P respectively sued the Company for short delivery of 25 and 54 baskets. The Company denied their liability by reason of the clauses of their bills of lading, and they especially relied on the endorsement on the bills; "Onion bags and baskets frail. Carried at shippers' risk. Steamer not responsible for condition or outturn of contents." On the merits of the case, they pleaded that the 2,035 baskets were shipped to 17 consignees in Moulmein and arrived in Rangoon on the 21st July (a Sunday, when no transhipment is done), and that the consignment was re-shipped to Moulmein as per account stated by them. The Company stated that, by order of the Municipality, 176 baskets and 11 bags, containing 50 baskets, were destroyed in Moulmein, owing to the deterioration of their contents and that, after delivery, 32 baskets still remained in the godown, and they urged that, owing to the baskets being frail and their contents having become bad and the consequent obliteration and destruction of all marks, it was impossible to say to whom any portion of the 258 baskets were consigned. The plaintiffs A, E, and P were invited to bear a rateable porportion of the loss. The plaintiffs had also been offered a portion of the 32 baskets in the godown, which they refused to accept, with the result that, on the 30th August, the whole 32 baskets were destroyed as rotten. These baskets bore no marks. The plaintiffs did not urge that the onions had been damaged owing to the negligence of the defendant Company, but contended that the defendant Company had to show what had become of each cargo consigned to them. The Company, however, did account for the whole 2,035 baskets consigned to them. Held that, having regard to the perishable nature of the goods, the frail packing, and the terms on which the Company undertook to carry, in the absence of any proof of negligence on the part of the carriers the Company could not be held liable for all the baskets destroyed by order of the Municipality and that the loss should fall on the owners of the goods; and that with respect to the baskets bearing no marks and, hence, undelivered, the several owners of the consignments became tenants in common of the baskets in proportion to the quantities which should have been delivered to them respectively, and the plaintiffs, who refused to take shares though offered, could not hold the defendant Company responsible. (17)—Liability of, for negligence and damage to goods—Bill of lading—Provision as to exemption from liability, effect of.—The goods (rice bags) belonging to the plaintiff were shipped in a steamer belonging to the defendant Company, for delivery to the plaintiff's agent at another port, and, on arrival at that port, were placed by the Company on the foreshore, where, however, they were destroyed under the orders of the Municipal authorities, on the ground that they had become damaged by rain and unfit for consumption. The condition in the bill of lading ran thus:—"In all cases and under all circumstances, the liability of the Company shall absolutely cease, when the goods are free of ship's tackle, and, thereupon, the goods shall be, for all purposes and in every respect, at the risk of the shipper or consignee." In a suit by the plaintiff for recovery of the value of the rice so damaged. Held—Per Subrahmania Aiyar, J.—The Company, in landing the goods without precautions to prevent damage to them, failed to take the same care of the plaintiff's goods as a prudent person would, in similar circumstances, have taken of like goods of his own, and the damage was, therefore, the result of the Company's negligence. The condition in the bill of lading puts an end to the Company's liability as carriers, when the goods leave the ship's tackle, but constitutes their subsequent possession, until delivery, as that of bailees. For, if it were otherwise, the bill of lading might be construed so as to exempt the Company even from wilful misconduct on the part of the Company's servants. (22 B. 184, R.) Per Miller, J. (contra).—The Company are amply protected, against all responsibility, by terms of the bill of lading and are, therefore, not liable for damages. The general exception of negligence will apply to all stages of the transaction covered by the contract, and is not restricted to that stage, during which the goods are actually in the ship (13 B. 571, 10 C. 486, Compd.) but if there is a special clause dealing with a particular stage of the transaction, that must be applied, to the exclusion of the general exception (22 B. 184, Compd.) and it has been frequently held that an exception against negligence is valid if clearly expressed. (18)—Liability of, for negligence and damage to goods—Bill of lading—Provision as to exemption from liability, effect of—English, American and Indian Law—Contraction against liability—Public policy—Contract Act, ss. 23 and 151.—The goods (rice bags) belonging to the plaintiff were shipped in a steamer belonging to the defendant company, for delivery to the plaintiff's agent at another port, and on arrival at that port, were placed by the company on the foreshore, where, however, they were destroyed under the orders of the Municipal authorities, on the ground that they had become damaged by rain and unfit for consumption. The condition in the bill of lading ran thus:—"In all cases and under all circumstances, the liability of the company shall absolutely cease, when the goods are free of ship's tackle, and, thereupon, the goods shall be, for all purposes and in every respect, at the risk of the shipper or consignee." In a suit by the plaintiff for recovery of the value of the rice so damaged. Held, per White, C.J., and Sankaran Nair, J.—The contract was not terminated by the deposit of the goods on the foreshore, and it was for the defendants to show that the plaintiff's goods were ready for delivery at the time they were damaged and not for plaintiffs to show they were not ready; and as there is no evidence to show that the bags were ever ready for delivery by being separated from the rest, the defendants were negligent. Per Wallis, J.—The plaintiff's claim is not so much for non-delivery of the bags, as for failure to deliver them in good order and condition, and the plaintiffs failed to prove that the condition of the bags, when put at their disposal, justified them in refusing to take delivery. Held also, per White, C.J., and Sankaran Nair, J. (Wallis, J., contra).—A ship-owner is not exemped from liability for negligence, unless the contract which exempts him is both clear and express; and as the contract in this case, though clear, is not express, the defendants are not protected by their bill of lading (b). Per White, C.J., and Wallis, J.—The law of the United States of America, forbids a carrier to exempt himself by contract from liability for negligence, while the law of England does not. On a question of this character the Courts in India ought to follow the law of England. (10 C. 489, 28 M. 400, R.) Per Sankaran Nair, J.—The question of liability is not concluded by authority in India. A rule of English Common Law ought not to be followed, when it is opposed to the principles followed and acted upon by the Indian Legislature. A contract exempting a ship-owner from liability for the negligence of himself or his servants in not taking the care required by s. 151, Contract Act, is contrary to public policy and, therefore, void under s. 23 of that Act. Such an exemption clause is clearly against the interests of the mercantile community and not necessary in the interest of the ship-owners. Where a consignor failed to declare the value and description of the goods as required under the provisions of the Carriers Act and the Railways Act, and sued the steamer company for damages for loss of the goods so carried partly by steamer and partly by rail, held that, so far as the journey was by steamer, the steamer company is entitled to claim, as regards the act of its agents and servants, the protection afforded by the provisions of the Carriers Act, and so far as the journey was by rail, it is similarly entitled to claim the protection afforded by the Railways Act. (21)—Liability of carriers by sea—Whether they are common carriers—Law applicable to such carriers contracting at Calcutta—Lanaing goods during rain—Negligence—Misfeasance.—Plaintiff's agents, at Calcutta, shipped to the plaintiff at Madras, as consignee, certain goods in a steamship of the defendant company. On arrival at Madras, the goods were delivered to plaintiff in rain and part of them damaged by wet. This suit was instituted for damages from the defendants for negligence and misfeasance. On behalf of the plaintiff, it was contended that defendants were not common carriers and could not contract themselves out of their liability as bailees and that, even if they were common carriers, they were not protected by the protection clause in the bill of lading as their act was one of misfeasance and not mere negligence. The Chief Judge of the Small Cause Court dismissed the suit holding that the defendants were protected by the above clause, but stated a case for the opinion of the High Court on the question, "whether, under the bill of lading, the defendants were liable to the plaintiff." Held, that defendants were common carriers and, as the contract was made at Calcutta, the lex loci contractus, viz., the law of England, applied to them, but as the acts of the defendants' servants in landing goods in rain amounted only to negligence, they were sufficiently protected by the provision in the bill of lading. A common carrier therefore in India is subject to two distinct classes of liability, the one for the losses for which he is liable as an insurer, the other for losses for which he is liable under his obligation to carry safely. Speaking generally the first of these are insurable risks from which the element of default is absent, the second are risks of conveyance in which that element is present. The Carriers Act of 1865 has in some degree modified this position. The effect of ss. 6, 8 and 9 of the Carriers Act of 1865 is that the liability of a common carrier for the loss of goods, not being of the description contained in the schedule to the Act may be limited by special contract signed by the owner, save where such loss shall have arisen from the negligence of criminal act of the carrier or any of his agents or servants. The Ganges Manufacturing Co., Ltd., had entered into an agreement with a number of Steamer Companies, the defendant carrying Company amongst them, to have all their jute carried from certain ports by one or other of the Steamer Companies for a term of 5 years. Cl. 10 of the agreement provided that the "Jute Company undertakes to hold the Steamer Companies harmless and indemnified from and against all claims which can be insured against and covered by an ordinary F.P.A. Policy, that is to say, against claim for actual or constructive total loss only of the goods insured, and not against claims for partial loss and damage unless the vessel be stranded, sunk or burnt and the Steamer Companies agree that they shall have no right to claim on the cargo for general average" a consignment of 1,000 bales of jute was shipped by one G.R. Chakravarthy on the defendants Company's flat "Lemro" for delivery at the Jute Company's Mill, the

Bill of leading being endorsed to the said Jute Company, it being stated on the back thereof, amongst other conditions, that "the Company will not be liable for the loss of or damage to any property delivered to them to be carried, unless such loss or damage shall have arisen from the negligence or criminal act of their servants or agents." Held, on a construction of the agreement, that the exemption of cl. 10 did not extend to loss arising from the negligence or criminal acts of the carrying company. It has been the policy of the English Courts, in dealing with exemption clauses to recognise the distinction between the insurance risks and the carrying risks of a common carrier, and to construe them as not extending to carrying risks in the absence of clear words to that effect. In India where there is a statutory prohibition against exempting a carrier from loss arising from negligence or criminal acts, there is perhaps an even stronger reason for adopting this canon of construction, at any rate, within the limits implied by this prohibition. The above rule is not limited in its application to bills of lading. The flat carrying jute having caught fire so that it had to be scuttled, under s. 9 of the Carriers Act, it was held (in the absence of evidence to the contrary), that the loss was due to the negligence or criminal act of the carrying company of its agents or servants. A policy of insurance in respect of the lost jute issued by plaintiff, Insurance Company, contained a stipulation: "warranted no recourse against carriers." Held—that the stipulation in the policy of insurance did not amount to a relinquishment by the Insurance Company in respect of risks not exempted. Claims in respect of losses which had arisen from the negligence of the carrying company, its agents or servants, were therefore not relinquished under the clause. The Insurance Company in the present case claiming against the carrying company by way of subrogation and not of assignment had no right to sue in their own name, and the suit could only be brought in the name of the Jute Company. Held that substantially the present suit was by the Jute Company to recover damages from the carrying company, and any matter that could be pleaded against the Jute Company would be an effective answer, though in truth the purpose of the suit was to benefit the Insurance Company. Plaintiffs ought to have proved the amount of damages at the hearing; but it would not in the circumstances be right to visit their default in this regard with the penalty of a dismissal of the suit. He sued to recover from the Tramway Company damages for the injury, alleging that the foot-board was loose and not properly fixed and the Company was therefore liable for negligence. Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover damages, as he himself was negligent in trying to get into a car while in motion. If a passenger chooses to attempt to enter or leave a moving car, he does so at his own risk. It is not what a prudent or a reasonable man should or would do, and if he does it and sustains injury while in the act of doing so, it would be an accident or a misfortune, for which the Company could in no event be held liable. The first defendant sold the cargoes to a firm of millers, and obtained delivery of the paddy from the 2nd defendant Company without producing the mate's receipts which its agents had given for the paddy. The plaintiffs sued the 2nd defendant for damages to the amount of the debt due from the first defendant: Held, that the 2nd defendant Company was not liable, and the document relied on in the suit was not a mate's receipt. Mate's receipts are not bills of lading, though they are sometimes referred to as such. A bill of lading is a mercantile document in use in connection with carriage of goods in a seagoing vessel. To no document given by an officer of an inland waters carrier, could the term and the law relating to mate's receipts as known to mercantile law be properly applied. Where an instrument is by the custom of trade transferable like cash by delivery and is capable of being sued on by the person holding it pro-tempore, it is entitled to the name of a negotiable instrument, and the property in it passes to a bona fide transferee for value. The 2nd defendant Company's receipt in this case could not be held to fulfil these conditions: Held, further, that the Rate Circular and its wording did not put the Company under any legal obligation or duty to any one except the persons with whom it contracted, and that consequently the plaintiffs had no right of action against it. Held, also that, even if the plaintiffs had given notice of their claim to the paddy, the so-called mate's receipt not being a negotiable instrument, the Company would not have been bound to deliver them. (4)—Caste—Account books—Rights of members to inspect them fully and freely—Questions going to root should be raised in pleadings—Question of jurisdiction can be raised by defendant at the earliest opportunity—Practice.—The right to inspect account books kept in connection with caste funds and properties is not in any sense a caste privilege. It is a legal right. It is preliminary to a right to assert a claim to property, and is incidental to the right to recover property which may be lost to the caste by misuse or misappropriation. A suit brought by plaintiffs on behalf of themselves and others as members of the Cutchi Memon Jamat, to have full and free inspection of the books of account kept by the defendants in their capacity as trustees of caste funds and properties, is maintainable in Civil Courts. It is the assertion of a pure legal right, and it in no way affects the "internal autonomy of the caste" or "its social relations." There is no analogy whatever between a Corporation as known to English Law and an Indian caste. The principles governing the rights of members of caste to inspection of accounts of caste properties must be governed by considerations very different from those governing the rights of members of Corporation seeking inspection of the documents of such Corporation. Questions which go to the very root of a suit ought as a rule to be raised in the pleadings. A defendant can be permitted to raise a question of jurisdiction, not specifically pleaded, only if he does so at the earliest possible opportunity; he ought not, in any event, to be allowed to raise it after the plaintiff has closed his case. live with him as his wife. This principle applies to the Mussalman Kharwa community of Broach. BAI JINA v. JINA KALIA, 9 Bom. L. R. 451=31 B. 366.

(6)—Caste matters—Cognizance by Court—Principles of English law not applicable to castes—Autonomy of caste—When Court will interfere in caste matters—Trustee can only claim inspection of documents relating to trust.—A person, who is a trustee of a caste fund, has no legal claim to a roving inspection of all caste documents, on the ground that some of such documents may possibly be found to contain entries bearing upon questions of expenditure having some connection with the trust. A right to inspection of documents belonging to a caste, existing in any person by virtue of his being a member of the caste, cannot be evolved by a reference to English law. A Court will not grant a decree for the enforcement of a privilege granted by a caste, because such a privilege may be taken away by the caste at any time and the decree may be rendered nugatory. The proper tribunal in such cases is the caste itself and not a Civil Court. "Autonomy of a caste" must at least mean that, where rights to property are not involved, all matters of internal management must be left to the decision of the caste. Courts will not interfere where the rules of the caste make special provision of the question in dispute. Where there is a question in dispute between the caste and a section of the caste, it is outside the jurisdiction of the Court. The Hindu caste is a unique aggregation so wholly unknown to the English law that English decisions concerning English corporations and partnerships tend rather to confusion than to guidance upon matters relating to caste. A Hindu caste may have points of resemblance to English Corporations and partnerships, but its points of difference appear more numerous and radical. Where according to well-established principles certain questions have been removed from the jurisdiction of the Court, they cannot be brought within the jurisdiction, on the plea that the Court has inherent jurisdiction to do what justice requires for the parties before it. That plea cannot be urged in order to extend the jurisdiction of the Court, but to meet the objection often raised that, in matters within the jurisdiction, the Court can only exercise such powers as are expressly given by the Legislature and no others. To give rise to a cause of action for refusing the inspection of documents, which a person has right to inspect, it must be established that an express demand was addressed to the proper quarter and was distinctly refused, or, atleast, that the other party showed by his conduct that he was determined not to do what was required. (1)—Meaning of—Act VIII of 1859, Civ. Pro. Code, s. 2.—Cause of action, the term, to be construed with reference to the substance rather than to the form of action. KRISHNA BEHARI ROY v. BUNWARI LALL ROY 1 C. 144, P.C.=25 W.R. 1=3 Sar. 555=2 I.A. 283. [F., 11 C. 301=12 I.A. 23, P.C.; D., 15 M. 111; R., 21 M. 91, 13 M.L.J. 448=27 M. 760.]

(2)—Meaning of.—Cause of action is the entire set of facts which give rise to an enforceable claim. It comprises every fact, which a plaintiff must, if traversed, prove in order to obtain judgment. It has no relation whatsoever to the defence, which may be set up by the defendant, nor does it depend upon the character of the relief prayed for by the plaintiff. DULICHAND CHAUDHRI v. LALLAH KURMI, 1 N.L.R. 4. (16 C. 98=15 I.A. 156, P. C., F.) [Obs., 3 N.L.R. 94.]

(3)—Meaning of.—Cause of action means that bundle of essential facts which it is necessary for the plaintiff to prove before he can succeed in the case. MUSA YAKUB v. MANILAL AJITRAI, 7 Bom. L.R. 20=29 B. 368. [R., 30 A. 525, P.C.]

(4)—What constitute.—A cause of action is every fact which a plaintiff must prove to support his case. The title on which the plaintiff sues is only one of several ingredients in the cause of action; the term includes the infringement of plaintiff's right, together with the means employed for that purpose. The right, by itself, furnishes no cause of action. It is the rights combined with all the particulars that go to make the infringements which constitute the cause of action. RAM PRASAD v. S. M. SACHI DASSI, 6 C.W.N. 683. (16 A. 165, 14 C. 681, 7 M.H.C. 290, 11 M. 106, 24 C. 831; R., 29 C. 257, D.,) [R., 28 P.R. 1907=93 P.L.R. 1908=140 P.W.R. 1907.]

(5)—What it consists of.—A cause of action consists of the circumstances and facts, which are alleged by the plaintiff to exist, and which if proved, will entitle him to the relief, or to some part of the relief prayed for, and is to be sought for within the four corners of the plaint. NONOO SINGH MONDA v. ANAND SINGH MONDA, 12 C. 291. (8 C. 819, F.)

(6)—Meaning of the term "relief"—Cause of action.—"Relief" means the remedy which a Court of Justice may afford in relation to some actual or apprehended wrong or injury. "Relief" is not synonymous with "cause of action" which includes all the reliefs covered by the facts, on the strength of which a plaintiff comes into Court. (Stuart, C.J.) SARSUTI v. KUNJ BEHARI LAL, 5 A. 345, F.B. [R., 27 B. 379.]

(7)—Ss. 26 and 17, Civ. Pro. Code, 1882—Cause of action, meaning of—Joinder of plaintiffs—S. 31 (b).—The expression "cause of action" is only defined indirectly for the purposes of s. 17, Civ. Pro. Code, and so far as that section goes, it is used in a restricted as well as in some respects in an elastic sense. HARMONI DASSI v. HARI CHURN CHOWDHRY, 22 C. 833.

(8)—Meaning of—Joint suit by reversioners—Place of suing.—When immoveable properties are situate in several districts, a suit regarding the whole can be brought in any one of the districts. It is legal on the part of reversioners to bring a joint suit for the possession of the properties on the death of the widow, as the right, title and property of the plaintiffs, though divisible, were undivided. Even supposing that the term "cause of action" means the facts constituting the infringement of a right, and not the right itself, if the wrongful act by which several rights were infringed be the same, a joint suit is not unsustainable. A suit for the possession of a house which could not, owing to the widow's existence, be included in the previous declaratory suit by the reversioner to set aside her alienations, was held not barred under s. 43, of the old Code (O. II, r. 2), Civ. Pro. Code. ASA SINGH v. INDAR SINGH, 91 P.R. 1898. (14 C. 661, F.) [Cited, 38 P.R. 1903=87 P.L.R. 1903.]

(9)—Definition of.—Cause of action held to mean every fact which it is material to be proved to enable the plaintiff to succeed. Every thing, which, if not proved, gives the defendant an immediate right to judgment, must be part of the cause of action. DEEP NARAIN SINGH v. DIETERT, 31 C. 274=3 C.W.N. 207.

(10)—Definition of.—The expression "cause of action" means the bundle of facts, which it is necessary for the plaintiff to prove before he can succeed in his suit. It does not include irrelevant or immaterial facts, but embraces material facts without which the plaintiff must fail. MOTILAL v. SURAJMAL, 6 Bom. L.R. 1038=30 B 167. [Not F., 9 Bom. (14)—Its relation to defence and relief prayed for—Distinct causes of action.—The cause of action has no relation whatever to the defence which may be set up by the defendant, nor does it depend upon the character of the relief prayed for by the plaintiff. It refers entirely to the grounds set forth in the plaint as the cause of action, or, in other words, to the media upon which the plaintiff asks the Court to arrive at a conclusion in his favour. [R., 18 A. 131=A.W.N. 1895, 2, 18 A. 432, 21 M. 153 =8 M.L.J. 92, 139 P.L.R. 1901, 25 M. 736, 1 N.L.R. 4, 8 O.C. 389, 3 L.B.R. 56, 57 P.R. 1907=66 P.W.R. 1907, F.B., 28 P.R. 1907= 93 P.L.R. 1908.] Where the ground of action in an earlier suit is an alleged intention on the part of the widow to affect the estate to which the plaintiffs had a reversionary right, by selling it or by affecting it with mortgages, and the cause of action to set forth in the subsequent suit is not mere matter of intention, and it does not refer to either sale or mortgage, but consists in an allegation that the widow has in point of fact made a de præsenti gift of the whole interest to a third party, that of itself is a good cause of action which did not and could not arise until the deed of gift was executed. The two grounds of action are different. A cause of action which did not exist at the time when the previous action was dismissed cannot be regarded as other than a new cause of action subsequently arising. CHAND KOER v. (16)—Absence of cause of action—Dismissal of claim—Declaratory decree—Conditions under which such decree will be passed.—Whenever in the progress of a cause, it appears that no cause of action has accrued to the plaintiff, his claim must be dismissed. The defendants failed to cut the bund on the fixed dates in 1309 and 1310, and the plaintiff brought a suit for damages for the loss of his crop of those years owing to the wrongful omission on the part of the defendants. Held, that the wrongful omission afforded a sufficient cause of action to the plaintiff, and in order to entitle him to recover damages, it was not essential that, in each year, the plaintiff should have essayed to cut the bund and should have been prevented from doing so. (26)—Secretary of State — Suit against — Plaint.—In a suit for the restoration of property, brought against the Secretary of State, the plaintiff's principal allegations were that the Magistrate attached some property belonging to him as the property of his brother, and that, when the plaintiff objected to the attachment, he refused to release it. No action by the Secretary of State, or by any person for whose actions he could be deemed responsible, was referred to or suggested in the plaint. Held that the plaint disclosed no cause of action against the Secretary of State, and that the suit was not maintainable. (28)—Suit for declaration of under-proprietary right—Plaintiff's being recorded as an occupancy-tenant—Decree for enhancement of rent.—Plaintiff sued for a declaration that he was an under-proprietor in the land in suit. Some thirty years before the present suit plaintiff's father had been served with a notice of ejectment. He resisted the notice on the ground that he was an under-proprietor and the notice was cancelled. He continued to hold on the same terms until the last settlement, when he applied to be recorded as an under proprietor; but the Settlement Officer declined to record him as such, holding that he had no power to determine that any one was an under-proprietor but, finding the plaintiff to be more than a tenant-at-will, recorded him as an occupancy-tenant. Later on, in 1900, the Talukhdar sued the plaintiff, and succeeded in getting a decree, for enhancement of rent. Plaintiff, in consequence, brought the present suit for declaration that he was an under proprietor; the suit was more than six years from the date of the plaintiff's being recorded in the settlement as an occupancy-tenant, but within six years from the date of the judgment enhancing the rent. Held, that the suit was not barred by time; the Settlement Officer having had no power to determine titles, the plaintiffs being recorded as an occupancy-tenant gave the latter no cause of action to establish his title. He had a good cause of action only when the decree for enhancement, treating him as an occupancy-tenant, was passed; the present suit being within six years from such judgment, was in time. (30)—Plaint—Hypothecation —Sale— Mortgage.—The plaintiff alleged that certain property was the hereditary property of himself and his brother N; that it had been settled by an award that if the plaintiff or N, desired to mortgage or sell their respective shares, they should, in the first instance, mortgage or sell to one another, and if one party declined to take in mortgage or purchase, then the other should be at liberty to alienate elsewhere; that N, had, in disregard to the provisions of the award, executed a bond in favour of R, in which he had hypothecated the property and stipulated that the debt should only be recoverable from the property hypothecated; that N, had confessed judgment in a suit brought against him by R, on the bond, and had allowed a decree to be passed against the property; and that, as the bond had the effect of a deed of sale, and had been executed with an intent to defraud him, he sued to obtain possession of the property and a declaration of his title thereto as purchaser. The lower Courts decreed the plaintiff's claim. R., in special appeal pleaded that the plaintiff had no cause of auction the property not having been sold. Held, (Pearson and Spankie, JJ.) that the mere hypothecation of the property did not give the plaintiff a title to it as purchaser, and that the suit, as brought, must be dismissed. (38)—Sale in auction—Suit pending—Simultaneous suits for declaration of invalidity of sale and for possession.—Certain properties were brought to sale in execution of an ex-parte decree. Before this decree could be set aside and an order to stay execution could reach the sheriff, the properties were sold under the circumstances, it was held not illegal to bring two simultaneous suits, one for a declaration that the Court-sale was void and the other for possession of the properties in question, though the cause of action may be the same as one suit could not be said to have priority over the other. (1 A. 650, A.W.N. 1888, 147, F.; 9 M. 279, Not F.) Held also, that the onus of proving, that the plaintiff was a minor at the date of the ex-parte decree, was on the plaintiff, and that the plaintiff failed to do so. A Court-sale, defective not on account of irregularities in publishing or conducting it, but on account of the Court not having any jurisdiction and such other defects as make the sale void ab initio, is a nullity. A sale in auction, not complying with the necessary formalities, is de facto void. A plaintiff can, in a suit for partition, ask for a share of the share to which a third person, whose heir the plaintiff is, would be entitled, if he were alive. The date of the cause of action in a suit for partition is fixed arbitrarily, as the right to partition is a continuing right, enforceable at any time when joint enjoyment is found to be irksome. The value of the first claim formed the basis on which the plaint was stamped. The claims were decreed by the first Court in the alternative. On appeal the Divisional Judge reversed the decree with regard to the first relief, but maintained the second. The defendant appealed against the latter part of the appellate judgment and the plaintiff put in cross-objections against the former part thereof, Held that the plaint, though claiming an alternative and not a cumulative relief, should, under s. 17, Court Fees Act, be stamped on the values of the two claims, as it embraced two claims based on two distinct causes of action ; that under s. 16 Court Fees Act, the respondent ought to pay Court-fees on the value of the claim for specific performance and that the plaintiff would have

But, if the original cause of action is the promissory note itself and does not exist independently of it, he cannot succeeed without the instrument, according to s. 91 of the Evidence Act, as the instrument is the only contract between the parties. A document apparently a promissory note, but containing an unconditional order directing a certain person to pay a certain sum of money to another person comes within the definition of a bill of exchange in s. 5 of the Negotiable Instruments Act, though the document may also contain a promise (conditional on his meeting the bill) to re-pay the plaintiff on a certain date. of vendor—Vendor suing for payment of price—Whether gives rise to cause of action—Payment after suit—Award of costs to plaint—Propriety.—The defendants purchased property from the plaintiff, undertaking to pay the price or part of it to his creditors. For three years, they failed to make any payment, and thus left the plaintiff in the position that property other than that sold was still under encumbrance when it ought to have been freed from encumbrance. Plaintiff filed a suit and the defendants thereafter paid the amount claimed. Held, that, though the property had not been actually sold up as threatened by his creditors, still the plaintiff had a cause of action against the defendant. Held, also, that costs were properly awarded to the plaintiffs on the ground that the defendants failed to do what they ought to have done before. While the appeal was pending, M, A and F filed deeds of compromise in which they and K gave up their mutual claims ; but in K's deed, instead of writing the names of the three ladies in detail, he used the word "appellants." As F had not appealed, she applied to the Munsiff to have the deed corrected. Her claim was granted, and the decree was upheld in appeal. The defendant in special appeal, inter alia, denied that there was any cause of action. Held that even if there (as admitted) was an intention to take proceedings in execution of the ex-parte decree, there was a cause of action. (69)—Suit to set aside mortgage-bond and decree between other parties in other place for collusion to injure plaintiff—Attachment—Absence of cause of action.—In a suit for a decree to set aside a mortgage-bond and a decree between other parties in another district, in which plaintiff alleges collusion between those parties with a view to injure him, and that his property had been attached in execution, held that plaintiff has no cause of action. MUSSAMUT RAM LACHMEE KOOER v. KASHEE PERSHAD SAHEE, 21 W.R. 388.

(71)—Loan made to Vakils of a Zemindar for purposes of the Zemindari—Suit against the Zemindar.—The Vakils of a Zemindar borrowed a large sum of money of certain money-lenders, giving a bond in their individual names to a trustee of the lenders in the English form. It was found that the money was borrowed for the purpose of paying the arrears of Government revenue due by the Zemindar and that the money borrowed was actually paid, and received by the Treasury, in discharge of the arrears. It appeared that the bond had been drawn up in the name of the trustee (an Englishman) for the lenders, in order that proceedings might be taken against the borrowers in the Supreme Court of Calcutta. It appeared, also, that the sanction of the Revenue Department had not been obtained, when the loan was raised, as required by the Regulations of 1781 and 1787, which were then in force. The present suit was instituted by the lenders against the Zemindar and the survivor of the two vakils who had executed the bond (the other having died). Held, that, the money having been proved to have been borrowed for the purposes of discharging the Government-revenue due on the Zemindari, the plaintiffs were entitled to maintain the suit against the Zemindar, on the basis of the contract entered into by the latter's vakils. Held, also, that the bond having been executed in the name of the trustee of the lenders in the English form for the purpose of enabling them to sue the vakils of the Zemindar in the Supreme Court of Calcutta, it did not prevent the lenders from instituting the suit in the Mofussil Courts, under the law prevailing among the natives in matters of contract. Held, also, that, the Regulations of 1781 and 1787 having been repealed when the suit was instituted, and there being nothing in the (73)—Procedure.—A Hindu whose share in an ancestral estate had been alienated by a co-proprietor, instituted simultaneously three different actions against the co-proprietor, and the persons to whom the alienations had respectively been made, to recover several distinct parcels of land which constituted his share. Held that, as the plaintiff had but one single cause of action against the co-proprietor, he ought to have brought but one suit against him, and either included all the alienees in this suit, or brought separate actions against the alienees for the several pieces of land in their possession, and caused the proceeding in these suits to be stayed till the suit against the co-proprietor was determined. The course of procedure last indicated is the more correct course. Held, further, that as the separate suits against the co-proprietor were instituted simultaneously the error in splitting up the claim against him did not affect the merits; and accordingly the decree was affirmed. A suit, is a demand made judicially for attaining or recovering a right, and it does not lie for the bare performance of a duty at the instance of the person bound to perform it, for the evident reason that, when he is willing to perform it, there is no need for a suit, and that, if he is not, it is for the other party to enforce its performance. ——1.—General.

(1)—Application under Act XXVII of 1860—Debts alleged to be due to estate of deceased's estate—Petition to be heard.—Where an application is made under Act XXVII of 1860, on the allegation that there are debts due to deceased's estate, and the allegation is not denied, the Court must hear the petition. FUZL MOULA v. GOLAM SHURRUFF, 12 W. R. 505.

(2)—Certificate under Act XXVII of 1860—Appeal to reduce amount of security.—Under s. 6 of Act XXVII of 1860 no appeal lay merely for the purpose of varying the Judge's order by reducing the amount of security required from the party declared to be entitled to a certificate. When an appeal has been properly instituted under s. 6, the Court may alter or vary the Judge's order as to security. MUSSAMAT SOONEA v. RAM SUHA, 2 N.W.P. 146. [F., 1 A. 287, 3 A. 304.]

(3)—Certificate for collection of debts given on the basis of the grantee being adopted son of creditor - Suit for declaration of non-existence or invalidity of adoption—Burden of proof.—One Sardar Singh, a minor under the guardianship of his father, Dip Chand, obtained a certificate authorizing him to collect debts due to Gir Prasad, deceased, on the basis of his being the adopted son of Gir Prasad Singh, the alleged adoption having been made by Ram Kunwar, one of the widows of Gir Prasad Singh. The two other widows of Gir Prasad Singh who, though given more than one opportunity of doing so, never appeared in the proceedings before the District Judge, sued for a declaration that the alleged adoption of Sardar Singh to Gir Prasad Singh never, in fact, took place, or, if it did take place, was invalid owing to want of authority on the part of Ram Kunwar to adopt. Held that the burden of proof was on the plaintiffs, who disputed the fact and the validity of the adoption, to give prima facie evidence to support their statement. ——2—Cancelling Cetificate.

(1)—Certificate under Act XXVII of 1860—Cancellation—Procedure.—Where a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 was granted to a person and it is subsequently sought to be cancelled, held that it cannot be decided in the summary department, where a question of right was involved, in which cases it must be adjudicated in a regular suit. Under s. 6 of the Act, the application for the cancellation must be made to the High Court. MOHUNT SUSMAN GOSSAIN v. RAMCHURN BHUKUT, 5 W.R. Mis. 48.

(2)—Ss. 7, 19, 21, Act XL of 1858—Grant of certificate under s. 7, Act XL of 1858—Recall.—The grant of a certificate under s. 7 of Act XL of 1858 can be recalled summarily under s. 21 without any account having been previously taken in a regular suit under s, 19, where the application for recall is based on charges of waste and mismanagement. NANEE BIBEE v. KHOJAH SURWAR HOSSEIN, 7 W.R. 522.

(3)—Certificate under Act XXVII of 1860—Recalling of certificate—Nearer heir—Object of Act XXVII of 1860.—A certificate, under Act XXVII of 1860, may not be recalled, because there is an heir in a nearer degree to the deceased than the certificate-holder, the object of that Act not being to assist parties in establishing a disputed right or title. KUBEER CHUNDER BUNDO v. RAM KANYE DOSS BISWAS, 17 W.R. 174.

(4)—Allegation of fraud in obtaining certificate—Act XXVII of 1860—Proof of allegation.—Where a party claiming to be the rightful heir alleges that fraud has been committed in obtaining a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860, the Judge should require the opposite party to substantiate their allegation that the claimant is disqualified from inheriting. (7)—Widow's rights to certificate not objected to on notice issued—Regular suit.—Where notice has been issued, and the petitioner does not appear and object to the widow of a deceased party receiving a certificate of administration, the Judge is right to refer him to a regular suit. MANICK CHUNDER v. RAJ LUCKHEE DOSSEE, 19 W.R. 252.

(8)—Administration—Certificate, application for, by two widows of intestate—Practice.—Where the widows of an intestate applied for administration to the estate of the deceased, held that the District Judge before whom the application was made was right in following the usual practice (which was declared to be a reasonable practice) of his Court in refusing to grant such administration to the widows jointly. NITTYO KALI DABEA v. KEDAR NAUTH CHATTERJEA, 5 C.L.R. 368.

(9)—Husband authorising widow to adopt by will—Certificate to widow—Grant of certificate to adopted son—Procedure.—Where a widow, acting under the authority given her under the will of her husband, adopts a son and discards him on account of his misbehaviour, held that the adopted son, who, after he attained majority, applied to the Court for withdrawing the certificate granted to the widow in pursuance of the will and for granting a certificate to himself, cannot contest the validity of the will in a summary proceeding, and that the question between the parties could only be decided by a regular suit. ISSUR CHUNDER BABOO v. POORUNA BEEBEE, 4 W.R. Mis. 16.

(10)—Act XL of 1858—Transfer of family jewels by, and revocation of certificate to, Hindu widow.—Family jewels appearing to have been part of the ancestral property were held not transferable by a Hindu widow, except for special purposes; and acts of waste would render it necessary to withdraw the certificate granted to her under Act XL of 1858. BHAGWANEE KOONWAR v. PARBUTTY KOONWUR, 2 W.R. Mis. 13.

(11)—Cancellation of certificate for want of jurisdiction—Proof of allegation—Procedure—Act XXVII of 1860.—In the case of an application to have a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 cancelled on the ground that the Judge had no jurisdiction, the Judge should require applicant to prove his allegation, and the opposite party should show cause why the certificate should not be recalled. JUGGESSUR DHUR v. BHUGOBUTTY DASSEE, 13 W.R. 464.

——3.—Effect of Certificate.

(1)—Application under Act XXVII of 1860—Title to collect debts only to be considered—Question of existence of debts—Representative title.—In an application under Act XXVII of 1860, the Judge has to consider only the title to collect debts, not whether there are any. The certificate is conclusive of representative title. MUSSAMUT BUGGOBUTTY KOOER v. BHOLONATH THAKOOR, 8 W.R. 317.

(2)—Debts contemplated by Act XXVII of 1860.—Act XXVII of 1860 contemplates all debts due to, and outstanding at the death of, the deceased, even those beyond the date of the certificate. SHIBDYAL TEWARY CHOWDHRY v. BIDDYAMOYEE DEBIA CHOWDHRAIN, 18 W.R. 271.

(3)—Act XXVII of 1860—Effect of certificate of administration.—The certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 does not determine any question of heirship, but merely protects debtors of a deceased person from liability for payments made to certificate holder. If it be found that such certificate holder was not the rightful heir the question of heirship may be tried in a regular suit, notwithstanding the grant of a certificate. The certificate to collect debts should nevertheless ordinarily be granted to the person entitled to the inheritance. MUSSAMAT JOKNA v. MUSSAMAT BAUGWANEE, 3 N.W.P. 320.

(4)—Act XXVII of 1860, object of certificate under.—The object of a certificate, under Act XXVII of 1860, is to enable representatives to recover debts due to the deceased at the time of his death, not claims accruing subsequently. MUSSAMUT JHANJOO KOOER v. MUSSAMUT DAMEANAH KOOER, 17 W.R. 343.

(5)—Right of widowed daughter—No title in party obtaining certificate.—A District Judge is right in granting a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 to the widowed daughter claiming under the will of the deceased, which was established without dispute; this law not creating a title in the party obtaining the certificate. CHUNDRA MONEE DEBIA v. RASH BEHARY CHOWDHRY, 21 W.R. 24.

(6)—Contest between heirs of full-blood and half-blood.—Where a certificate, under Act XXVII of 1860 for a moiety of the estate of the deceased, was granted to each of two heirs, one of the half-blood, and the other of the full-blood the High Court, on the appeal of the latter, who possessed the title-deeds and had performed the shradh, ordered the certificate of the whole estate to be given to him. HURRO KRISTO DOSS v. RAMA NUNDO DOSS, 22 W.R. 274.

(7)—Title to specific property—Act XXVII of 1860—Enquiry.—No question of title to specific property can be tried under Act XXVII of 1860. SHEIKH IMAMUN v. MUSST. NUNNOO, 17 W.R. 193.

(8)—Certificate granted under Act XX of 1841—Effect.—Held that a certificate granted under Act XX of 1841 did not establish the right of inheritance of the party to whom it was granted, but simply empowered him to collect debts due to the estate of the deceased. The title of plaintiff or her father could not, under the circumstances, be questioned by a co-sharer after its public acknowledgment and practical effect given to that acknowledgment during a long period of years. SKINNER v. SKINNER, 2 Agra 128.

(9)—Act XXVII of 1860—Effect of certificate—Court's consideration.—In a proceeding to obtain an administration certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 for the collection of debts payable to the representatives of deceased persons, the Court has to determine merely whether the applicant is entitled to receive a certificate and not his title as heir or legal representative of the deceased. The rights as between each other of several persons claiming to be interested in the property of the deceased are not to be determined in such a proceeding. The Act does not authorize the grant of a certificate for a portion of the property or debts, whether such portion be separate and defined or not. BEYCHAN SAHOO v. GANESH SAHOO, 2 N.W.P. 439.

(10)—Title not given by certificate — Right to collect debts becoming due after deceased's death.—A certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 gives no title to the property in succession to the deceased, nor does it authorize the holder to sue for and collect debts which have accrued due after the death of the deceased to persons who have subsequently become owners of his property. GOUREE BYJNATH PERSHAD v. MUSSAMUT LOCHUN KOOER, 22 W.R. 102.

(11)—Receipt of money under certificate——Title to money—Holder of money only trustee.—The receipt of money under a certificate does not give a title to the money; the holder only becoming trustee for the person to whom the money belongs. GOBIND CHUNDER BAGCHEE v. DOORGA MONEE DEBIA, 23 W.R. 270.

(12)—Effect of certificate under Act XXVII of 1860—When relationship to which it certifies contested.—In a suit by C as purchaser from A as heir of B, the grant of a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 to A, as daugter and heir of B, to collect his debts, does not preclude the defendant, who was not a party to that proceeding, from showing that A was not B's daughter. Certain property, purchased in the name of B, was mortgaged by him to the defendant, to whom a further charge was subsequently executed by D, E, and F. In a suit for redemption by the plaintiff claiming title as heir of B; held that the defendant was at liberty to show that B was only a trustee for D, E and F. BUNDHOO BHUGUT v. SYED MAHOMED HOSSEIN, 2 W.R. 70.

(13)—Collection of debts on succession—Act XXVII of 1860—Validity of will—Suit to contest under Civ. Pro. Code, 1859.—A decision as to the validity of a will under Act XXVII of 1860 does not preclude the institution of a regular suit under Act VIII of 1859 between the same parties to dispute the validity of the same will, ANUND CHUNDER MITTER v. BANEE MADHUB MITTER, 11 W.R. 127.

(14)—Right to certificate—Act XXVII of 1860—Genuineness of will.—To determine the right to a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860, the Judge must decide the question of the genuineness of the will. KALEE CHUNDER SURMA v. GOBIND PERSHAD SURMA, 12 W. R. 454.

(15)—Certificate to person claiming under will—Act XXVII of 1860—Effect.—The grant of a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860, to a person claiming under a will cannot support a claim to title by that person in a regular suit brought on a will. SOOKHO SOONDUREE DABIA v. WOOMA SOONDUREE DEBIA, 18 W.R. 253.

(16)—Grant of certificate on evidence, nature of—Summary proceedings and proceedings on evidence, difference between—Right to bring regular suit—Previous judgment, value of.—When the question of granting a certificate under XXVII of 1860 is dealt with by the Court with all the available evidence before it just as in a regular suit, and the matter of the certificate is decided upon after full deliberation, the position of the parties becomes very different from what it is at the conclusion of a really summary proceeding. Technically, there may still be the right to bring a regular suit; but the regular suit in such a case, is a re-hearing, and the Court is bound to pay due respect to the judgment already arrived at. GREEDHAREE SINGH v. MUSSAMUT FOOLJHUREE KOOER, 24 W.R. 173.

(17)—Negotiation of Government securities by holders of certificates under Act XXVII of 1860.—Held that a Judge can empower holders of certificates under Act XXVII of 1860 to negotiate Government securities mentioned in the will of the deceased. In re SREEMUTTY BHUGGOBUTTY DEBIA, 3 W.R. (18)—Certificate granted under Act on title afforded by will—Estate given to grantee—No right as executor or legatee—Succession Act, s. 187—Semble.—The grant of a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 on the title afforded by the will, gives the grantee the estate in respect of which the debts accrued, but does not establish a right as executor or legatee within the meaning of the words of s. 187 of the Succession Act. KRISTO CHUNDER MOOKERJEE v. CHUNDEE PERSHAD BANERJEE, 23 W.R. 252.

(19)—Certificate under Act XL of 1858—Adoption.—On the death of A, B claimed his estate as his adopted son against W (A's widow) who denied the adoption. The adopted son being a minor, Y, as his guardian applied for a certificate under Act XL of 1858. Held that, until the adoption is finally proved, the certificate will not enable the adopted son or his guardian to interfere with in the possession of her husband's estate. PANCH COWREE MUNDUL v. BHUGOBUTTY DOSSIA, 6 W.R. Mis. 47.

(20)—Certificate under Act XL of 1858—Certificate under Act XXVII of 1860—Procedure—Issue of certificate.—A certificate under Act XL of 1858 gives the right to collect the debts due to the estate; but if the debtor objects to pay, the right cannot be enforced without a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860. Where an applicant for a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 is opposed by a party claiming under a will, the Judge is bound to proceed under s. 3. Where an applicant for a certificate is entitled to a share, the smallness of the share will not debar her from getting a certificate entitling her to collect according to the share. RAESUNNISSA BEGUM v. RANEE KHUJOORUNNISSA, 10 W.R. 462.

A certificate, under Act XXVII of 1860, should be issued directly it is granted, provided the proper stamp be furnished. DHUNPUT SINGH DOOGUR v. THE GOVERNMENT, 17 W.R. 489.

(2)—Deceased having no fixed place of residence at time of death—Court having jurisdiction to grant certificate.—Where a person had no fixed place of residence at the time of his death, the Judge of the district in which his debts are, has authority to grant a certificate of administration under Act XXVII of 1860. GOLAM SOBHAN alias SABOO MEAH v. MAHOMED ROUF, 20 W.R. 286.

(3)—Two wills—Certificate—Act XXVII of 1860.—An order recognizing two wills cannot be made under Act XXVII of 1860. BEMOLA MOYEE DEBEA v. KISHTOMONEE DEBEA, W.R. 1864, Mis. 10.

(4)—Collection of debts of endowment—Refusal of certificate.—A District Judge rightly refuses a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 for the collection of the debts of an endowment. BHYRUB BHARUTTEE MOHANT, PETITIONER, 21 W.R. 340.

(5)—Certificate under Act XXVII of 1860, to whom granted.—As a general rule, the heir to a deceased is the person who should have a certificate to collect the debts, and manage the estate of the deceased under Act XXVII of 1860.

If he, as heir, is entitled to the whole surplus of the estate, the fact of his having been in a hostile or friendly position as regards the deceased will not be material. The sole heir will be the best person to take care of his own interests. In cases of several heirs contending with each other, if there be no disputes among them, the heir who is entitled to the largest share, may, in the absence of other disqualifying circumstances, be the person entitled to a certificate. ABDOOL ALI v. ABIDUNNISSA KHATOON, W.R. 1864, Mis. 41.

(6)—Application for certificate under Act XL of 1858—When to be granted.—Where the petitioner applied for a grant of certificate under Act XL of 1858, allowing him to take charge of the estate left to his minor nephew by his father deceased and the application was rejected by the Judge without sufficient grounds, held that it is evidently not the policy of the law to prevent parties from performing their natural duties by the younger members of their family who may be deprived of their natural parents; and it should not be considered as an axiom that an uncle or other near relative will necessarily defraud the minor. In this case, the certificate was granted. MAHOMED SALEH v. THE GOVERNMENT, W.R. 1864, Mis. 26.

(7)—Certificate to collect debts—Relationship through male and female lines—Preference.—The father's father's brother's son of a deceased person is entitled to a certificate to collect the debts due to the deceased, in preference to a person (e.g., the father's brother's daughter's son), who claims though a succession of persons, one of whom was a female. GOPAL CHUNDER NATH COONDOO v. HARIDAS CHUNI 11 C, 343. (23 W.R. 117, 4 C. 411, Followed.) [R.. 15 C. 780.]

(7-a)—Certificate for collection of debts—Rival claimants—Question as to the genuineness and validity of the will—Court bound to make enquiry into and adjudicate upon the validity of will.—Where the eldest son of a deceased person applied for a certificate under XXVII of 1860 to enable him to collect the debts due to his deceased father. The younger son opposed it and claimed a certificate under a will alleged to have been executed by the father. The genuineness and validity of the will was disputed by the eldest son. The Court refused to go into the question of the genuineness and validity of the will. Held that an objector claiming a certificate under a will is entitled to have an enquiry into and adjudication upon the title which he sets up, before a decision by the Court as to which claimant should get the certificate. THAKUR DAS v. DYA RAM, 36 P.R. 1878,

(8)—Person representing himself as deceased's cousin—Person asserting exclusive right as tekait to taluk—Right of brothers to collect debts.—The assertion of an exclusive right as tekait to a certain talook by a person representing himself as cousin of the deceased cannot prejudice the right of brothers, as next heirs to the deceased, to collect his debts, and to give quittances, to his debtors. BABOO PURLADH SINGH v. HET NARAIN SINGH, 2 W.R. Mis. 5.

(9)—Will set up by objectors not proved—Natural heir entitled to certificate.—Where a will set up by objectors is not sufficiently proved, the Court is justified in looking on the natural heir as entitled to a certificate of administration. DINO BUNDHOO CHOWDHRY v. RAJA MOHINEE CHOWDHRAIN 15 W.R. 73.

(10)—Applications under Act XXVII of 1860 — Duty of Judge.—When applications for certificates under Act XXVII of 1860 are made, the Judge should determine who is entitled, and grant accordingly. He cannot make an order in respect of the property of the deceased. KHAJAH OHEED KHAN v. THE COLLECTOR OF SHAHABAD, 9 W.R. 502.

(11)—Competition for certificate—Procedure—Security.—Of several applicants for a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860, the heir or person having the largest interest is entitled to it, and the Court may call on him to give security for any small interest not sufficiently protected. AZEEM KHAN v. MUSSAMUT AMEERUN, 12 W.R. 38. [F. 13 W. R. 143.]

(12) — Owner dead long ago — Property managed by stranger — Right of heiress to certificate under Act.—An heiress is entitled to a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860, although the owner died nine years before, and the property had been previously managed by a third party. PULASH MONEE DOSSEE v. ANUND MOYEE DOSSEE, 8 W.R. 398.

(13)—Executor under will, right of, to a certificate.—The executor under a will, if it be not contested, has an undoubted right to a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860, though he be not the legal heir. If the will be contested, the Judge should enquire into its validity, and, if he consider it proved, give a certificate, leaving the parties dissatisfied to set it aside by a regular suit. BIDHOO BHOOSHUN MOOKERJEE v. ISSUR CHANDER ROY CHOWDHRY, W.R. 1864, Mis. 4.

(14) — Claim to certificate under will of Mahomedan —Inheritance in dispute — No necessity for collecting debts—Procedure.—In a claim under a will to a certificate to enable the applicant to collect the debts of a deceased Mahomedan under Act XXVII of 1860, no necessity for collecting debts being shown, and the inheritance being disputed: Held that the Judge was right in refusing to give a certificate under that Act. SYED AGAMEER v. GOMANEE KHANUM, W.R. 1864, Mis. 6.

(15)—Claim to certificate under will—Will, not properly executed—Will, though void, a proper guide to testator's intentions—In an application for a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860, where applicant's title is based upon a will to which the signatures of the witnesses are found

VIII of 1827, position of holder of administration certificate granted under — Such holder not a representative.*—Plaintiffs, as co-sharers in a deshpande vatan, sued to recover their portion of the annual allowance in respect of their share in the vatan which had been received from the Collector by their co-sharers, the defendant and his father. The District Judge treated the plaintiff's claim to a share as one to a distributive share of the property of the original owner of the deshpande vatan who died intestate, and applying art. 123 of the Limitation Act, for determining whether the plaintiffs right was barred, decided that it was so barred. Held that art. 123 of the Act was not applicable to the case and that the suit was not barred. Art. 123 has been intended to apply only to a case in which it is sought to obtain a share from a person who, as executor or otherwise, represents the estate with a legal obligation to distribute it. That article could, therefore, have no application to the present case, there never having been a representative of the estate otherwise than for the purpose of management. The certificates of administrations granted to several persons in succession, including the present defendant, only conferred the right of management and did not constitute the holders of such certificates the representatives of the estate for the purpose of distributing it amongst the co-sharers. right of succession to a deceased's property between two claimants, and neither of them is in possession, the District Judge within whose jurisdiction the property in dispute is situate has the power, under s. 9, Regulation VIII of 1827 (on application having been made to him for the purpose) to appoint an administrator. The language of s. 9 of Regulation VIII of 1827 is imperative and not permissive. The use of the words "may appoint" in the section does not imply that the District Court has any discretion in a proper case to appoint or not to appoint an administrator. If any discretion is given by s. 9 of the Regulation as to the exercise of the power thereby conferred, it is not that of exercising the power or not at pleasure when the occasion arises, but only of determining whether the occasion has arisen in the particular case. (7)—*Reg. In 1889, the widow of the deceased adopted H, who in 1894 applied for a certificate of heirship to the deceased, alleging that he was his legal heir; and also for the cancellation of that granted to B. B denied the legality of the adoption, and contended that he was himself the heir. The District Judge, thereupon, dismissed the application, referring the applicant to a regular suit to establish the validity of the adoption. Held by the High Court that the District Judge had no authority to dismiss the application and refer the applicant to a regular suit. He was bound to investigate the case, following the procedure laid down in s. 4 of Reg. VIII of 1827. The case was accordingly remanded for a legal inquiry. HARISING v. BHAUSING, 20 B. 548.

(8)—Act XX of 1841—Summary procedure—Act XXVII of 1860.—A (a Hindu) died intestate in December 1865, leaving his widow in possession of his property, moveable and immoveable. The descent of A's property was admittedly governed by the law of the Mitakshara. On the 19th January, 1866, A's nephew presented a petition to the Zillah Court, under Act XIX of 1841, denying the title of the widow. Upon this alone, the Judge directed the widow to come in and show cause, which she did on the 2nd February following. A daughter of A on 10th March, presented a petition in opposition to the nephew's claim for possession. The nephew filed a reply. In the meantime, the widow applied for a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860, which was opposed by both nephew and daughter. The nephew also filed a cross-petition under Act XXVII of 1860. All these petitions came on by consent together for adjudication on a state of facts admitted by all parties through their pleaders, who, also, by consent between themselves, submitted their view of the question of law to be decided on the Acts of 1841 and 1860. The questions so submitted were (1) Did it appear on the evidence that there was a separation between A and his nephew according to the Mitakshara doctrine? (2) If the evidence per se established a legal separation, was such separation negatived by certain admissions of A? The Judge refused the application of the widow under Act XXVII of 1860, and granted possession to the nephew under Act XIX of 1841. The nephew was a man of substance, and able to bring a regular suit, and there was no evidence of possession by force or fraud on the part of the widow, the only question being her right according to the Mitakshara law. Held that the Judge was in error in proceeding summarily under Act XIX of 1841 on the declaration of the applicant alone and without other enquiry, but that this defect was cured by the widow's appearing; that the Judge ought not to have tried the cases under Acts XIX of 1841 and Act XXVII of 1860 together and on the same issues; but that the Judge having jurisdiction over the subject-matter and to frame the issues, his order was not open to appeal or review. There is no provision in the Act for the administration of the effects of a foreigner domiciled abroad, as was the deceased, in the present case, who was a sirdar of Baroda, resident there, where also he died. Also the locality of the assets regulates the jurisdiction of the Court to grant a certificate under Reg. VIII of 1827 while Act XXVII of 1860 alone had regard to the person. The Assistant Collector had been appointed administrator of the estate of the deceased in this case who had died leaving considerable property in the District of Surat. Admittedly, he had not been relieved of his office as administrator by the Court as contemplated in the section under which he was appointed and, while his status subsisted, no one else could represent the estate, the appointment of an administrator excluding other representatives so long as it endures. (5)—Sale certificate, how to be construed.—A sale certificate will not be invalidated by a mere inaccuracy of language or misdescription. The intention of the parties must be given effect to. SHEIK MOULA BUKSH v. MOONSHEE KURUCK LALL, 7 W.R. 246.

(6)—Act VIII of 1859, s. 259—Ex parte order amending certificate.—A Court is not legally competent to make an ex parte order amending a sale certificate, granted under Act VIII of 1859, s. 259. RAJAH RAGHOO NUNDUN SINGH BAHADOOR v. ROBERT WILSON, 23 W.R. 301.

(7)—Admissibility of evidence of, to identify subject of sale.—Where a sale certificate is accurate as to any part of the description of the subject of sale, and can be used to identify it with the help of extraneous evidence, such evidence can be received. MUSSAMUT MALEEBUN v. MUSSAMUT RASEEDA, 25 W.R. 401

(8)—Contradiction of sale certificate—Evidence of facts lying behind certificate.—The Court refuses to go to facts lying behind a sale certificate for the purpose of contradicting its terms. LALLA BISSESSUR DYAL v. DOOLA CHAND SAHOO, 22 W. R. 181. [R., 27 B. 334.]

(9)—Identity of land not disputed—Misdescription of right transferred by certificate—Grant of possession to purchaser.—Where the identity of the land is not in dispute, the mere circumstance that the right transferred by a sale-certificate, is called by mistake joteedakhalee, instead of by some other term nearly importing the same thing, is not a difficulty in the way of giving the purchaser possession. SHAIKH KULEEMOODDEEN DAROGA v. ASHRUF ALI KHAN, 19 W.R. 276.

(10)—Verbal error in execution proceedings—Effect on purchaser's right.—A mere verbal error in proceedings in execution of a decree, if there is no doubt as to the Court's intention, does not defeat the auction-purchaser's right. A sale allowed to be completed without opposition from the judgment-debtor who accepts the proceedings so far as to petition for extension of time must not be treated as a nullity. TARANATH CHUCKERBUTTY v. JOY SOONDUREE DABEE, 21 W.R. 93.

(11)—Admission of documents subject to proof—Construction of sale certificate—Misdescription.—It should be distinctly noted that an admissible document coming under the class requiring proof is admitted on the record subject to proof. Documents not evidence between the parties should not be admitted in evidence. In construing a sale-certificate, the Court must try and ascertain what was intended to be sold, a mere misdescription does not defeat the purchaser's right. WILLAIM BRUCE MANSON v. GOLAM KEBRIA MOONSHEE. 15 W.R. 490. [F., 21 W.R. 93; Cons., 19 W.R. 276.]

(12)—Execution sale under barred decree—Sale certificate, effect of.—Where a decree under which a sale takes place is in force and the sale has been confirmed, a sale certificate would operate as a valid transfer of the property sold, notwithstanding that the sale actually took place at a time when execution had become barred. SARODA CHURN CHUCKERBUTTY v. MAHOMED ISUF MEAH, 11 C. 376. (7 C. 91, 8 C. 51, F.)

(13)—Effect of—Registered certificate of sale—Un-registered previous optionally—Registrable sale-deed — Priority.—A certificate of sale issued under the Civ. Pro. Code is not an instrument operating to create, limit, or extinguish title. It is an act of Court exhibiting the assent of the Court to the sale which in effect transferred what title the owner had to the purchaser—such transfer to take effect on the granting of the certificate. The holding of a registered sale certificate does not entitle the holder to priority over a purchaser under an earlier but unregistered sale-deed, which was optionally registrable. NARASAYYA v. JANGAM, 7 M. 418. [R., 11 M. 296.]

(14)—Execution-sale of lease decreed with mesne profits—Certificate of sale.—Where, in execution of a money decree against the representatives of the judgment-debtor, all their right, title and interest in a lease, the possession, with mesne profits, of land comprised in which had been formerly decreed to the judgment-debtor, was sold, it was held that inasmuch as the certificate of sale referred only to the lease the right to the mesne profits awarded by the original decree did not pass by the sale. GANESH LAL TEWARI v. SHAMNARAIN, 6 C. 213.

(15)—Unregistered—Non-production—Rule of presumption.—Omnia rite acta.—A purchaser in Court-sale need not prove the sale certificate or its registration, if the auction-purchaser is proved or admitted. VELAN v. KUMARASWAMI, 11 M. 296. [F., 7 C.L.J. 384; R., 96 P.L.R. 1909=9 P.R. 1909.]

(16)—Certificate acquiring force of final decree—Bengal Act, VII of 1880, ss. 8 and 10—Sale under certificate—Substantial injury—Remedy.—The certificate would become absolute and take effect as a final decree under s. 8 of Bengal Act VII of 1880, only when the notice under s. 10 is actually served. Where substantial injury has resulted from a material irregularity in the publication or conduct of a sale under a certificate under Bengal Act VII of 1880, the judgment-debtor's only remedy is by appeal under s. 2 of Bengal Act VII of 1868. Certificate of Sale—continued.

(17)—Registration of certificate of sale — Of memorandum—Act VIII of 1859, s. 259—Act XX of 1866, ss. 17 and 42.—Under the provisions of Act VIII of 1859, s. 259, and Act XX of 1866, s. 17, a certificate of sale requires to be registered and the registration of a memorandum of the certificate is not sufficient. SRINIVASA SASTRI v. SESHAIYYANGAR, 3 M. 37, F.B. [Cons., 11 M. 296.]

(18)—Certificate of sale, Effect of.—The effect of the grant of a certificate of sale is to create statutory evidence of the transfer and it is not necessary to pass the title. SADAGOPA v. JAMUNA BAI, 5 M. 54.

(19)—Sale-certificates, registration of—Registration Act (of 1871 and 1877), s. 17.—Sale-certificates granted under s. 259 of Act VIII of 1859, Civ. Pro. Code, are not compulsorily registrable under s. 17 of the Registration Act. PROKASH CHUNDER DASS v. TARACHAND DASS, 9 C. 82, F.B. = 12 C.L.R. 1.

(20)—Certificate of sale left unregistered—Grant of fresh certificate — Practice. — On attempting to get possession of the house purchased by the applicant at a Court-sale, he was obstructed, and, with his application for removal of the obstruction, presented his sale-certificate which he had not got registered. On the refusal of the above application because of the non-registration of the sale certificate, he applied for a fresh certificate. The lower Courts having refused to grant the same, he made the present application to the High Court under its extraordinary jurisdiction, and that Court ordered that a fresh certificate, dated the day on which it may be granted, and reciting the fact of the sale and the date thereof, should be given, the original certificate in the applicant's possession being taken back. In re LAKSHMAN, 9 B. 472.

(21)—Issue of certificate of sale—Insufficiency of stamp—Court not bound to grant fresh certificate.—A Court, having once issued a certificate of sale to a purchaser at the Court auction, is under no obligation to give him another for the sole purpose of evading the penalty which he has incurred by not having presented in the first instance to the Court a paper properly stamped for it. NANDRAM MOTIRAM v. KACHA BHAV, 9 B. 526.

(22)—Grant of sale certificate—Ministerial duty—Statute of Limitation.—Where a duty is cast upon the Court to do a certain thing, as for instance, the grant of a sale-certificate, the Statute of Limitation does not apply. A sale-certificate granted more than three years after the confirmation of sale would therefore be valid and not open to objection on the ground of its having been applied for more than three years after confirmation of sale. (24)—Mortgage—Registration.—An endorsement made and signed by a Judge on a deed of mortgage of immoveable property, certifying that the deed was purchased at a public sale, held in his Court, in execution of a decree, operates as a sale certificate, and, if it relates to immoveable property of the value of Rs. 100 and upwards, must be registered, and, if unregistered, is inadmissible in evidence. KANAHIA LAL v. KALI DIN, 2 A. 392.

(25)—Purchaser at sale in execution, limitation for application for possession made by—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), sch. II, art. 178.—An application by an auction purchaser, praying to be given possession of the property purchased by him, should be made within three years from the date on which the certificate of sale was issued and granted to him. Otherwise the application would be barred by time under art. 178 of the Limitation Act of 1877. HANMANTRAV PANDURANG JOGLEKAR v. SUBAJI GIRMAJI, 8 B. 257. [R., 32 M. 136 = 19 M.L.J. 224 = 4 M.L.T. 350, 14 C.W.N. 433 = 5 Ind. Cas. 89]

(26)—Sale certificate—Registration Act, III of 1877, s. 17 (b)—Civ. Pro. Code, s 316.—A certificate of sale, granted under s. 316 of the Civ. Pro. Code, does not require registration as provided by s. 17 of the Registration Act, for it is not an instrument of the kind mentioned in cl. (b) of that section. MASARAT-UN-NISSA v. ADIT RAM, 5 A. 568. F.B = A. W.N. 1883, 159. [R., 142 P. R 1908, F.B]

(27)—Certificate of sale—Right of action.—The appellant sued the respondents to recover possession of certain property purchased by him for Rs. 40 at a sale in execution of a decree. He had no certificate of sale. Held that suit had been properly dismissed by the lower Courts. CHIRANJI LALL v. NATHU, A. W.N. 1882, 105.

(28)—Sale certificate—Duty of purchaser—Evidence.—It is the business of an auction-purchaser to see that the sale-certificate conveys to him what he supposes himself to have purchased, and it is open to him to adduce evidence afterwards to prove that he purchased anything more than the certificate shows him to have taken in the sale. No amount of evidence showing that the tenants have been willing to pay rents to an auction-purchaser can prevail against the rights of a mokurrureedar whose tenure has survived an auction-sale. Certiorari, Writ of.

(1)—Removal by Bombay High Court, of case from Bombay Small Cause Court—Bombay High Court can superintend Bombay Small Cause Court—Ground for removal—Terms of order.—The Bombay Court of Small Causes is subject to the superintendence of the High Court within the meaning of cl. 13 of the Letters Patent of the High Court, and the latter has, therefore, power, for purposes of justice, to remove a case from the Small Cause Court, and itself to try and determine such case. The inability of the Small Cause Court to issue a commission to examine for the defence witnesses residing outside its jurisdiction, though not in general, may under peculiar circumstances be a good ground for granting an order to remove a case from the Small Cause Court into the High Court. Terms upon which such order will be granted. PIRBHAI KHIMJI v. THE BOMBAY, BARODA AND CENTRAL INDIA RAILWAY COMPANY, 8 B.H.C.O.C, 59.

Cess.

(1)—Covenant—Construction of—"Road and public" work cesses as levied at present—Revaluation—Increased cesses payable by whom.—Where the lessors agreed with the tenants that the latter were to pay, in addition to the fixed rent road and public works cesses at half-anna per rupee, as was levied at the time, according to the instalments given at the foot of the instrument. Held, that the lessees were to pay road and public works cesses at half-anna per rupee as was levied in accordance with the statutory provision of the subject, and that the effect of the covenant was not to impose the liability for any additional cesses upon the landlords. KRISHNA CHUNDRA BASU v. MOHENDRA NATH BASU, 13 C.L.J. 212=9 Ind. Cas. 704.

(2)—Act XVII of 1876—Not land-revenue.—A cess is not land-revenue within the meaning of the U.P. Act XVII of 1876. JANKI BARSARAN v. RAMKUMAR DAS, 3 O.C. 823.

(3)—Cess and rent distinguished.—The primary notion of a cess is a payment not for the benefit of the landlord, but a payment for some purpose of public convenience, such as sanitation, police and the like. The words "rent" "cess" and so forth, must be interpreted with reference to the meaning attached to them at the time for which the payments are claimed. Muhtarfa or rent of certain plots of land in the use and occupation of a Chipi a non-agricultural raiyat residing in the Abadi and carrying on the business of calico-printing, is not a cess and is therefore recoverable as rent. ABDUL HAI v. NATHUA, 1 A.L. 537.

(4)—"Khurcha," an illegal cess.—The "Khurcha" is an illegal cess. A zemindar has no right to levy it from his tenant. NAGENDRA BALA DASSI v. GURU DOYAL MUKERJI, 30 C. 1011=7 C.W.N. 535.

(5)—Contract to pay.—Where the talukdar has engaged to pay certain cesses for roads, schools, etc., he cannot recover them from the biswadars, unless they are bound to pay them by some positive law, or have engaged or have consented to do so; nor is any individual biswadar bound to pay merely because his co-partners have agreed to pay or have paid them. DHUNEE RAM v. MOORLEE DHUR, 2 Agra 326.

(6)—Liability to pay cess—Holders under biswadar—Contract to pay.—Held that if the biswadars were not liable to cesses claimed, those holding under them could not be liable to plaintiff's claim; and that the liability of the defendants, whether they be lessees or mortgagees under the biswadars, must depend, firstly on the liability on the biswadars themselves and secondly, on the terms of the lease or mortgage under which they are found to be in possession. DHUNEE RAM v. MOORLEE DHUR, 2 Agra 325.

(7)—Cess not avowed or sanctioned—Right of suit to recover.—A cess which was not avowed or sanctioned, cannot be recovered by suit, nor can it be taken into account in fixing the Government-revenue at the settlement. SHEIKH BISHARUT ALLY v. SEETUL MISSER, 1 N.W.P. 37.

(8)—Act XIX of 1844—Abolition of cesses on trades—Duty on cotton exported from Broach, whether "a tax upon a trade" within the Act.—The late plaintiff-appellant was the managing proprietor of a temple in Broach and, in that capacity, he claimed to be entitled to a lago or perquisite or tax, of two annas per bale on all cotton brought in and exported from Broach. It was contended for the appellants that, though the tax in question was one affecting trade, it could not therefore be deemed a cess upon a trade within the meaning of that expression as intended by Act XIX of 1844. Their Lordships of the Judicial Committee were, however, of opinion that the cess properly came within the purview of the Act and it had therefore been abolished by the Act. It was a cess of a mixed kind, local and indirect, upon a particular trade—the trade of cotton buyer carried on in Broach—attaching when the article of merchandise in which the trader deals is bought in Broach and exported from Broach. SHRI KALYANARAIJI v. THE MOFUSSIL COMPANY, LIMITED, 14 B. 326, P.C.=17 I.A. 103. [Appr., 5 Bom. L.R. 703.]

JEEUTOOLLAH PARAMANICK v. JUGODINDRO NARAIN ROY, 22 W.R. 12. [F., 8 C. 730.]

(10)—Declaratory suit.—A Government lessee cannot, where there is no contract, sue for declaration of right to levy a cess upon a jotedar grazing his cattle on his own jote within the precincts of the lessee's mehal. BHUGEERATH SHIKDAR v. RAM NARAIN MUNDUR, 9 W.R. 299.

(11)—Government revenue, and public cesses.—Revenue and the public cesses constitute a standing encumbrance and first charge upon the land subject to them. CHATRAPUT SINGH v. GRINDRA CHUNDER ROY, 6 C. 389=7 C.L.R. 456. [Disc., 30 C. 778=8 C.W.N. 357.]

(12)—Dak cess—Dak cess regarded as rent, when.—Where dak cess is claimed under the contract by which the rent is payable, according to the definition of the word "rent" as contained in the Bengal Tenancy Act, it must be regarded as rent, that is to say, as a part of what is lawfully payable in money for use and occupation of the land held by the tenant. WATSON & CO. v. SREE KRISTO BHUMICK, 21 C. 132.

(13)—Cess leviable according to village custom—Re marriage of widows—Maintainability of suit—Act XIX of 1873 (N.W.P. Land Revenue Act), s. 66—Requisites of a valid custom—Entry of cess—Not conclusive evidence of custom—Cesses leviable on marriage—Inapplicability of English analogies.—A Civil Court cannot enforce a cess leviable according to village custom on the re-marriage of widows of a particular sect, when such cess is not recorded in the settlement record, under the general or special sanction of the Local Government. (S. 66, N.-W.P. Land Revenue Act). Among the conditions essential for establishing a custom are that it is of remote antiquity, that it has been continued and acquiesced in, that it is reasonable, and is certain and not indefinite in its character. The mere entry of a customary cess by a settlement officer may be important evidence of custom, but it is not conclusive proof of it. Per Stuart, C. Code), s. 586—Second appeal.—The amount, which a putnidar agrees to pay to the zemindar on account of the chowkidari tax, is paid quite as much on account of the occupation of land of the mouza by him as that which is expressly called the rent, and is part of the ground rent quite as much as the latter. A stipulation for the payment of such amount cannot be regarded as one for the "imposition of an arbitrary or indefinite cess," within the meaning of s. 3, Reg. V of 1812, or for an imposition "under the denomination of abwab, mathout, or the like application in addition to the actual rent" within the meaning of s. 74 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, for the imposition here depends, primarily not upon the will of the zemindar, but upon the law of the land (Bengal Act VI of 1870). territory, by the exclusion of a certain district from the Regulations and Codes in force there, and from the jurisdiction of all the High Courts, with a view to the establishment therein of a native jurisdiction under British supervision and control, cannot be done without a Legislative Act, under the provisions of 3 and 4 Wm. IV. Cap. 85, s. 43, 24 and 25 Vic., Cap. 67, s. 22 and 24 and 25 Vic., Cap 104, s. 9. [Expl., 33 C. 219, P.C.=10 C.W.N. 361=3 C.L.J. 395=8 Bom. L.R. 129=3 A.L.J. 250=16 M.L.J. 115=1 M.L.T. 115=33 I.A. 1] An agreement on the part of the Government of India whereby they purported to transfer certain British territories from ordinary British jurisdiction to the supervision, laws and regulations of a Native State Political Agency, does not amount to a cession of British territory to a Native State. Such a cession, being a transaction too important in its consequences, both to Great Britain and to subjects of the British Crown, must be strictly proved and cannot be established by any uncertain inferences from equivocal acts. [R., 16 P.L.R. 1904.] The Governor-General in Council being precluded by St. 24 & 25 Vic., Ch. 67, s. 22 from legislating directly as to the sovereignty or dominion of the Crown over any part of its territories in India, or as to the allegiance of British subjects, cannot, by any Legislative Act (e.g., Evidence Act I of 1872) purporting to make a notification in a Government Gazette conclusive evidence of a cession of territory, exclude enquiry by the Court as to the nature and lawfulness of that cession. The jurisdiction of a British Court, over the subject-matter of a suit and the parties thereto, where it is territorial, and the territory ceases to be British by any valid cession, can no longer be exercised, whatever may be the stage or condition of the litigation at the time of such cession. [5 B. 249, 8 C. 985.] Semble—that the general and abstract doctrine laid down by the High Court of Bombay that it is beyond the power of the British Government, without the concurrence of the Imperial Parliament, to make any cession of territory within the jurisdiction of any of the British Courts in India, in time of peace to a foreign power, is not sound. DAMODAR GORDHAN v. DEORAM KANJI. 1 B. 367, P.C. =3 I.A. 102=1 A.C. 322=25 W.R. 261. [F., 2 A. 1]

(2)—British Territory in India—Power of the Crown to cede—Form or manner of such grant or cession—Jurisdiction of British Indian Courts over ceded territory.—The Crown is competent to cede territory in its Indian dominions, to a foreign prince or a feudatory chief, without the intervention of Parliament. The prerogative of the Crown is exercised with the advice and through the agency of the responsible ministers of the Crown. Where it is shown that a cession of territory was effected by the Government of India, that it was accepted by the Secretary of State, as fulfilling instructions conveyed to the Government of India, and that it was approved by Her Majesty's Government, there is sufficient evidence of a cession by the Crown of such territory. (1 B. 367, F.) [R., 16 P.L.R. 1904.] Whether there has been a cession in sovereignty is a question of fact to be decided, not merely by the form or language of the documents, by which the grant or cession was made, but also by a consideration of other facts and circumstances, tending to show the nature and effect of such grant or cession. The Courts of British India have no jurisdiction over property in ceded territory ; they cannot, therefore, order the sale of lands situated in such territory. LACHMI NARAIN v. RAJA PARTAP SINGH, 2 A. 1. [R., 16 P.L.R. 1904.]

(3)—Power of Secretary of State for India to cede territory—East India Company—Powers of Indian Legislature—Dismemberment of State—Evidence Act, s. 113.—The Secretary of State for India in Council did not succeed to the power to cede territory under St. 21 & 22, Vic. c. 106, when the Government of India was, by that statute, transferred to Her Majesty, inasmuch as such a power was not possessed by the East India Company. The Indian Legislature cannot make and the Crown cannot sanction, a law having for its object the dismemberment of the State in times of peace, as by such a law the authority of Parliament, and of those unwritten laws and constitutions of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, whereon depends the allegiance of persons to the Crown of the United Kingdom, must, of necessity be affected. S. 113, Evidence Act (I of 1872), therefore, though not disallowed, is not protected by s. 24 of Stat. 24 & 25, Vic. c. 67, and the direction therein contained, that a notification in the Gazette of India, that any portion of British territory has been ceded to any Native State, Prince, or Ruler shall be conclusive proof that a valid cession of territory took place on the date mentioned in such notification, cannot be followed. (3)—Vendor accepting inadequate price—Promotion of unnecessary litigation and corrupt motive.—A transaction is not to be necessarily regarded as champertous, merely because the vendor accepted an inadequate price on account of his needs. To constitute champerty or maintenance, there must be something in the transaction tending to promote unnecessary litigation and tainted with corrupt motives. GURUSAMI v. SUBBARAYYA, 12 M. 118. [F., 2. N.L R. 17.]

(4)—Champerty and maintenance—Agreements contrary to public policy—Assignment—Rights of third party to impeach.—There may be a valid transfer of property for the purpose of financing a suit, upon the terms that the property or the proceeds realised from the litigation shall be divided between the transferor and transferee, irrespective of the fact whether or not there was any agreement for the payment of consideration "win or lose." The duty of the Court in such a case is to determine whether or not the agreement is a fair agreement to supply funds and does not purport to have been made so as to be inequitable or for improper objects, as for the purpose of gambling in litigation or of injuring others by encouraging unrighteous suits. (4 I.A. 23=2 C. 233, F.) In ordinary cases it is a rule that, where an assignee sues on his assignment and proves it, an adverse party cannot take the objection that

(5)—Agreement to convey property after decree in lieu of expenses of litigation—Reversionary heir—Agreements opposed to public policy—Wagering transaction—Contract for sale.—Where, after the death of a Hindu widow, the reversioner, who was out of possession, entered into an agreement with the plaintiff, under which the latter was to provide the entire expenses of the litigation and in return therefor the former undertook, on obtaining possession of the property in question, to make over one-half of the same to the plaintiff, held that the agreement was not void either on the ground that it was opposed to public policy or that it was of the nature of a wagering transaction. Held, further, that the agreement did not amount to a sale and did not confer on the plaintiff any interest in the property capable of being enforced by a suit against the parties in possession who were not themselves bound by the terms of the agreement. INDER SINGH v KESRI SINGH, 14 O.C. 139. (20 C. 843, R.; 8 O.C. 155, 11 O. C. 301. D.)

(6)—Champerty—Property, subject-matter of suit—Sale of a share—Validity.—Held, that there is no rule of Indian law which prohibits the transfer of a share of property merely because the property is the subject of litigation. SADHANMAL LEKHRAJ v. SIRDAR BIBI, 2 Sind. L.R. 76.

(7)—Unconscionable bargain.—Where certain persons sold their land worth about Rs. 25,000 for Rs. 4,000 as they were in urgent need of funds to conduct a litigation regarding that land and certain other lands, and the conduct of the litigation was taken from the hands of the vendors and entrusted to the vendee who was to advance about Rs. 4.000, the sale-amount, for the expenses of the litigation, held, that the transaction ought to be relieved against, as unfair advantage was taken of the pressing difficulties and necessitous circumstances of the vendors to force upon them a bargain which was hard and unconscionable. Assuming that plaintiff (vendee) honestly believed that the vendor had a good and honest claim, the offer to secure his advances upon the whole estate was more than ample, and if he did not believe the claim to be a good one, the advance was of a champertous character and for the mere purpose of speculative litigation. VIJAYARAGHAVA v. PRANAL ANNE 1 M.L.J. 340.

(9)—English Law—Conveyance of property tending to foster gambling in litigation.—Though the English rule against champerty and maintenance does not prevail in this country in its entirety, still, a conveyance of property, which tends to foster and promote gambling in litigation, is void as being clearly unconscionable, speculative and opposed to public policy. DEBI DAYAL SAHOO v. BHAN PERTAB SINGH, 31 C. 433=8 C.W.N. 408. (2 C. 233, 8 M.I.A. 170, R.)

(10)—Sudder Dewanny Adawlut Madras—Agreement contingent upon a certain event—Non-occurrence of such an event—Champerty—Assignment of right of action.—The Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, at Madras, dismissed a suit on the ground that the facts disclosed a case of champerty—a question not raised by the pleadings, or in the Court below. Held, by the Judicial Committee, that, as that objection was not raised, or the points recorded by the Court, as required by Madras Regulation XV of 1816, s. 10, cl. 3, the dismissal upon such ground could not be maintained, as the objection, founded upon the English doctrine of champerty, ought not to be noticed by the Court upon a mere inference arising incidentally from the evidence in the suit. K., being in urgent want of money, entered into an agreement in writing with N., acting as the agent of F., for an advance of Rs. 19,000. The agreement recited that N had undertaken to procure this amount from F., on his return, he being then absent from the place where the agreement was executed, and K promised, in consideration of the loan, to grant N, a lease of his Zemindary, and it was provided that K should, on F's arrival, execute a regular deed. N, could only accommodate K, with a part of the proposed loan, and as the matter was urgent, and F's return was expected to be within a few days, it was verbally agreed that the remaining portion of the loan should be advanced within eight days. F, did not return till nineteen days after, when he was willing to make the advance required; but, in the interim, and after fifteen days from the date of the agreement, K., from pressure for money, had been obliged to get the advance from another party, and had, thereupon granted him a lease of his Zemindary. N, then brought a suit for specific performance of the agreement. He afterwards died, when his heir assigned N's interest under the agreement to F, who, thereupon, brought an action against K, for breach of contract. The Civil Court awarded damages for the breach, but, upon appeal, the Sudder Court dismissed the suit, on the ground that the assignment by N's heir to F, was void for champerty. Held, that, as N, was only the agent of F, the party really interested in the performance of the agreement, the assignment by his heir of his interest under the agreement, for the purpose of enabling F, to bring the suit, was not champerty or maintenance, as it was wholly unnecessary as F, was suing in respect of his own interest for a breach of contract. Held, further, that, as the agreement to grant the lease was incomplete in itself, and conditional upon the advance by F. within eight days, a delay of nineteen days, in the circumstances of the want of money by K, to meet his pressing demands, was an unreasonable delay, which defeated the object of the loan, and avoided the agreement to grant the lease. By the English Law, to maintain an action for champerty or maintenance, it is necessary to establish that the transaction was against good policy and justice, or tending to promote unnecessary litigation. FISCHER v. KAMALA NAICKER, 3 W.R. 33, P.C.=8 M.I.A. 170.

(12)—Hindu widow—Suit by reversioner to restrain waste—Champerty—Gambling transaction—Limitation—Jurisdiction.—B, a childless widow, instituted a suit against the surviving brothers of her husband who retained the enjoyment and use of the whole estate, for the recovery of her husband's share in the family property. On the 4th April 1859, during the pendency of that suit, she entered into an agreement with G, by which after reciting the material facts as to the condition of the family and of the property and the nature of her claim and stating that she was unable from proverty to prosecute that claim, she assigned all which she might be entitled to recover and receive from the joint estate in right of her deceased husband, together with all interest and accumulations which had accrued or might thereafter accrue thereon, and all benefit and advantage to be had or derived from the suit about to be instituted; and she appointed G, her attorney, to institute and carry on any suit or suits in her name for the purpose of recovering her right and share in the property, and it was then agreed that of the property, etc., which might be recovered, G should, in the first place, retain one moiety for his own absolute use and benefit by way of remuneration and reward for his trouble and labour in the conduct and management of the contemplated suits and proceedings, and as to the remaining moiety, that he should repay himself all such sums as he might from time to time have advanced and paid for the maintenance of B, with interest at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum, and also all such sums and costs as he might from time to time have advanced or been put to in carrying on and managing the suits, with 12 per cent. per annum interest, and should pay over the residue to B herself. The suit was subsequently withdrawn. On 10th May, 1859, B by G filed a fresh bill against her husband's surviving brothers for recovery of her husband's share in the estate together with accumulations. On 19th August, 1861, a decree was made by the Supreme Court in that suit for a large sum of money out of the joint estate, the whole to be enjoyed by her as a Hindu widow in the manner prescribed by the Hindu Law. On 14th November, 1860, G's interest in the assignment of April 1859 was assigned to H. In pursuance of the said decree, a large sum of money was deposited in Court. On the 22nd February, 1866, the daughter and the daughter's son of the husband of B, on behalf of the reversionary heirs, instituted a suit in the Zilla Court of Hooghly against B, G and H, the two first defendants being resident in Hooghly and H a resident of Calcutta. On the application of the last two defendants, the suit was in April 1866 removed into the High Court. In that suit, the plaintiffs sought to have the agreement of 4th April 1859 between B and G (together with any sub-assignments as might have been made on the footing of it, set aside as being a void contract, and asked for an order that the money should be paid into Court and there kept during the life of B for the benefit of the reversionary heirs. Held that, as the plaintiffs distinctly asked for relief against contemplated waste, the suit was not barred by lapse of time as the cause of action did not arise until the waste was about to be committed. Held, in appeal, by Peacock, C. J. and Macpherson, J., that the plaintiffs were entitled to maintain the suit for the relief sought and for the protection of property, i e., to restrain waste and to prevent the payment of the money out of Court to G. Held by Peacock, C.J., that the assignment of the 8-anna share, as security for the advances and expenses which G or his assignees might reasonably and properly make or incur for the maintenance of the said B and for carrying on the necessary proceedings to enforce her rights with 12 per cent. interest on such advances, was not void, but that it created a charge upon that 8-anna share of the property which was binding upon the reversionary heirs to the extent of such advances and expenses, and that there was a legal necessity for such charge. But as regards that part of the deed by which the other 8-anna share of the property to be recovered was assigned to G and his assigns for his and their own use as remuneration for their trouble and labour to be bestowed in the conduct and management of the suits, the deed was not binding upon the plaintiffs or upon the persons who, upon the death of B, the widow, might be entitled to take by inheritance the property of her deceased husband, if not upon the ground of champerty, upon the ground that it was an unconscionable bargain and a speculative, if not gambling contract. (8 M.I.A. 170, 2 B.L.R. P. C. 111, R.) Held also that the defendant H, by joining in the application to have the suit removed into the High Court, admitted the jurisdiction of the Court to try the case in the exercise of the extraordinary original civil jurisdiction and that he could not afterwards dispute the jurisdiction. Held, by Macpherson, J., that the suit having been removed to the High Court, and all the parties being thus brought before a Court which would have had jurisdiction if the suit had been in the first instance instituted in it, the original want of jurisdiction was cured and no question as to it could any longer be raised. Held, by Phear, J., that the transaction of 1859 was one purely of a gambling character. The law which forbids and makes void all acts contrary to public policy and subversive of the general interests of society, is in force at least within the Presidency towns. It was part of the Law of England in 1726, it is so still, and there is nothing whatever in the circumstances of this country to make it inapplicable here. The contract which the plaintiff impeached is vicious to a degree, and offends the law under which private contracts may be void upon public grounds. Such a Law was introduced into Calcutta by the Charter of 13th George I. There is a power inherent in every Court of Justice which receives its authority from the state to subordinate the interests of private persons to those of the public, and to take care, where the two are in conflict, that the latter should prevail. Held, on appeal, by Macpherson, J., that the transaction between G and B was according to English Law, illegal as being against public policy and the whole matter was a mere gambling speculation and that the deed of the 4th April was void as against the reversioners as being contrary to public policy, save so far as it operated as a charge on an 8 anna share, for all costs and advances, etc., properly paid, with interest. Held by Peacock, C.J., and Macpherson, J. that the case having been transferred from the Hooghly Court, the High Court must apply the same law and equity which ought to have been applied if the suit had been tried in the Court at Hooghly. Per Macpherson, J.—The law applicable to the case if tried in the Court of Hooghly was precisely the same as the English Law applicable to it. (14)—Apparently champertous agreement held not to be so—Maintenance—Public policy—Parties to suits.—One M H., being apprehensive that (in consequence of an action of trespass in the Supreme Court which M. R. and A. R. had brought against P P.) he was in danger of being deprived of a piece of land of which he was then possessed, entered into an agreement with K. N., that he, K. N. should conduct the pending case at his own cost and necessary expenses and that after M. H, should have proved that the piece of land was his sole property, K.N. and M.H. should erect a building on it at their joint expense, and that the rents and profits of such building should be enjoyed by K. N. und M. H. jointly during the life-time of M. H., after whose death the property, with the building, was to be the sole and absolute property of K. M. Held that the above agreement (when considered in connection with its surrounding circumstances) did not favour of maintenance or champerty, nor was it void as being against public policy. The question as to how far the English law relating to maintenance and champerty is applicable to Hindus in the presidency towns considered. Quœre.—whether that law was ever applicable to cases where pecuniary assistance is afforded to defendants. Where K. N., claiming under the above agreement, sued to recover the property comprised in it from the mortgagee of the administrator of M. R was to pay G., Rs. 50 in certain proportions, which R was to lose if the suit was not decided in favour of G. G recovered the land, and R. then sued him upon the above agreement. No issue was taken in the Court of first instance on the question whether the agreement was void for champerty. An issue was raised on this question by the appellate Court, and (no evidence being taken) was decided in favour of the defendant. Held in special appeal that, as it was not manifestly apparent on the face of the proceedings that the agreement was against morality or public policy, the appellate Court ought not to have held it void. Semble, that the above agreement was not void on the ground of champerty; at any rate, that it was capable of explanation by a consideration of the surrounding circumstances which the plaintiff should have had an opportunity of giving in evidence. In considering and deciding upon objections to the civil contracts of natives of India on the ground of maintenance or champerty the general principles as regards public policy and the administration of justice must be looked to. To constitute maintenance, there should appear the instigation of improper litigation with a bad purpose or motive, contrary to public policy and justice. Champerty is a species of maintenance and of the same character, but with the additional feature of a condition or bargain providing for a participation in the subject-matter of a suit. (23)—Suit for account and redemption of mortgage, whether maintainable by assignee of equity of redemption—Assignment of such equity, not bad as champertous.—Plaintiff sued to redeem two mortgages as assignee of the equity of redemption, to which the defendant pleaded among other things, that the assignment to the plaintiff was champertous. The Subordinate Judge found that the assignment to the plaintiff was a gambling transaction entered into with the object of gaining the spoils of an unrighteous litigation and was therefore null and void as opposed to public policy. There was however, nothing in the evidence in the case to show that the plaintiff entered into the arrangement with his assignor with any other motive than to avail himself of a defect in defendant's title and to redeem the mortgaged property in the hope of deriving profit. The equity of redemption in the mortgagor is an interest in the land, which it is open to any one to purchase, however speculative the transaction might be under the circumstances of a particular case Consequently, though the assignment of such equity in this case might not be a praiseworthy one in foro conscientiæ, it was not such as the Court could regard as a transaction opposed to public policy having been entered into with the object of gaining the

It was not a case in which the plaintiff had acquired an improper interest in the unrighteous litigation of other people, nor was there any other circumstance making it champertous. An assignment between Hindus of property the subject-matter of litigation, on conditions which constitute champerty, is not on that ground invalid. JADUBINDU ODHIKAREE v. (28)—Agreement to furnish money for litigation and divide property recovered—Champerty—Public policy.—An agreement to furnish money for litigation on the terms of sharing the property recovered is not necessarily void in India, unless accompanied by circumstances which, according to the dictum of the Privy Council in 1 I.A. 241 lead to the conclusion that it was not a "bona fide one for the acquisition of an interest in the subject of the litigation, but an illegitimate transaction got up for the purpose merely of spoil, or of litigation, disturbing the peace of families, and carried on from a corrupt and improper motive." (29)—Agreement to purchas equity of redemption pending litigation—Application by purchaser to be added as defendant—Right of purchaser to be made party under s. 32, Civ. Pro. Code.—In execution of the decree obtained by the plaintiff A in a previous suit, a certain house was attached by him, D-1 and D 2 the first and second defendants in this suit having then preferred a claim to the house, the attachment was raised, and the plaintiff brought the present suit to establish his right to attach the house in execution. D-1 and D-2 alleged in defence that the prior decree had been fraudulently obtained by the plaintiff. Some months before the present suit was filed. D-1 had mortgaged the house in question to the present applicant H who made a further advance to D-1 on the same security a few weeks after the institution of the suit, and also entered into an agreement with D-1 to purchase the property, the sale to be completed on and immediately after the decision of the present suit. By the agreement, D-1 undertook to defend the present suit by A, and it was arranged that, if the suit should result in A being allowed to execute his decree against the house, "the said H shall be at liberty to cancel the contract of purchase." D-1 however, subsequently intimated to H his intention to withdraw from the defence, and thereon H applied for and obtained a rule against A, D-1 and D-2 to show cause why he should not be made a party defendant to the suit. The application was opposed on the ground that the agreement was champertous, but it was held that it was not of such a nature but amounted to an absolute sale to H of the equity of redemption in D-1 subject to a power conferred on the purchaser to annul or cancel the sale in a certain event, and H had acquired such an interest in the property that the Court would exercise its discretion properly only by holding him to be entitled to be made a party to the suit under ss. 32 and 372 of the Civ. (30)—Agreement to supply funds to suitor and share property in litigation—Not opposed to public policy unless extortionate and unconscionable.—Agreements to share the subjects of litigation, if recovered, in consideration of supplying funds to carry it on, are not in themselfes opposed to public policy; but, if they are extortionate and unconscionable, effect should not be given to them. (4 I.A. 23=2 C. 233, F.) It was found in this case that the consideration for the transfer was considerably less than the true value of the property dealt with. The transferor, who succeeded in the litigation with the aid of the champertor, declined to give him either the property conveyed or damages sufficient to cover the costs of the litigation. The High Court held that the champertor was entitled to a decree for the amount of money actually advanced with interest thereon, but not to the reward actually stipulated for, which in the circumstances was excessive and unconscionable. This view was affirmed by the Judicial Committee. RAJA MOHKAM SINGH v. RAJA RUP SINGH, 15 A. 352. (31)—And maintenance—Public policy—Right of suit.—The English Laws of Champerty and maintenance are not specifically in force in India. Contracts in the nature of champerty should be held invalid in India only on the ground of their being opposed to public policy. An agreement to supply funds for a litigation is not, per se, champertous. But, if such an agreement is found to be extortionate, unconscionable and inequitable, or if it were entered into for improper objects (e.g.) for gambling in litigation or with the object of injuring third parties by encouraging unrighteous suits, the Courts would not enforce it. (7) Indefiniteness—Partition-deed—Stipulation to pay, and in default, to pay twice the amount from the properties—Whether a charge is created.—In a partition-deed it was stipulated that one of the parties should discharge a certain debt, and, in default, it was provided that, if either of the parties should fail to observe any of the provisions of the deed, the party in default should pay to the other party, who should have sustained loss, twice the amount from their properties. The question was as to whether the words "pay... the amount from their properties" created a charge. Held that the words "properties" referred to the properties mentioned in the schedules to the deed, and consequently there was no indefiniteness. The words were sufficiently apt to create a charge. Obiter.—Even if the language were general (and not specific as in this case) it does not follow that a charge is not created by reason of the fact that the language is general, since a distinction should be drawn between wideness of language and indefiniteness of language. MANIKKAM PILLAI v. AUDINARAYANA PILLAI, 7 M.L.T. 158=5 Ind. Cas. 917=20 M.L.J. 407. (3 M, 35, Doubted.)

(8)—Co-sharers undertaking to pay mortgage-debt in certain proportion—Agreement to realize thee excess from the person and property of the defaulting co-sharer—Whether such agreement creates a charge.—Some property, which had previously been mortgaged devolved upon certain persons by inheritance. They agreed to divide the property amongst themselves and to pay the mortgage debt proportionately to their shares. The agreement contained a stipulation that "if for any reason, any of the co-sharers, fails to pay the debt, then the co-sharer, who has to pay any amount of the debt in excess of his share shall be entitled to get the same from the person and the property of the defaulting co-sharer." Held, that the stipulation in the agreement did not create any charge upon the property of any of the co-sharers in respect of any sum paid by any other co-sharer in excess of his rateable share of the debt. The co-sharer paying in excess could, however, recover such excess from the defaulting co-sharer by the proper process of law. KISHEN LAL v. BHAWAH KUAR, 8 Ind. Cas. 864. (14 A. 162, F.)

(5)—Suit for administration of will—Oudh—East India Company— A testator devised considerable property, both real and personal, for charitable purposes, amongst which he directed certain sums to be set apart for the liberation of persons imprisoned for debt, and for the endowment and establishment of a College at Lucknow, in the dominions of the King of Oudh. A suit having been instituted in the Supreme Court of Calcutta, to administer the will, the Court directed an inquiry whether the College could be established, and the bequest for the liberation of prisoners carried into effect, with reference to the testator's intention and the sanction of the Government at Lucknow. On the subject of the bequest for the liberatton of prisoners, the Master found in the negative, and reported that, with respect to the establishment of the College, there was not sufficient evidence to enable him to state whether it could be established with reference to the testator's intention and the sanction of the Lucknow Government, but, as no further evidence was likely to be obtained, he appended the correspondence with the British Resident at Lucknow, by which it appeared that, though the King of Oudh did not object to the establishment of the College, he held out no expectation that he would afford it his countenance or support. The report having been confirmed, and a decree made thereon, the Supreme Court, on a re-hearing of the cause, directed an inquiry whether the Governor-General in Council had the means of giving effect to the bequest to the College at Lucknow, and whether he was willing to receive the funds bequeathed for that purpose: the Master found that the Governor-General was willing to receive the funds, but did not state whether he had the means of giving effect to the bequest; the Court, however, thereupon decreed the payment of the funds to the Governor-General, or such person as he should appoint. Upon appeal to the King in Council, held, by the Judicial Committee, that, though the reference to the Master on the re-hearing, after the confirmation of his previous report, was informal, and if objected to at the time, would have been fatal, yet, as no objection had been taken, and the Master had not satisfied the whole of the inquiry by stating whether the Governor-General had the means of carrying the testator's intention into effect, that part of the decree affirming the Master's report, and directing the payment of the fund to the Governor-General, must be reserved, and the case sent back to ascertain that fact; Their Lordships being of opinion that, under the existing relations between the East India Company and the King of Oudh, an arrangement might be made for the appointment of a trustee to carry the Lucknow bequest into effect, under the direction, and subject to the jurisdiction, of the Supreme Court. (6)—Charity—Failure of gift—Doctrine of cypres—Jurisdiction of Court, when arises—Power of appellate Court, interference with scheme—Duty of Court constructing scheme.—The principle of the doctrine of cypres, in relation to charities, is that the Court treats charity in the abstract as the substance of the gift and the particular disposition as the mode, so that, in the eye of the Court, the gift, notwithstanding the particular disposition may not be capable of execution, subsists as a legacy, which never fails and cannot lapse. It cannot be laid down as a general principle that the cypres doctrine is invariably displaced where the residuary bequest is to charity. The jurisdiction of the Court to act on the cypres doctrine arises upon the failure of a specific charitable bequest, whether the residue be given to charity or not, unless upon the construction of the will a direction can be implied that the bequest, if it fails, should go to the residue. Among charities there is nothing analogous to benefit of survivorship. An appellate Court will be reluctant to interfere with a cypres scheme formulated by a lower Court unless it be plainly wrong. The Court, while having regard to the other objects of the testator's bounty in constructing a scheme, ought to give its primary consideration to the gift, which has failed, and to a search for objects akin to it. A Lohana testator by his will gave a bequest of Rs. 7,500 for distribution of tramdis (brass pots) to the members of his caste and Saraswat Brahmins in Bombay; and he made another bequest to present tras (a kind of copper pot) and sugar candy among the members of his caste and Sarasvat Brahmins in 1440 villages in Cutch. (3)—Contract—Charter-party — Shipping — Misrepresentation as to tonnage of ship—Substantial part of contract—Condition precedent—Rule as to warranty in contract.—Where defendants chartered a ship from the plaintiff they might refuse to accept her in fulfilment of the charter party, on the ground of misdescription of the ship in respect of her tonnage, and may treat the contract as void by reason of the said misrepresentation by the plaintiff. In this case, the defendants in Bombay chartered a ship Runic from the plaintiff which was described in the charter-party as of the measurement of about 2,700—2,800 tons net register. From the evidence, it appeared that the defendants had never seen the vessel, and that the parties negotiated the charter-party in question on the basis of the tonnage of the vessel being as stated in the charter-party. The ship, however, turned out to be of the registered tonnage of 3,045 tons, and the defendants refused to accept her in fulfilment of the charter-party. Held that the representation in the charter-party as to the tonnage of the ship was intended to be a substantive part of the contract between the parties; that the statement in the charter-party as to the tonnage was a condition precedent of which the defendants were entitled to avail themselves, whether or not they would have suffered loss had they accepted the ship; and that the defendants were, therefore, justified in repudiating the contract. With regard to the statement in a contract descriptive of the subject-matter of it or of some material incident thereof, the true doctrine established by principle as well as authority is, generally speaking, that if such descriptive statement was intended to be a substantive part of the contract, it is to be regarded as a warranty, i.e., a condition on the failure or non-performance of which the other party may, if he is so minded, repudiate the contract in toto, and so be relieved from performing his part of it, provided it has not been partially executed in his favour. (4)—Charter-party—Mistake of fact—Mutual or unilateral — Rectification— Cancellation.—Where one of the parties to an agreement is under a misapprehension as to a certain date which date is a matter materially inducing the agreement, the mistake is not mutual but on one side only; and even if both parties had been under such a mistake, cancellation and not rectification should be ordered by Court, the agreement being then void under s. 20 of the Contract Act by reason of the common mistake as to an essential matter, i. e., the date in the present case. Courts of equity do not rectify contracts, they may rectify instruments purporting to have been made in pursuance of the terms of a contract. But it is necessary for a plaintiff to show that there was an actual contract concluded antecedent to the instrument sought to be rectified and that such contract is inaccurately represented in the instrument. HAJI ABDUL RAHMAN ALLARAKHIA v. THE BOMBAY AND PERSIA STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY, 16 B. 561.

(5)—Charter-party—Loading of cargo—Option of owners—Choice of port—Construction—Election—Effect of election once made.—By a charter-party made with the defendants, the plaintiff chartered the defendant's steamship to carry a full cargo of pilgrims from Jeddah to Calcutta. The charter-party provided that " the owners are to have the option of requiring the charterer to ship salt at Ras Rawaya or at Aden to fill up the lower holds of the steamer at a lump sum of Rs. 12,000 only, payable before delivery at port of discharge." The ship sailed under the charter-party and reached Jedda. The agent there gave the charterer notice calling on him " to destine the port where you intended to load the salt." The charterer paid a certain portion of the freight according to the terms of the contract and requested that the ship might be sent to Aden for the salt. Soon afterwards the captain, believing that no salt would be found at Aden, refused to go there unless the balance of the freight was paid down in advance. The charterer paid the money under protest and brought this suit to recover the whole sum he paid. Held that the plaintiff was entitled to a decree for the sums he was called upon to pay under the salt charter. Held, on a careful construction of the charter-party, that the option of choosing the port was with the plaintiff and the option, whether salt shall be shipped or not, was with the owners. Even assuming that the choice, of the port was, by the charter-party, with the defendants, the latter must be taken, under the circumstances of this case, to have elected to send the plaintiff to Aden; and having so elected, could not afterwards change their minds and require the plaintiff to go to Ras Rawaya. An election once definitely made is final, apart from all collateral considerations. (6)—"Safe port or as near thereunto as may safely get always afloat"—Ship unable to enter port or lie there without previous lightening—Rights of parties.—A charter-party was entered into between the plaintiffs and the defendant, by which it was agreed, inter alia, that a steamer Ossian should load from the charterers a full and complete cargo, and "being so loaded, should therewith proceed direct all the way under steam, via Suez Canal, to a safe port in the Mediterranean (Spanish ports excluded), as ordered on signing bills of lading, or so near thereunto as she may safely get, and deliver the same to the said charterers of their assignees always afloat." Marseilles was named at first as the port of discharge, but subsequently, and before the cargo was completely loaded, the defendant was informed that the destination of the said vessel would not be Marseilles but Cette, and bills of ladings for the cargo already loaded were made out for Cette and were tendered to the defendant for signature. The defendant refused to sign the bills of lading because they were not for Marseilles, and refused to sail for Cette, as the vessel's draught of water when loaded was such that she could not have entered or lain afloat in Cette harbour without discharging a portion of her cargo. Held that, assuming that the plaintiffs (the charterers) had power to alter the destination of the ship from Marseilles, the port of discharge at first named, there was no breach of the charter-party by the defendant to refuse to sail to Cette or to sign bills of lading for that port, because, it was found that in the latter port the vessel cannot, by reason of her draught of water, lie and discharge "always afloat" without being previously lightened. Held also that the result would not be otherwise even if the charterers undertook to incur all the expenses necessary for lightening the vessel. of voyages in the interim, carrying what freight they liked and the agents of the ship-owners covenanted that the steamer should be provided "with a proper and sufficient crew of officers, seamen, engineers, stokers, firemen and other necessary persons for working cargo with all despatch," it was held, that the parties contemplated only the method of unloading by the crew and that a suit by the charterers for damages for refusing to unload by stevedores would not lie. SOOPRAMONIAN SETTY v. HEILGERS, 5 C. 71=4 C.L.R. 377.

(8)—Misdescription in charter party as to tonnage of ship, whether renders voidable the contract to charter the ship—Indian Contract Act (IX of 1872), ss. 14, 19.—The point at issue in this case was whether the defendants who had chartered a ship of the plaintiffs for a voyage were, in law, entitled to treat the contract of charter party as void, on account of the erroneous statement of the plaintiffs in the charter-party as to the size and tonnage of the vessel. The erroneous nature of the above statement was established by evidence and it was of such a material kind as to have induced the defendants to charter the ship, which otherwise they would not have done. The plaintiffs had made positive assertions about the size and tonnage of the ship which assertions were not true and were not warranted by any information they had at the time. They caused the defendants to make a mistake as to the size of the vessel which in this case was the quality the parties had principally in view. The consent of the defendants to the charter-party in question having been caused by reason of such representation by the plaintiffs, the agreement in the charter-party was held to be, by reason of the provisions in s. 19 of the Indian Contract Act (IX of 1872), a contract voidable at the option of the defendants, "the party whose consent was so caused" within the meaning of the section. (9)—Contract—Mercantile Law — Shipper's lien on cargo for freight—Lien when lost.—By the general rule of Mercantile law, the owner of a ship has a lien on the cargo for the freight earned upon the voyage, but this lien may be lost by an express contract to the contrary in the charter-party or by the waiver of the right by some other document binding on the owner. (10)—Contract—Bill of lading—Delivery of cargo not conditional on payment of freight—Insolvency of charterer—Right of Captain of ship to retain cargo for freight due.—A person in London chartered a ship to load a cargo at Cardiff and unload it at Madras. By the terms of the charter-party, the freight was made payable in London on unloading and right delivery of the cargo, at the rate of 25 Sh. per ton on the quantity delivered. The charter-party then provided as to the time and mode of payment that such freight was to be paid one-third by freighter's acceptance at three months from the final sailing of the vessel from her last port in the United Kingdom and the remainder by like bill at three months from date of delivery at freighter's office in London, of the certificate of right delivery of the cargo agreeably to bill of lading. It further contained the stipulation that £ 150 was to be advanced in cash at port of discharge on account of the freight against the captain's draft at ninety days. The cargo was loaded and a bill of lading was given therefor. On the day the ship sailed from Cardiff, the owners drew a bill on the charterer at three months for £ 261. A few days later, the general agents in London of the Madras firm advanced money on account of the Madras firm and received as security for such advance the bill of lading blank-endorsed and sent it to the firm at Madras. Sometime afterwards the charterer accepted the bill for £ 261. The ship arrived at Madras after the charterer had suspended payment; and the Captain thereof refused to deliver the cargo but claimed to retain it for the value of the dishonoured bill and the balance of freight due. Held that the clauses in the charter-party clearly showed that the intention of the parties was that all freight was to be paid in London and that it was not affected by the insolvency of the charterer. The captain had no lieu on the cargo for the freight but was bound to deliver it to the firm at Madras. ARBUTHNOT v. DAIGRE, 2 M.H. C. 88.

(11)—Nomination of Ship's Agents by freighters—Suit for breach of clauses of charter-party—"Going, seeking" meaning of expression.—A charter-party made between the defendants (the owners of the Seaforth) and H & Co. (the freighters) provided that "the owners should employ at the ports of discharge the consignee nominated by the freighters to transact the ship business there inwards and outwards on the customary terms not exceeding 2½ per cent. on amount of freight payable inwards and 5 per cent. outwards. H and Co., nominated the plaintiffs to transact the ship's business in Bombay (a port of discharge) with the knowledge and consent of the master of the Seaforth, if the plaintiffs accepted and acted under such nomination. The defendants refused to pay the plaintiffs commission on the outward freight of the Seaforth, on the ground that under the circumstances under which such freight was procured, the plaintiffs were not, under the charter-party, entitled to receive commission on it. Held that the plaintiffs were sufficiently within the consideration of the charter-party to maintain a suit for the breach of such clauses of it as were inserted for their benefit. Meaning of the mercantile expression of a ship "going, seeking" discussed. BLACKWELL & CO. v. JONES & CO., 7 B.H.C.O.C. 144. [R., 6 Bom. L.R. 421.]

A letter of guarantee given by the holders of bills of lading for "the payment of the balance of freight due under the charter-party less any claim for short delivery," etc., was construed to refer to the balance of freight less any claim of the charterer against the owner, and not to extend to a claim arising out of the master signing bills of lading for more goods than were put on the vessel. (1)—Chinaman marrying a foreign woman of different religion and claiming to administer her estate after her death.—When a Chinese marries a woman in a foreign country and that woman is capable of possessing and does possess property, there may be a customary law governing the succession to such property. If she is a Buddhist and she dies leaving no children, her husband would be an heir and presumably entitled to administer. Where plaintiff, a Chinaman, and a follower of Confucius, who had two Chinese wives whom he had married in succession, on coming to Rangoon, went through a ceremony of marriage with one Ma Bi, a Burmese (Zerbadi) woman, and a Buddhist or a Mahomedan who lived with him and was recognised by the community as a wife and on Ma Bi's death, plaintiff applied for letters of administration to her estate and defendants failed to establish any rights as caveators, held, after consideration of the legality of the marriage, and of the rights which it gave to plaintiff in Ma Bi's estate after her death, that, in the circumstances, the plaintiff's claim was just and reasonable, and ordered accordingly. (3)—Inheritance among Chinese—Joint family property—Customs—Acquiescence—Division of property.—Plaintiff-respondent claimed certain property as having been wrongfully taken away from her by her husband Shwe Gan's brother, Nga Shan. On looking at the evidence, it was conclusively proved that the property so taken was Nga Shan's own. Originally all the property was the joint family property of the two brothers and their nephew Nga Shwe. After the death Shwe Gan, his widow, the plaintiff-respondent, went on living in common with Nga Shan, and after a year or so, when she desired to quit the household, a division was made between her and her brother-in-law by Chin elders, both parties touching the pipe or tube for sucking Kaung from Kaung pot in token of acquiescence, as usual in such matters among the Chin people; and Nga Shan removed from the house taking his portion of the goods with him. The first appeliate Court refused to be satisfied with this positive evidence of assent merely because the division was of recent date, and the plaintiff had brought the suit. Held that the plaintiff-respondent had accepted the division of property and could not now challenge or go back upon what had been done. started by plaintiff's predecessor in 1893. It was to consist of 14 tickets of Rs. 500 each and it was to continue for 13 years. Defendant, one of the subscribers, won a prize at the sixth drawing. A portion of the prize-money was paid to him by the plaintiff and the balance was reserved with the latter for payment to defendant when he gave security for payment of future subscriptions. It was found that defendant offered the security and that plaintiff defaulted to pay the balance reserved with him. It was also a condition that, in default of defendant's payment of any one instalment, all future instalments would become due at once. Plaintiff credited the unpaid prize-money towards subsequent instalments, and sued defendant for the last two instalments. Defendant pleaded that he was not liable to pay the future instalments, as plaintiff did not give him the balance of his prize-money, and that, as he made default in payment of the instalment due for 1900, all the instalments became then due and the suit was barred by limitation: Held, (1) that, apart from the special agreement, a default in payment of the prize-money did not relieve the defendant from liability to pay future subscriptions; (2) that, as it was found that plaintiff had waived the benefit of the stipulation for payment of all overdue instalments in default of any one instalment, the suit was not barred by limitation. (1)—Chowkidari Chakran lands, if form part of estate before and after resumption—Mortgage of Zemmaari before resumption—Accession to mortgaged property after resumption—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 70—Tenants holding for 50 years under ouowkidar—Whether acquire occupancy right—Chowkidari chakran lands do form part of the estate before resumption and re-settlement by the Collector. On their resumption, they form a separate estate for one purpose, that is, as being hypothecated for the payment of the Chowkidari settlement. A mortgage of the Zemindari executed before resumption would cover resumed chowkidari chakran lands upon their transfer to the zemindar ; for they would be accretions to the mortgage after release within the meaning of s. 70 of the Transfer of Property Act. Tenants, who have been holding under the chowkidar for fifty years or so, acquire occupancy rights, and are not liable to be ejected by the zemindar upon resumption and transfer to him of the chakran lands. RAKHAL DAS MUKHERJEE v. MADHAB CHANDRA SINGHA, 8 Ind. (2) — Resumption — Settlement — Zemindar and putnidar — Parent estate — Separation — Limitation—Registration in zemindar's sherista — Sale under Reg. VIII of 1819—Void or voidable—Share of profits.—The resumption of chaukidari chakran lands by Government and their subsequent transfer to the landlord do not separate them from the parent estate so as to create a new title in the proprietor. A suit by the patnidars for land so resumed and resettled with the proprietor is governed by arts. 142 or 144, Limitation Act. If the plaintiffs can prove their title as putnidars, it is no bar to their bringing such a suit that they are not registered in the zemindar's sherista as such. A sale under Reg. VIII of 1819 at which the defaulting putnidar purchases the putni benami is not void but voidable ; and if it is not avoided the right to the property remains in the actual purchasers. On settlement of the lands with the putnidar, the landlord is entitled not only to the amount assessed by the Collector under s. 49 of the Chaukidari Act as payable by him to the chaukidari fund, but also to a fair proportion of the profits accruing to the estate by virtue of the resumption and re-settlement. He is also entitled to be recouped for any additional expenses arising out of the transfer of the lands or the obligation to pay the sum assessed yearly to the chaukidari fund. HARECK CHAND BABU v. sells, his proceedings are irregular, but the sale is not necessarily or ipso facto void. If a Collector issues a notice under s. 6, instead of under s. 5 of Act XI of 1859, it is a mere irregularity which does not render the sale a nullity. MAHARAJA SIR JATINDRA MOHUN TAGORE BAHADUR v. (4)—Resumption—Title — Chowkidar, power to appoint.—Certain chowkidari chakran lands were resumed by the Government and transferred to the holder of the Zemindari, within which they were situated. Long anterior to this, the whole of the Zemindari, excluding certain lands in the khas possession of the Zemindar, had been granted in putni. The putnidar claimed to be entitled to the resumed lands. The Zemindar and the lessee from him resisted the claim, on the ground that, as under the putni lease, right was reserved to the Zemindar to appoint Chowkidars upon a vacancy arising in the office, the Zemindar was entitled to the lands upon resumption : Held that the fact that the Zemindar was entitled to make an appointment to the office of Chowkidar did not create in him an interest in the lands held by the Chowkidars which, upon resumption and transfer to the Zemindar, would pass to the putnidar, from whose lease they had not been excepted. It being found that the land was not Chaukidhari Charan land and did not lie within the Zemindari of the plaintiff, any transfer made by the Collector, in his favour under s. 50 of the Act, is not authorised by the Statute and does not confer any title on him. An order passed without jurisdiction need not be set aside and art. 14 of the Limitation Act, sch. II, does not apply to such a case. [R., 14 Bur. L.R. 59. F.B., 2 C.L.J. 306, 36 C. 726=10 C.L.J. 189 ; F., 33 C. 693.] An order of the Collector under s. 50 is of the nature of a vesting order and is not an order contemplated by the Limitation Act, sch. II, art. 14 and does not require to be set aside, specially at the instance of one who was not a party to it. Such a party has no cause of action until his possession has been interfered with. Art. 14 cannot be invoked against the defendant defending his possession unless the law makes the order final by reason of its not being contested within the specified time. The mere fact that the Collector has made the transfer does not raise any presumption that the land was Chaukidari Chakran land and that the Collector acted within the Statute. S. 114 of the Evidence Act has no application to such a case. (21 C. 627, 24 B. 435, F.) Per Pargiter. J., contra,—Under s. 114 of the Evidence Act there is a presumption that the resumption wat made legally, and by s. 62 of the Chaukidari Act, the resumption is final. The objection that the order of the Collector was illegal as the Collector had come to a wrong decision regarding the estate in which the land lay, is not valid as it is a question merely of an error in the decision of the Collector and not a question of jurisdiction. The defendant had his remedy by a suit to set aside the order of the Collector. Under art. 14 and s. 28 of Limitation Act, the defendant's title had ceased to exist, and he cannot set it up in defence. The Civil Court had no jurisdiction to go into the question of the resumption and the transfer. The burden of proof lay on the defendant to show that the transfer which was admittedly made by the Collector under the Act and which must be presumed to have been made rightly, was illegal. RAJA NARENDRA LAL KHAN v. JOGI HARI, 2 C.L.J. 107=32 C. 1107. (R., 14 Bur. L.R. 59. F.B.]

(6)—Resumption of, and transfer thereof, to Zemindar—Bengal Tenancy Act, s. 181, applicability of, to such land—Right of lessee claiming from one not having any right.—The Zemindari interest in a certain village belonged to two persons, each owning an eight-annas share therein. The Chowkidari Chakran land in the village was transferred by the Collector to the Zemindars under the provisions of Act VI of 1870, after rectifying the mistake, whereby the whole land had been given to one only of the Zemindars. The putnidar under one of the Zemindars granted, before rectification of the mistake, to the present defendant No. 4, a lease of the whole 16 annas of the land in question. The lessee from the putnidar under the other Zemindar, brought the present suit for a declaration of his right as lessee to an 8 annas share in the land. The defendants, who had settled with defendant No. 4, contended that the land in question was excepted from the operation of the Bengal Tenancy Act by s. 181 of the Act. They, also, contended that they were cultivators who had acquired, bona fide, a right to hold the lands from one whom they bona fide believed to have the right to let them into possession and were consequently either occupancy or non-occupancy raiyats not liable to be ejected as trespassers. Held, that the defendants-settlors got no more than the 8 annas share belonging to the Zemindar under whom the lease was obtained (20 C. 708, Not Appl.) Harington and Bodilly, JJ.—(8 C.W.N. 320, R.) S. 181 of the Act exempts from the operation of the Act any incident of any service tenure. The lands, when transferred to the Zemindar, become his Zerait land and not

raiyati land. Consequently, the lands in question stand unaffected by the Act. Mookerjee, J.—(10 M.I.A. 16, 8 C.W.N. 320, R.) The Chowkidari Chakran lands cease to be chakran lands as soon as they are enfranchised. Upon a transfer to the Zemindar, such lands are at his disposal, to be dealt with by him as mal or zerait at his option. In relation to these lands, the position of the Zemindar is identical with what might be imagined to have been his position when he had the entire lands of his Zemindary at his disposal, and had not settled any portion thereof, with cultivating tenants. There cannot be discovered any intelligent principle upon which a trespasser may be taken to have authority to impress upon resumed chakran lands a particular character, which can be determined at the choice of the true owner alone. The rule laid down in 20 C. 708 cannot be extended. The defendants who had settled with defendant No. 4, cannot, therefore, be said to have acquired the status of either occupancy or non-occupancy raiyats, and cannot successfully contend that the act of a person, who had no title whatsoever, but who sought to impose a raiyati character upon the lands, is binding upon the plaintiff, who is the representative of the true owner. In this view of the matter, s. 181 of the Act does not apply to the case. For, this section applies to service tenures so long as they possess the incidents thereof. And as soon as the service ceases, upon statutory resumption and transfer thereof to the Zemindar, the chakran lands lose all the incidents of a service tenure. SHAIKH JONAB ALI v. The determination of this question does not depend upon the decision of the question of the right of the putnidar to hold the chakran land, upon payment of additional rent. HARI DAS GOSWAMI v. specific performance of contract. The zemindar would be equitably entitled to refuse settlement asked by the putnidar, unless the putnidar agreed to the conditions as to payment of the assessment made by the Collector and a proportionate share in the profits such as the zemindar would in the circumstances be entitled to impose on him. Semble:—It is not correct to hold that the putnidar is not bound to pay to the zamindar more than the assessment made by the Collector. (9)—Bengal Act, VI of 1870, s. 50—Lands resumed by Government and transferred to the Zemindar—Right of Darpatnidars—Suit for khas possession and execution of proper deeds—Frame of suit—Pleadings.—Suit by plaintiffs, darpatnidars of a Mouza, against the Zemindar, for khas possession of certain lands and for the execution of a deed of transfer, on the allegation of the Zemindar having transferred all his rights to the patnidars, and the latter having similarly transferred all their rights to the plaintiffs. Subsequent to the creation of the tenures, the Government resumed the lands, and transferred them to the Zemindar, who made raiyati settlement of the same with others. It was contended that the suit was wrongly framed and it ought to have been one for specific performance of a contract without any prayer for possession, inasmuch as the Zemindar had no title to the lands at the time of the patni, and could not have transferred the same, and that the jural relation was merely that of an agreement to grant, and that agreement must be specifically enforced before the plaintiff could have a title to sue for possession. Held that the plaint was rightly conceived, and that the joining of the two prayers for execution of a deed of transfer and for recovery of possession is not repugnant to any rule of law. II, arts. 142, 144.*—In a suit for declaration of title to and recovery of possession of chur lands which had been diluviated more than twelve years before the suit, the plaintiffs proved their title and possession up to the time of diluviation, and alleged that the disputed lands had re-formed within twelve years of the suit. The defendants alleged and it was found that the lands in question came into existence some 30 years ago and have been gradully forming since then. How much was formed yearly and whether the chur was fully formed in five years could not be determined: Held, that the case should not be treated as though it were one of adverse possession falling within art. 144, Limitation Act, whereas the appropriate article was art. 142. (3)—Alluvial lands—Chur—Title by accretion to new formation.—The reforming of the land in the bed of a navigable river after considerable interval and frequent floods, is not prima facie to be ascribed to a loss from any particular portion of a riparian estate, nor is the land which has been removed by a sudden avulsion reclaimable, unless the circumstances supply evidence of identity. A title by accretion, to a new formation is not founded on equity of compensation, but on a general accretion by adherence to some particular land which may be termed the nucleus of accretion. The land gained will follow the title to that parcel to which it adheres. Such a title is not

established by mere proof of general inclusive boundaries of land, at a time long preceding the actual formation of the chur. A detached chur, independent of usage, in such a stream, would belong to neither riparian proprietor, and the circumstance that it was subtended by the land of one, would not be enough to entitle him to it. The mere cultivation of chur lands, like that of waste or jungle land, carries with it no prima facie character of usurpation or wrong. An undisputed possession and cultivation, even though for a few years only, would the more readily induce a purchase, and a purchaser bona fide and without notice might, with perfect honesty, and even with the favourable construction by a Court of Justice of his acts, defend his possession by insisting on strict legal proof of an adverse title. (48)—S. 15—Declaratory suit—Inability to ask for consequential relief.—The rule of law laid down by the Privy Council in Strimathoo Moothoo Vijia Ragoonadha v. Dorasinga Tevar (15 B.L.R. 106), to the effect that 'a declaratory decree cannot be made, unless there be a right to consequential relief capable of being had in the same Court or in certain cases in some other Court,' ought not to be understood as denying to the Courts of this country the power to grant decrees in any case, in which, independently of the provisions of s. 15 of Act VIII of 1859, they had the power to grant a decree. That power is the same as that of the Court of Chancery in England. This was a case in which the plaintiff might, beyond merely seeking the cancellation of a deed, have—(but he had not) asked for an injunction. The suit, however, was held maintainable and a declaratory decree alone was granted. RAM NEEDHEE KOONDOO v. RAJAH RUGHOO NATH NARAIN MULLO, 1 C. 456=25 W.R. 516.

(49)—S. 15—Declaratory decree—English Chancery Act, s. 50.—When the life-tenant has alienated property, the person who is entitled as reversioner, is entitled to a decree declaratory of his title under s. 15 of Act VIII of 1859. Although the words of s. 15 of Act VIII of 1859 are almost identical with those of s. 50 of the English Chancery Amendment Act, it does not follow that in any case in which the latter section is held inapplicable by the Courts of Chancery in England, the former section will be held to be equally inapplicable in India. The application of s. 15 of Act VIII of 1859 must be viewed in connection with the system of procedure to which it belongs. TIRUMALATHAMMAL v. VENKATARAMANAIYAN, 2 M.H.C. 378. [F., 6 M.H.C. 117.]

(49-a)—S. 15—Declaratory decree—Consequential relief not prayed for—Declaratory decree—Judicial Committee.—There may be cases in which a merely declaratory decree may be made without granting any consequential relief; or, in which the plaintiff does not actually ask for any consequential relief in the suit; otherwise the 15th section of the Civ. Pro. Code (Act VIII of 1859) would have no operation at all. All that the Court was to see both according to the Code and the analogous provision in the English Statute is whether the declaration of the plaintiff's right may be the foundation of relief to be got somewhere—for example in a Court other than that wherein the declaratory decree is prayed for. The plaintiff asked for a declaratory decree to the effect that he was entitled to enhance the rent, in order that he may sue the tenant in a Revenue Court for enhancement of rent. Held, that this was a proper case in which a mere declaration of right might be made. (49-b)—S. 15—Declaratory decree—Consequential relief.—The right given by Act VIII of 1859, s. 15 of obtaining a declaration of title without consequential relief can be claimed only in those cases where the Court could have granted relief if relief had been prayed for. Plaintiff, a Raja, was in possession of certain lands by receipt of rents from tenants. The tenants alleged that they were in possession under a "Mogole bromottur title." The plaintiff's suit was for setting aside the title alleged by the defendants. Held, the suit not being one to set aside any deed set up by the defendants impugning his title as zemindar or Raja, but merely to set aside an assertion, was not maintainable. The Courts could grant a declaratory decree, only in cases where consequential relief, if asked for, could be granted. This was not a case of that kind. RAJA NILMONEY SING DEO BAHADOOR v. But where a suit is adjourned to a day to enable the parties to produce witnesses, and on that day the vakils of both parties appear but no witnesses, and the suit is dismissed, s. 148 alone applies to the default for which the decree is passed; it is clearly therefore a final decree, subject only to a review of judgment or an appeal. one of the original obligors,and against the representatives of P, another of the original obligors, who died previous to the suit being brought. B took out attachment in execution of that decree. K, who obtained a decree against M, subsequent to the decree of B, also took out execution of his decree and attached the same property. Then K applied under s. 272, Act VIII of 1859, that his decree was to be satisfied first, on the ground that B obtained his decree by fraud and improper means. The Munsiff, who was the same officer who had given B the decree found that there was no fraud, but held that, inasmuch as B had sued the representatives of one of the original obligors who was dead at the time he brought the suit, on a stamp of one-fourth of the value prescribed for a plaint in such suits, the decree of B had been obtained by improper means, and he therefore passed an order to the effect that K's decree was to be satisfied first. Held, that a mere error of the description alluded to, namely, an error in suing the representatives or heirs of the deceased obligor, was not obtaining a decree by "improper means" within the meaning of s. 272, Act VIII of 1859, and that the Munsiff's proceedings were without jurisdiction. Per Ainslie, J.—There must be some misconduct on the part of the decree-holder in order to invalidate his decree under s. 272, and not a mere error in procedure on his part or on the part of any pleader employed by him. (19)—Ss. 214, 244—Pre-emption—Conditional decree—Question whether purchase-money has been paid within time—Questions relating to execution.—The question whether the purchase-money has been paid in time by the plaintiff who has obtained a conditional decree in a suit for pre-emption, is not one relating to the execution of the decree, bearing directly as it does upon what the final result of the suit should be; it is a matter for decision in the suit itself. Any proceedings, therefore, purporting to decide the matter on the execution side, would be ill-founded. Therefore, where the defendants in a suit for pre-emption had appealed from the decree passed against them, and also from an order, purporting to be passed on the execution side, disallowing their objection that the purchase-money had not been paid by the plaintiff within time, and the appellate Court allowed their objection and reversed the decree of the lower Court, the rejection by the High Court, of the appeal in respect of the execution-proceedings was no bar to the hearing of the appeal preferred by the plaintiff from the decree of the appellate Court dismissing the suit, and could not furnish a ground

Subsequently, on the application of the judgment-debtor, the account was re-opened, and finally in 1875 it appeared that the decree-holders had overdrawn. In 1876, the judgment-debtors applied for an order for the repayment of the sum so overdrawn. Held that (a) this was a question respecting money paid in execution of a decree and therefore it must be disposed of by the Court executing the decree and not by a separate suit; (b) the English doctrine of laches did not apply in this country; and (c) the application was not barred by any provision of the Limitation Act. The true principle would be that, if a bona fide application had been made, or pressure had been brought to bear upon the judgment-debtor, by a person having a right to apply and the judgment-debtor's act in discharging such debt proceeded upon such application or pressure, then it was not entirely voluntary, and could not be regarded as an "unfair preference" within the meaning of that section. Therefore, the defendant who does not acquiesce under s. 17 (c) should indicate his want of acquiescence not by a mere objection to the jurisdiction of the Court, but should apply under s. 20 for a stay of proceedings on the ground that it is more convenient that the suit should be tried in one or other of the Courts in which it might have been instituted

If the plaintiff applies for leave under s. 17 (c), the Court will at once determine the question. If the plaintiff does not do so, the law contemplates that the question may be raised by any non-resident defendant who, however, must do so by showing that the trial can be more conveniently held by some other Court. A bare objection to the jurisdiction, is not, therefore, a compliance with the law, and, in the absence of such compliance, the defendant must be deemed to acquiesce in the institution of the suit in the Court in which it is. Hence he sued only for the balance. On the very day on which the plaintiff instituted the present suit against the defendant in the High Court, the defendant brought a suit against the plaintiff in the Presidency Small Cause Court, for the sum admitted to be due by the latter to the former. Held, that, if the defendant in the suit took no further steps, he was entitled to treat the sum due to him as an admitted set-off, as though he made a claim to a set-off under s. 211 of the Code. Consequently, if the plaintiff failed, the defendant was entitled to ask for judgment for the sum admitted to be due. On that date the 17th of August was fixed for the hearing. The plaintiffs, however, were not ready on the 17th of August to proceed with their case and time was allowed them till the 26th of September. On the last mentioned date, the Munsif passed an order dismissing the plaintiffs' suit "for default of prosecution." Subsequently, the Munsif cancelled this order and proceeded with the trial of the case and ultimately gave a decree in the plaintiffs' favour. Held that the order above referred to dismissing the plaintiffs' suit must be regarded as an order under Ch. In the proceedings in respect of the said application, the Nazir was appointed guardian ad litem of the minor son, but the execution sale did not take place for want of biddings. Subsequently T put in a second application for execution in which he described the mother as the guardian of the minor. No notice of this application was sent to the Nazir, the proper guardian, and a sale took place in pursuance of that application, in which sale the plaintiff, T, purchased the mortgaged properties. Plaintiff now sued for partition and possession of G's (judgment-debtor's) share. It was contended that the sale was made without jurisdiction, no notice of the second application for execution having been served on the minor's guardian, and was therefore not valid. Held, per Crouch, A.J.C. (a) that the appointment of the Nazir as guardian was an appointment under s. 462, Civ. Pro. Code, that is, as guardian for the suit, and that such guardianship did not terminate until the suit was disposed of; that the word "suit" in s. 460, Civ. Pro. Code, means or includes the proceedings incidental to the enforcement of a decree, and that these cannot be regarded as terminated until the decree has been satisfied. Held, also, an error in the application for execution, describing the mother as being the guardian instead of the Nazir, does not vitiate a sale held under an order made in pursuance of it, and that such an error could not affect the jurisdiction of the Court. Held, also, that no notice of the second application under s. 248, Civ. Pro. Code, need be issued to the guardian, and that the terms of the last para of that section make it clear that no notice is necessary, if, upon a previous application for execution against the same person, the Court has ordered execution to issue against him. Held, per Pratt, A.J.C.—(1) that the appointment, in the first execution-proceeding, of the Nazir as guardian, does not amount to a substantial representation, by the Nazir of the minor in the second execution-proceeding, of which no notice had been issued to Nazir under s. 460, Civ. Pro. Code. Held, also, (2) that "in execution-proceedings the Courts will look at the substance of the transaction and will not be disposed to set aside an execution upon mere technical grounds, when they find that it is substantially right." (6 I.A. 233, F.; 24 B. 135, R.) Held, also, (3) that, even if the minor were not represented by the Nazir, yet the estate of the deceased was sufficiently represented by the widow, and that the requisites of s. 234, Civ. Pro. Code, having thus been satisfied, the Court has jurisdiction to proceed against the estate, and the whole estate passed by the sale. THAKUMAL TEJUMAL v. Thereupon the judgment-debtor again pleaded that the decree had been satisfied by the execution of the mortgage and the Court, which was then presided over by a different officer, sanctioned the arrangement and struck off the execution application. Held that the Judge had a discretion as to whether he would sanction the agreement for the satisfaction of the judgment-debt and the discretion was not limited by the fact that his predecessor had already in the previous proceedings refused to sanction the same agreement. In May 1899, the latter executed a bond in favour of the plaintiff for Rs. 300 payable in monthly instalments, and, at the foot of the bond, it was stated that the consideration consisted of the Rs. 195 due under the decree Rs. 35 in cash and Rs. 70 on account of future interest. On the 17th, July 1899, the plaintiff notified to the Court under s. 258, Civ. Pro. Code, that his decree against the defendant for Rs. 195 had been satisfied by the execution of a bond for that amount together with other sums. Thereupon, the decree was recorded as satisfied. In May 1900, the plaintiff applied for sanction under S. 257-A, Civ. Pro. Code, to proceedings by which his decree had been satisfied, and on the 11th June, 1900, the Court recorded the following order : " The parties appear to-day. The executant admits the document. The execution-proceedings were struck off on the decree-holder's application on the 17th July, 1899..... I grant the sanction asked for." The plaintiff brought a suit for the recovery of the first thirteen instalments due on the bond, and the defendant pleaded that, as the bond provided for the payment of interest on the judgment-debt and was without the sanction of the Court, it was void under s. 257-A, Civ. Pro. Code. The plaintiff's suit was decreed. Held, that the agreement in the bond was not one for the satisfaction of the judgment-debt, and providing for the payment, directly or indirectly, of any sum in excess of the sum due under the decrees. It was an agreement for the payment of the amount by which the judgment-debt was satisfied with interest on that amount. Held, therefore, that the suit was rightly decreed. MIRZA MOHAMMAD ZAKIR v. (67)—S. 257-A—Agreement to give time —Adjustment of decree—Reservation of right to execute decree—Suit on agreement—Maintainability—Agreement unstamped document—Admissibility in appeal—Stamp Act, 1879, s. 34.— Plaintiff obtained a decree against the defendant. In execution thereof, an agreement was entered into between the parties, by which time was given to the defendant to satisfy the decree, and it was stipulated that, if the defendant failed to satisfy the decree at the time appointed, he should put the plaintiff in possession of certain lands which he hypothecated as security for the amount of the decree. A further clause empowered the decree-holder, in case of any injury to the hypothecated holding within the stipulated time, to recover his decree-money by executing his decree. A petition to this effect was filed in Court on the 14th March, 1878. The defendant failed to perform his promise The plaintiff, after his unsuccessful attempt in the execution department to recover possession of the property, filed the present suit for possession under the terms of the agreement dated the 14th March, 1878. Held by the Full Bench (Stuart, C.J. and Oldfield, J. (dissenting) that the document of the 14th March, 1878, was a written contract between the decree-holder and the defendant in respect to the hypothecation to him of his land and not a mere petition meant only to inform the Court that an oral contract to that effect had come into existence between them. As the contract expressly reserved to the decree-holder the right of executing his decree on a given contingency, he could not be deemed to have abandoned or extinguished his rights thereunder. Therefore the suit was held to be not maintainable. The abovesaid agreement was stamped with a stamp of one anna. Held that the stamp was insufficient in either case, whether it was regarded as a deed of mortgage or as an agreement to mortgage only. Ordinarily, an appellate Court will not direct the reception of an unstamped document to which the provisions of s. 34 of the Stamp Act apply, unless the amount of stamp duty, and prescribed penalty has been tendered when the admissibility of the document in evidence was first challenged, and the document was on this ground rejected. Subsequent execution of bond by judgment-debtor for payment of balance—Court's sanction not obtained—Suit on bond—Maintainability—In execution of a money-decree obtained by G against H, property belonging to the latter was attached. At the request of H, five persons gave a havala, or oral undertaking to pay the decretal debt and the attachment was raised. Some amount was paid under the havala, and, for the balance of the decree amount, H executed a bond, agreeing to pay the same with interest. The sanction of Court was not obtained either to the havala or to the bond. The decree having been destroyed, the plaintiff, G brought the present suit to enforce payment of the amount due under the bond. The District Judge being of the opinion that the portion of the bond providing for payment of interest was void and that the other portion under which the principal amount of the decree was agreed to be paid was not void, referred the matter to the High Court under s. 617, Civ. Pro. Code, 1882. Held that the bond was void in toto. The havala being an agreement such as is contemplated in para 1, s. 257-A, Civ. Pro. the amount due under a simple money-decree, so that the decree ceasee to be capable of execution or enforcement thereafter, does not infringe the provisions of s. 257-A, Civ. Pro. (99)—S. 257-A.—Scope—Object—Sanction, absence of—Effect—Entry of satisfaction.—The first paragraph of s. 257-A. Civ. Pro. Code, relates to an agreement by which the decree-holder undertakes to give time to his judgment-debtor for the satisfaction of the judgment-debt. The second paragraph relates to an agreement made for the satisfaction of the judgment-debt when such agreement secures to the decree-holder either directly or indirectly payment of any sum in excess of what may be payable under the decree. In regard to both these agreements, the section enacts that such agreements shall be void unless made with the sanction of the Court which passed the decree, and it is indicated that the Court is to accord its sanction only if it deems that the consideration for such agreement is under the circumstances reasonable and not oppressive or unconscionable. The policy of the section is clear and the provision made therein is really in the nature of a rule of substantive law which, however, is enacted in the Procedure Code inasmuch as it is connected with execution of decrees, and the object is to debar a decree-holder from using the process of Court, though lawfully, as an instrument of oppression, and entering into unconscionable bargains with the judgment-debtor in consideration of his postponing the process of execution or otherwise agreeing for the satisfaction of the decree. The whole object would be defeated by construing the section as rendering such an agreement (unless it has received the sanction of the Court) void only for the purposes of execution of the decree but efficacious for securing to the decree-holder the benefit of the oppressive or unconscionable bargain if he brings a suit. Such construction of the section not only frustrates the object of the Legislature by importing into the section the words "for purposes of execution of the decree" which do not exist there, but proceeds also upon a misapprehension that the agreement referred to, if sanctioned by the Court, is to be regarded as incorporated into the decree and the decree executed as thus varied or added to. A sanctioned agreement to give time for the payment of the judgment-debt operates as a stay of execution under s. 244. An agreement of the kind contemplated by paragraph 2 of s. 257-A, Civ. Pro. Code, will be perfectly valid as the basis for a suit even if it had not received the sanction of the Court, provided it does not secure to the decree-holder either directly or indirectly payment of any sum in excess of the amount due or to accrue due under the decree. The agreement will operate as a bar to the execution of the decree if it be certified or

On the true construction of the bond the document purported to give a two-fold remedy to the mortgagee on failure by the mortgagors to pay the instalments mentioned in the bond, first, a right to sue for the balance due under the bond, secondly, a right to recover the balance by executing the decree. After payment of certain instalments, the mortgagors fell into arrears, and hence the present suit on the mortgage. Held, that the mortgage was a contract to pay the amount of the judgment-debt with a stipulation that it was not payable at the time when, under the decree, it became payable. The relation of judgment-creditor and judgment-debtor still existed by the express agreement of the parties. The debt was still enforceable as a judgment-debt. That being so, the bond could not be construed otherwise than as an agreement to give time for the satisfaction of a judgment-debt. The sanction of the Court not having been obtained, the bond was void. Held, also that the agreement was none the less void because a party who appeared to be the legal representative of one of the judgment-debtors became a party to the mortgage-bond, though he was not a party to the suit in which the decree was obtained. No further action was taken on the application and the agreement remained unverified. In July, 1909, the decree-holders again applied for execution, entering therein a calculation based upon the terms of the agreement of November, 1908. The judgment-debtor objected to the enforcement of the agreement on the ground that it had been obtained from him under undue influence and could not be enforced, because it had not been verified by him in Court and also because the Court had not sanctioned it as required by S. 257-A of the Civ. Pro Code, 1882. The Court executing the decree held on evidence that the plea of undue influence was not made out and sanctioned the agreement. Held, that, as the decree-holders had not obtained the presence of the judgment-debtor in order to verify the agreement in Court, there was no such complete agreement between the parties as should have been sanctioned by the Court passing the decree after a period of more than eighteen months. The section pre-supposes the existence of a judgment-debt. Where the judgment-debt is extinguished in whole or in part, by the substitutions for it of a contract of mortgage, such a contract cannot be regarded as an agreement to give time for the satisfaction of judgment-debt within the perview of s. 257-A, as the judgment-debt, to the extent to which it has been extinguished, is no longer in existence. Quære:—Whether or not an agreement made in contravention of s. 257-A is void for all purposes when the decree in reference to which it is made is still enforceable. The plaintiffs applied for execution after the expiry of the term, but it was held that the agreement was a complete satisfaction of the decree which was not, therefore, capable of execution. The plaintiffs brought the present suit for recovery of the amount due, basing their claim on the agreement, and it was contended by the defendant, that the agreement was void under s. 257 A of the Civ. Pro, Code, the application embodying the agreement was not admissible in evidence for want of registration, and that suit was barred by s. 244 of the Civ. Pro. Code. Held, that the proper reading of the application was that it contained merely a statement of the fact that an oral agreement, such as was mentioned in the application, had been made previously, the application was not inadmissible in evidence, and the suit was not in any way barred. The want of registration of an agreement requiring registration does not invalidate it, and s. 91 of the Evidence Act does not prevent admissions made by the executant of such a deed to be admitted in evidence in proof of the agreement. (110)—S. 257-A—Agreement in satisfaction of decree—Sanction of Court—Onus of proof—Entry of satisfaction of decree in register of suits—No presumption of sanction to particular agreement,—There is nothing wrong in the Court raising the question, whether a bond or agreement in satisfaction of a decree has received the sanction of the Court which passed the decree. When the sanction of the Court in respect of an agreement under s. 257-A is in question, such sanction cannot be presumed unless it is proved. According to all ordinary rules of evidence, it lies on the party who asserts that the Court has given its sanction, to prove the assertion to be true. On the 8th April, 1892, four years and more after the date of the original decree, and on the 5th July, 1892, again, applications were made for execution of the decree against the judgment-debtors. These applications were applications for execution or to take some step-in-aid of execution, which came under the purview of art. 179, not art. 178, Limitation Act, and hence the decree, dated 3-2-1888, became barred by limitation. Pro. Code. Held, that the sanction of the Court, under s. 257-A, should be given in terms and under circumstances to show that it had considered the propriety of the proposed compromise, and that it should state in such sanction that it regarded the consideration for which it had been made a reasonable consideration. Held, that no question of estoppel arises when the previous warrants of attachment either proved ineffectual or were not executed. Notwithstanding the said arrangement, a decree-holder who was a party to the composition-deed applied for execution of his decree. Held that, as the composition-deed purported inter alia altogether to release the debtor and was not a mere agreement to give time, s. 257-A did not apply. It was an adjustment contemplated by s. 258 and required to be certified by the Court. In the absence of such a certificate, the composition-deed could not prevent the decree from being executed. Parker, J.—No period of limitation was prescribed by law for obtaining the sanction of the Court required by s. 257-A and such sanction could be obtained at any time during which the decree was alive. And, therefore, a suit based upon such payment or adjustment is maintenable. And the concluding clause of s. 258 of the Civ. Pro. In the present case, plaintiff held a decree for Rs. 315 against the defendant and the latter paid a portion thereof to the plaintiff and for the balance executed a bond in plaintiff's favour. These transactions took place without the knowledge of the Court. The present suit was by the plaintiff for recovery from the defendant of the amount due under the bound executed in adjustment of the said decree. The defendant contended that the agreement to pay the amount of the decree at a deferred date was void for want of sanction of the Court making the decree according to s. 257-A of the Civ. Pro. Before the expiry of that time, however, the judgment-debtor died. There does not seem to be any precise procedure laid down as to how the Court should hear cases where the decree-holder is the applicant. GOURI KANT BURMAN v. DAMODAR DAS BURMAN, 5. C W.N. 90.

(177)—Ss 345, 350, 351—Application by judgment-debtor to be declared insolvent.—In some cases, it may be necessary for the applicant desiring to be declared an insolvent, to produce evidence in support of his statements. But the wording of s. 350 shows that this is not ordinarily necessary. If any statements in the application are challenged, or if the applicant's examination is not satisfactory, the Court may no doubt require him to produce evidence. But if the Court is satisfied, on the examination of the applicant, that the statements in the application are substantially true, it is then for the opposing creditors to show cause against the application. It is certainly not the intention of the law that an applicant, under s. 345 of Civ. Pro. Code, should produce at the hearing strict proof, independently of his own oath, of every point in his application. SITHAMBARAM CHETTY v. (178)—Ss. 345, 351, 352—Insolvent—Omission to frame schedule—Creditor's right to sue—Res judicata.—A list of debts filed under s. 345, prior to a declaration under s. 352, is not a schedule as required by s. 352. It is necessary that the Court should by order determine the persons who have proved themselves to be the insolvent's creditors and their respective debts and then frame a schedule of such persons and debts. In the absence of any such determination by Court, the declaration under s. 351, that the applicant was an insolvent, cannot be deemed to be a decree in favour of the creditor for the amount due to him. And a suit by the creditor is therefore maintainable and is not barred as res judicata. HARYA v. MUL CHAND, 64 P. R. 1907=89 P.L.R. 1908. (7 M. 818, F.; 76 P.R. 1899, D.)

(189)—Ss. 350, 351, 352, 355, 356—Insolvency proceedings—Summary order for distribution of assets—Procedure —The intention of s. 350 seems to be that the applicant should be examined on his application with a view to ascertaining whether the requirements of s. 351 have been fulfilled. Any creditor, who opposes the application, may either cross-examine the applicant or suggest questions to be put to him by the Court. There is no provision in the Code for the filing of written objections to the application. Any opposing creditor may be heard and an opportunity should be afforded him to produce evidence in support of his objections. The Code does not expressly provide for the production of evidence by the applicant. But no doubt it is within the power of the Court to allow or require him to produce evidence to rebut any evidence produced by any opposing creditor. Where a Court, after declaring the applicant to be an insolvent, proceeded to pass a summary order for the distribution of the assets of the insolvent, and without any proof on the record of the existence or terms of any mortgage, declared a person referred to as the mortgagee to be entitled to have his debt first satisfied out of the proceeds of the sale of the applicant's property, and then proceeded to appoint a receiver, held, that the summary order, besides being made in contravention of the provisions of the Code, was clearly incorrect. Before declaring the mortgagee to be entitled to priority in the distribution of the insolvent's property the Court was bound to have the mortgage proved and to inquire into its terms. Though s. 359 does not say that an application under that section must be made at the hearing, under s. 350 or soon thereafter, any order, under that section (s. 359), must be based on the findings arrived at in an enquiry under s. 350. No new enquiry is contemplated by s. 359. NARASAYYA v. SUBBAYYA, 18 M.L.J. 12.

(192)—S. 351—Insolvent—Burden of "satisfying" the Court.—The burden of satisfying the Court in the sense of s. 351 of the Code lies on the insolvent applicant and not on the opposing creditors. BAIJ NATH v. ELLIS, A.W.N. 1883, 187.

(193)—S. 351—Application by debtor for declaration of insolvency and appointment of receiver—Unfair preference to creditors—Disposition of property—Bad faith—Test of unfair preference—Presumption.—Where the object of a compromise entered into by a debtor with some of the creditors was to put an end to ruinous litigation, and not to benefit them, though it may be that the transaction was in fact beneficial to them, such a compromise does not amount to an act of bad faith within the meaning of s. 351. It is sufficient to constitute an unfair preference, if preferring the creditor was the substantial, effectual or dominant view with which the debtor made the preference, and it is not necessary that it should have been the sole view. If a man, on the eve of bankruptcy makes a payment to a particular creditor, the presumption immediately arises that he makes that payment, with the dominant view of giving a preference to that creditor over his other creditors. There is no need for any evidence that that view was expressed in so many words by the bankrupt; it is a presumption which would arise from the transaction. The same principles apply to assignments of "actionable claim" which are "dispositions of property." But where dispositions of property were made by a debtor, not with the dominant view of preferring some of his creditors but with the object that he might continue to receive financial support from such of the creditors, and were made under pressure by these creditors, such circumstances negative a preference being the dominant view with which the dispositions were made. (197)—S. 351. Ch. XX—Unfair preference to one creditor—Appellate Court.—S. 351, Civ. Pro. Code, deals with the discretionary power which is vested in the Courts acting under Ch. XX, Civ. Pro. Code, and unless the appellate Court sees that that discretion has been wrongly or perversely exercised by the lower Court, it is not a part of the duty of the appellate Court to interfere with the decision of the lower Court. In an application to be declared an insolvent, it appeared that a few days before stopping payment, the petitioner, under pressure from some of his relations to whom he was indebted in the sum of Rs. 3,000 and who were fully aware of his pecuniary position, transferred to them property worth Rs. 2,963, while in the case of a number of other creditors to whom he owed about Rs. 9,330 in all, he made payments aggregating to Rs. 888 only. Held that, under the circumstances, the lower Court had acted rightly in dismissing the application. (256)—Ss. 503 and 505—Receiver, appointment of—Receiver, if may sue in his own name—District Judge sanction of, to the appointment—Sanction subsequently obtained, if validates proceedings commenced.—The order of appointment of receiver can be made by a Subordinate Judge only after he has been authorised to do so by the District Judge. The question whether the appointment is invalidated, if it is made by the Subordinate Judge without the previous sanction of the District Judge, but is subsequently approved by him, is a question rather of power than of jurisdiction of the Court. It is not essential, in all cases, where a power may be exercised with the assent of a third person, that such assent must be given before the execution; there may be a ratification by subsequent consent. (9 I.A. 8=8 C. 422 and 23 C. 87, R.) There may be cases in which the nature and object of the power and the surrounding circumstances point to a previous consent as essential, in which event the consent must be obtained, before the execution and subsequent consent is insufficient. (25 A. 187, 26 A. 162, R.) Where the order for the appointment of a receiver was made by a Subordinate Judge and the nomination was subsequently approved by the District Judge, the requirements of the law were substantially complied with, and whatever defect there was in the form of the proceeding, it was remedied by the subsequent order of the Subordinate Judge, although it was made after the institution of the suit in which the question of the validity of the appointment was raised. (30 C. 699. D; 2 C.L.J. 70 and 4 C.L.J. 421, R.) S. 503 of the Code authorises the Court to grant to the receiver all such powers as to bringing and defending suits as the owner himself has. When an appointment has been made under that section, and full powers are granted to the receiver, powers are conferred upon the receiver to bring and maintain suits in his own name, always supposing that the ownership of the property is completely represented in the suit in which the receiver is appointed. (25 C. 642. R.) It is competent to a Court to authorise a receiver to sue in his own name, and a receiver who is authorised to sue, though not expressly in his own name, may do so by virtue of his appointment with full powers under s. 503, of the Code. Such an order of remand is not a mere irregular proceeding; it is an order which is forbidden by the Civ. Pro. saved by the terms of s. 578, Civ. Pro. Code, because the error goes to the root of the jurisdiction of the Court. Where such an order of remand was made by a Subordinate Judge sitting in first appeal, and in pursuance of the order, the Munsiff re-tried the suit and dismissed it, and the Subordinate Judge on appeal reversed the decree of the Munsiff. Held that the order of remand was illegal, and that the necessary consequence of that was that all proceedings taken under it by the Munsiff were equally void in law, so also was the appeal from the decree made thereunder, and the judgment and decree of the Subordinate Judge on appeal before the High Court. Therefore all those proceedings were ordered to be cancelled, and the Subordinate Judge was directed to restore the first appeal to its place in his register of first appeals and to try it himself upon the record as it then stood, according to law. Code, on an appeal from a decree passed on evidence given by the plaintiff only, the defendant having been ex parte, the appellate Court has inherent power not only to reverse such a decree but also to direct a re-trial of the case. The Court has such power on an appeal against an order passed, on an application, under s. 108 of the Code, refusing to set aside an ex parte decree, and it can hardly be supposed, therefore, that, if on an appeal against such ex parte decree, it considers that the decree ought to be set aside and a re-trial had, it has not the same power. (286)—Ss. 562 and 564—Erroneous order of remand—Subsequent proceedings, if illegal—Merits of a case—Dispossession, meaning of.—When a Court of first appeal, purporting to act under s. 562 of the Civ. Pro. Code, remands a case to the Court of first instance, which had not decided the suit merely on a preliminary point, the order is erroneous; but it cannot be said that the subsequent proceedings, before the lower Courts, are void, merely because of such error. If, in consequence of such erroneous remand, there has been a wrong decision affecting the merits of the case, then and then only will the subsequent proceedings be set aside. (28 C 324, F.) Where the Court of first instance originally decreed the plaintiff's suit, but after an erroneous remand, dismissed it. Held, that the reversal of the former judgment was not a wrong decision affecting the merits of the case. Before a party can be said to have acquired a title by adverse possession against another, whom he had dispossessed, it is necessary to find, not only that that other has been dispossessed, but that that the party claiming title has been in possession and has exercised rights of possession over the disputed tract. (288)—Ss. 562, 564—Partial decision of case on merits—Legality of order of remand—"Shall not", meaning of.—Where a case has been partially decided on the merits, it is ordinarily right for the appellate Court to keep it on its file and dispose of all questions of facts by the further record of evidence, but where the points decided at the time bear a small proportion to the questions left to be decided and the matter decided can be kept separate from the matter left for decision, a remand under s. 562 of the Code is not absolutely prohibited. The Court may for good reasons construe the words "shall not" in s. 564 to mean "shall not without very good grounds." HARCHAND v. MAKUND RAM SUKAL, 12 C.P.L.R. 119. (16 M. 207, 19 M. 157, R.)

(290)—Ss. 562, 564, 566—Order of remand when proper—Addition of necessary parties, if good ground for remand in first appeal.—A Court of first appeal cannot remand a case for the addition of necessary parties. It can add the parties, frame fresh issues and remand the case for their trial only under ss. 562 and 564, the provisions of which are to be strictly followed by all Courts of first appeal. So, where the original Court did not dispose of the suit "upon a preliminary point, so as to exclude any evidence of fact" which appeared to the lower appellate Court "essential to the determination of the rights of the parties" held that the lower appellate Court was wrong in remanding the case on the ground that all the necessary parties had not been joined. (291)—Ss 562, 564, 566, remand—Judgment not on preliminary point—No change in law.—The new Code of Civil Procedure does not contain the express limit on remands which was embodied in s. 564 of the Code of 1882. But rr. 23 and 25 of O. XLI represent the old ss. 562 and 566, and the law does not appear to have been changed. Where the two principal issues were, (1) whether the plaintiff had title, and (2) whether, if so, he was entitled to khas possession, and the Munsiff held that the plaintiff had no title and so dismssed the suit without dealing with the question of khas possession, and the Sub-Judge held that the plaintiff had title, and after setting aside the decree of the Munsiff, remanded the case to decide the question of khas possession. Held (by Chitty, J.) that the decision of the Munsiff was not upon a preliminary point and the order of remand by the Sub-Judge was bad (Coxe, J., doubting). (293)—Ss. 562, 564 and 578—Remand by lower appellate Court—First Court's decision not on a preliminary point, but on the merits—Legality of remand order—Proceedings subsequent to remand—Nullity—Consent of waiver.—When a Court of first instance, decided the suit, not upon a preliminary point, but on the merits, the lower appellate Court remanded the case under s. 562, Civ. Pro. Code, for having a new plan prepared. Held, that the order of remand was illegal. (18 M 421, 19 M. 479, App. and F. 28 M. 430. R.). Even though the plaintiff was not prejudiced by the order of remand, the High Court had jurisdiction to interfere with the remand. The illegal remand could not be treated as a mere irregularity. 24 M. 61, P.C., F. and s. 578., Civ. Pro. Code, has no application. The illegality is not cured by the plaintiff's consent or waiver. Failure on plaintiff's part to appeal under cl. (28) of s. 588 cannot be treated as consent or waiver. (28 M. 437, Disc.), as he had the alternative remedy of taking objection to the remand in second appeal. (18 M. 421, F.) Nor was it in the power of the plaintiff to prevent the trial, after remand, before the first Court, from going on. The High Court, had no alternative but to set aside all the proceedings subsequent to the remand—the decree of the lower appellate Court, the second decree of the first Court and the remand order of the lower appellate Court and to remand the original appeal to the lower appellate Court for disposal according to law. (295)—S. 564—Appeal—Order of remand directing addition of parties—Preliminary point—Legality of order.—An order of remand, under s. 564, Civ. Pro. Code, by an appellate Court, directing addition of new parties is an order upon a point which is necessarily preliminary to the proper decision and trial of the suit, and is perfectly legal. JADAB GOBINDA SINGH v. ANATH BANDU SAHA, 37 C. 171=5 Ind. Cas. 998. (23 A. 167, F.)

(296)—S. 564—Suit decided on merits and not on preliminary point by appellate Court—Order of remand by appellate Court with consent of parties, legality of—Equitable estoppel—Waiver.—Suits were instituted before a Deputy Collector for compelling the acceptance, by the respective defendants of pattas for a certain fasli. The main contest before the Deputy Collector was as to whether the rent was payable in kind as contended on behalf of the plaintiff, or in money as contended for the defendants, under express contracts alleged by them. The Deputy Collector held that the contracts alleged were not made out and directed that waram patta should be accepted. On appeal, the District Judge found the contracts were proved and remanded the suit for disposal on the basis that rent was payable in money in accordance with the contracts. It appeared that the order of remand was passed with the consent of both the parties. However, the plaintiff appealed to the High Court against the order of remand. Held.—Per Subrahmania Ayyar, J.—A remand in contravention of s. 564 of the Code is a violation of a mandatory provision of the law, which makes the order of remand illegal and one that ought to be set aside at the instance of a party entitled to object to such a procedure, but which, nevertheless, is of such a character that the defect can be cured by consent. The provision of s. 564 is one introduced for the benefit of litigants, who may, consequently, waive it if they find it to be the more advantageous course to take. The doctrine that consent does not give jurisdiction, applies where the

Court has "no inherent jurisdiction over the subject matter." It would not apply to violation of rules of procedure though they are more than irregularities. Consequently, on the principle of equitable estoppel, the plaintiff could not rely on the impropriety of the remand. Further the question whether the express contracts set up by the defendants were true and valid, was the crucial question between the parties. Consequently, the finding of the Judge in the matter was an adjudication rightly made at the stage in which it was made, and binding unless duly set aside on appeal or otherwise. The fact that an illegal remand followed could not affect what had already been properly done. There was nothing to impeach the decision of the District Judge on the question of contract. Therefore, the appeal should be dismissed. Per Moore, J.—The order of remand by the District Judge was clearly illegal. The order of remand being illegal, consent of parties would not make it legal. Appeal should be allowed, an order of remand set aside. MANAGER, KALAHASTI ESTATE v. the Court of the Judicial Commissioner for a revision of this order under s. 435, Act V of 1898 (Code of Criminal Procedure). There was nothing to show that any inquiry was made by the lower Court to satisfy itself that there were sufficient grounds for sending the case under s. 643, Code of Civil Procedure, to the Magistrate for investigation. Held, that, although the application was headed as one under s. 435, Crim. Pro. If the order was to be treated as one passed under s. 476, Crim. Pro. Code, it was equally open to objection on the ground that there was no preliminary inquiry by the lower Court. RAM ADHIN v. (333)—Sch. IV, Form 130—Suit for administration—Preliminary decree—Case pending before the Commissioner—Power of Court to sanction compromise—Decree, form of.—A testator left a will appointing defendants, Nos. 1 and 2 as his executors. The plaintiffs, the grandsons of the deceased testator, brought a suit for the administration of the estate and for an account against the said executors. Defendant No. 3, widow of another grandson of the testator, was impleaded as a party to the suit. A preliminary decree was made, and the decree also declared that defendant No. 3 was entitled to a fourth share of the estates, and a Commissioner was appointed to take accounts.

Civ. Pro. Code (Act XIV of 1882)—concluded.

While the case was going on before the Commissioner, a petition of compromise between the plaintiffs and the executors (defendants-Nos. 1 and 2) to the effect that the entire estate should be made over to the plaintiffs and the executors be released from further accounting, was submitted to the Court, which sanctioned it, despite the protest made by defendant No. 3 against the compromise, inasmuch as her right, were entirely ignored in the partition. Held, that the Court was wrong in having sanctioned such a compromise, ignoring the rights of defendant No. 3, especially when the preliminary decree had declared her right to a certain share in the estate. In suits for administration, the Courts ought to follow the form prescribed in No. 130, sch. IV of the Code in drawing up decrees. AJOY KUMARI DEBI v. MANINDRA NATH CHATTERJEE, 32 C. 561.

(25)—S. 2—"Decree," definition of—Order striking off certain defendants to be treated as order dismissing the case—Order dismissing the case to be treated as a decree—Appeal, right of, from such an order.—Where a Court, before deciding a case finally, orders the names of certain defendants to be struck off from the record on the ground that the plaintiff made out no cause of action against them, such order is tantamount to a dismissal of the case against those defendants, and the plaintiff can treat the order as a "decree." An appeal, therefore, lies against such an order. IDAN KHAN v. MENDI LAL, 8 Ind. Cas. 409.

(28)—S. 2 (=Civ. Pro. Code, 1882, s. 2)—Decree—Settled accounts, order directing re-opening of—Attorney and client—Settlement of untaxed bills, when liable to be re-opened—Fiduciary relationship—Onus of showing good faith—Indian Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 16—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 111—Independent advice, opportunity to obtain—Promissory note, assignment of, without endorsement.—Plaintiff, a solicitor, had advanced various sums of money to a client from time to time on a mortgage-bond and three further charges. The consideration for the third further charge was not paid in cash, but was made up of (1) amounts due to the plaintiff on several promissory notes in the plaintiff's favour, (2) certain promissory notes executed by the client in favour of a third party, which the plaintiff is said to have "taken up," (3) balance of amount due as interest on the mortgage and two further charges, and (4) a certain amount stated to have been found due to the plaintiff as costs for acting for him in various suits, upon a settlement made of amounts due under various taxed and untaxed bills, a large remission having been allowed in consideration of all the bills not being taxed. In a suit by the plaintiff against the heirs of the deceased client to realize the amounts due on the mortgage and the three further charges, the plaintiff obtained a decree on the first three bonds, but the 4th bond was ordered to be re-opened, and it was directed that the plaintiff "do get all his bills of costs up to the 3rd August, 1903, taxed by the Taxing Officer of the High Court, and then re-filed the bills in this Court, that then a Commissioner be appointed to take accounts in the light of the observations in this case: that after the Commissioner's report is received and the parties are heard thereon, final decree will be drawn up under s. 89 of the Transfer of Property Act." Held, that this order was a decree. The fact that the Subordinate Judge intended hereafter to adjust the equities arising out of the contract, did not in any way do away with his adjudication that the contract, as it stood, was not binding on the defendants. (9 B. 183, Doubted; 15 B. 155=18 I.A. 6, R.) As between attorney and client, the existence of fiduciary relationship alone, or the fact that certain bills of costs were not taxed but were settled out of Court by execution of a deed, will not justify a Court in re-opening accounts settled on which the bond is based, unless sufficient grounds of suspicion exist, or the bills are prima facie shewn to be extortionate. S. 16 of the Contract Act only presumes undue influence by a person in a position to dominate the will of another, when the contract appears on the face of it to be unconscionable. To prove "good faith" of a transaction in which one party stands in a fiduciary relationship to the other, it is certainly not necessary to prove that all the accounts on which the contract is based are correct. Under the practice obtaining in the original side of the High Court, taxation of bills of solicitors is deemed to be optional with the client and bills of costs are not infrequently adjusted without taxation. The case of Monohur Doss v. Romanath Law (I.L.R. 3 C. 473) was decided on the special circumstances of that case and does not lay down any general rule of law. An attorney may be bound under certain circumstances to advise his client to take independent advice. It is not his business to see that the attorney selected by his client fulfils his duties to his client and is not guilty of any remissness or negligence. If he sends his client to another attorney and is ready to comply with all reasonable demands for information, he cannot be expected to do more, or to be responsible for another's omissions. If the parties to a promissory note agree that on the promisor executing a bond for the amount due in favour of a third person, the promisee would cancel the note, this arrangement would be a perfectly valid contract, whether the third party paid any money to the promisee or not. Although a negotiable instrument can only be assigned by endorsement, that does not prevent any arrangement not to negotiate the note but to put an end to it. SHAMULDHONE DUTT v SRIMUTTY SUSILA BALA DEBI, 12 C.W.N. 1102=36 C. 493=2 Ind. Cas. 553.

(29)—S. 2—Decree—Decision of an issue in a case—No degree drawn up embodying the decision—Appeal.—In the administration suit, the Courts of first instance decided on one of the issues a substantial question of right between the parties, and having so decided it appointed receivers of all the property in dispute. In appeal to the District Judge, the finding on the issue was sought to be challenged, on the ground that it was a decree. The District Judge held that there was no decree and therefore no appeal lay to his Court. Before the High Court, it was contended that there was a decree with reference to the question raised in the issue in the first Court, and that an appeal lay from it: Held, that no appeal lay to the High Court, for there was in fact no formal decree upon the question raised in the issue. (31)—S. 2—Interlocutory order —'Decree'—Preliminary decree.—The definition of decree is not intended to include an interlocutory decision in ordinary suit upon each and every point in controversy between the parties, even in those cases, where the decision upon any such question is embodied in a separate and distinct order passed during the pendency of the proceedings. An order cannot be regarded as a decree unless it is formally drawn up as such or at all events, unless it could be so drawn up A 'preliminary decree' properly understood is passed only in those cases in which the Court has first to adjudicate upon the rights of the parties and has then to stay its hand for the time being until it is in a position to pass a final decree in the suit. The jurisdiction of a superior Court to transfer a suit from one Subordinate Court to another ought to be exercised with extreme caution. The choice of forum given to a plaintiff by the Legislature ought not to be lightly interfered with, and the Court will not transfer a suit properly laid, except upon proof of special circumstances. A well recognised ground exists when the convenience of necessary witnesses and the ends of justice will be promoted by the transfer; but the ground alleged must be clearly established. Under s. 25 of Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882) the Court has, no doubt, ample power to make the order even after the issues have been framed; but satisfactory reasons ought to be given in explanation of the delay. Pro. Code, and an appeal lies therefrom, though no appeal is provided from such an order under s. 588. It is the judgment-debtor's right to have a just and true valuation placed upon his property and to have the properties described accurately in the proclamation of sale. And the Court is bound to inquire into the objection under s. 287 (9 C. 214, 9 A. 500 and 18 C. 469, Commented on; 23 M. 560, 25 I.A. 146 and 15 I.A. 171, Relied on). [Doubted, 6 M.L.T. 252.] The fact that the objections above described were not mentioned in a previous petition put in by the judgment-debtor to have the execution transferred to another district where the bulk of the properties were situated, is no objection to an inquiry into the same by the Court. The judgment-debtor should raise such objections as early as may be possible after he came to know of the details of the proclamation, and since proclamations are usually prepared behind his back, the fact that he did not raise them before the proclamation was settled on, does not debar his application. Where objections substantially the same as the above were preferred in answer to an execution proceeded with during the pendency of an appeal from the original decree and were overruled, held that the petition for execution of the decree of the appellate Court was a different one from the original application and not a continuation of it and that the objections must again be inquired into by the Court. The plaintiffs took up the position which the defendant assigned to them, and brought a suit for the determination of the question as to whether they were the assignees of the decree and entitled to execute it. The defendant applied to the District Judge in revision under s. 53 of the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act, 1879; but he, being of opinion that the decision on the preliminary issue was not a decree, declined to consider the correctness of the decision of the Subordinate Judge. The defendant next applied to the High Court under s. 115 of the Civ. Pro. in regard to rights of birt which might exist hereafter but did not exist at the moment. The Court further held that plaintiffs should ask for an injunction and it directed the plaintiffs to comply with this order within a certain period. Held, that, as the order merely returned the plaint for amendment within a specific period it was not a decree, preliminary or otherwise, within the meaning of s. 2 (2) of the Civ. Pro. Code, and was consequently not appealable, nor was it open to revision. The so-called right on the part of a parohit to birt or priestly offerings is, in law, no right at all and does not amount to property for the purposes of s. 42 of the Specific Relief Act. It is at most a mere spes successionis or contingent right which is admittedly dependent for its existence upon the pleasure of the jujmans and which, therefore, may never have any existence. It cannot as such form the basis of a declaratory decree. In the absence of an agreement with plaintiffs that defendants would not visit the jujmans, plaintiffs cannot claim an injunction restraining defendants from visiting the jujmans. Before an injunction can be granted, the plaintiff's case must disclose a breach, whether actual or threatened, by the defendant of some present legal right vested in the plaintiffs. Not having any legal right to birt vested in plaintiffs, they could not claim an injunction to restrain a threatened breach of that right. GUR DAS v. BHAG, 216 P.L.R. 1911.

He died pending the suit, and R, another voter, was brought on record as the legal representative of S, and the suit was revived at R's instance. Held that R, though not a legal representative within the definition of that term in s. 2 of Act V of 1908, could be allowed to continue the suit. Mere misdescription as legal representative would not in itself justify the setting aside of the order of revival. O. I., r. 8 applies not only to cases where concurrent interests are concerned, but also where they are similar though distinct, and the sanction granted to a voter whose interest is personal to himself is not therefore bad. A plaintiff who has obtained sanction under O. I. r. 8, has, so far as continuing or not continuing the suit is concerned an entire control of the action. In this sense, he is undoubtedly dominus litis and not a trustee of the action. It does not follow that other members of the class have no interest in the suit, and such interest as they have still subsists after the death of the plaintiff so as to enable them to pursue the action. The Legislature has imposed no limit of time within which applications must be made by persons interested in such suit to be made parties, and if any member of the class is competent by a future application to come in as a plaintiff or defendant in order to safeguard his interest or to get rid of the effects of improper conduct of the suit by the plaintiff, it stands to reason that he should be allowed to do so in a case where the plaintiff is dead and his legal representative is not competent to maintain the suit. The form of procedure and the manner of dealing with suits is amply provided for by the Code. The object of the Legislature in enacting s. 211 appears to have been the prevention of unnecessary litigation and multiplicity of suits. Proceedings in determining the amount of mesne profits are not proceedings in execution of decree in regard to any fixed sum, but merely a continuation of the original suit carried on in the same way as if a single suit were brought for mesne profits by itself. The words " for the execution of the decree " refer only to the execution of the decree for the land, and cannot refer to execution of what has not yet taken the form of a decree. So, where a decree for possession of land and mesne profits left the amount of mesne profits to be ascertained subsequently, an application for realisation of the amount of mesne profits is within time, if brought within three years from the date of the order determining the amount of mesne profits. It is for that Court to say upon a consideration of the facts of the case whether any interest shall be allowed, and if allowed, at what rate it is to be allowed. If that Court in express terms refuses to grant interest or if, when such interest is claimed, it passes a decree, the terms of which are silent as regards interest, in either case, the Court which executes the decree, even when the amount of mesne profits is left for future inquiry, cannot add to the original decree interest which the original Court refused to grant. SHANKARAHAI v. DIN DIAL, 12 A. 409, F.B.=10 A.W.N. 145.

(162)—S. 9, Act V of 1908—Jurisdiction of Civil Courts—Suit of a civil nature—Suit by temple committee against temple servants, for declaration as to their right to have the services performed by others.—The plaintiffs held the office of members of the committee of management of a certain temple under a sanad from Government, and received annually a certain sum of money for defraying the expenses of certain kinds of religious worship in the temple. The obligation attached to the office was, to get the worship performed by the hereditary officers or servants attached to the temple. Plaintiffs alleged that those failed to perform the worship owing to differences among themselves, with the result, that the duties owing to the idol were neglected and the funds in the hands of the plaintiffs remained unexpended. The plaintiffs, therefore, asked for a declaration of their right to disburse the funds, by getting the worship performed by a suitable person or persons, in the event of the hereditary officers or, servants of the temple concerned failing to perform it; and for an injunction to restrain those servants from obstructing the plaintiffs in the exercise of the right so declared. It was objected that the Civil Court had no jurisdiction to try the suit, in which the prayer was for a bare declaration of the plaintiff's right either to perform by themselves or to get performed certain religious ceremonies in a temple, and there was no contest as to any right to property or to any office. Held, overruling the objection, that the plaintiffs were trustees of a public charitable trust, holding moneys in their hands for disposal in a certain manner for certain defined purposes. An action would lie against them by the Advocate-General acting on behalf of the public, to compel them to a due execution of their particular acts of duty. The obligation cast on them by the trust gave them a corresponding right to disburse the funds, after getting the religious worship, for which those funds were intended, properly performed. Such a right was not less of a civil nature, though the funds were to be appropriated to religious ceremonies. The Court was not called upon to enter into the adjudication of any rights and ceremonies, but only to decide the rights of the trustees to fulfil the trust unhindered. TRIMBAK GOPAL PARICHARAK v. (163)—S. 9 (=s. 11, Civ. Pro. Code, 1882)—Suit by trustee against co-trustee—Cognizability of qustions of ritual by Civil Courts—Right to restrain interference with the Namams in a temple—Introduction of new idols, effect of—Position of Dharmakarthas.—Under s. 11, a Dharmakartha of a temple has a right to sue his co-trustees, for an injunction prohibiting them from changing the form of, or in anyway interfering with, the Thengalai Namams in the temple, and directing them to remove from the temple a copper image of Vedanta Desikar introduced thereinto by them. The stone and chunam Namams are part of the property of the temple vested in the trustees, and their removal or alteration is an inteference with the right of the plaintiff, in respect of the property. Although the putting on or taking off of such things as Namams are ordinarily not matters of civil nature, the wholesale substitution of Vadagalai for Thengalai emblems in a Thengalai temple is an interference of the temple structure, and the interference of the Civil Courts may be justified, on the ground that the temple is property and that the Thengalais, for whose worship it is and must be taken to have been largely, but not exclusively dedicated, have a right to object to alterations in the temple structure, which would affect its character as a Thengalai institution. In such temple matters, the only safe guide in this country is usage and if the usage of an institution is found to be Thengalai in character a departure from such usage, by a whole-sale alteration of the form of the Namam displayed in the temple and the consequent change in the character of the predominating influence therein, is prima facie not within the power of the trustees, and the trustees can, in the absence of any justification, be restrained from making such a change. There is prima facie no reason why the trustees should not permit the devotees of Vedanta Desikar, whose image in stone stands in the temple, to introduce a second and portable image to be used, if necessary, in professional ceremonies. To permit this does not in any way change the distinctive Thengalai character of the temple, nor is the introduction of the image a sacrilegious act; and the fact that the Thengalais object to the presence of this image is not necessarily a reason for removing it, and no injunction, therefore, need be granted against the trustees in this matter. Whether the Dharmakarthas of a Hindu temple are trustees in whom the temple properties are vested, or whether the temple properties are vested in the temple deities, and the Dharmakarthas are rather in the position of manager, it may, in practice, be necessary for Civil Courts to deal with them as trustees for the general body of worshippers of the temple. If, as Dharmakarthas, they commit a breach of trust cognizable by the Civil Courts, they may be restrained at the suit of the other Dharmakarthas or worshippers. A suit is not a suit of civil nature, merely because the facts constituting the cause of action are alleged to amount to a breach of trust. If, on examination, it should appear that they relate merely to religious rites or ceremonies, such questions may, of course, be gone into, as stated in the explanation to s. 11, if the right to property or an office depends on them. But it cannot be contended that, as the trustees hold on trust to provide for carrying on public worship at the temple, according to the mamul or usage of the institution, every departure from such usage is a breach of trust, for which they can be sued in a Civil Court. The right of a worshipper to worship at a given temple is recognised by the Courts as a civil right, and the Courts will enforce by suit a right of worship, to which the plaintiff proves himself entitled, and will also protect such a right in various ways. (169)—S. 9 (=s. 11, Civ Pro. Code, 1882)—Explanation—Suit of civil nature—Right of burial and of reciting prayers before burial.—In suits relating purely to rituals or religous observances, the Civil Courts have no jurisdiction; but the Courts are bound to enquire into the questions of religion or ritual, which are material for determining civil rights in dispute between the parties. (7 B. 323, R.) When the matter is of a mixed spiritual and temporal character, the question will depend upon the nature of the connection between the facts, and will be, in fact, whether the spiritual question is so intrinsically connected with the temporal as to be inseparable from it. If so, it would be the duty of the Courts, in trying the civil disputes, to enquire into the spiritual matter thus intimately related. The right of burial is a civil right (26 B. 198, R.) and, if the recitation of prayer at a particular spot in the mosque is a necessary part of the burial, and the plaintiffs are hindered from exercising their customary right in such matter, the interference by the defendants would mean invasion of their right, giving rise to a suit cognizable by Civil Courts. The respondents asserted that they were entitled to the ¾ths of nikasi the of each year while the appellants contended that they were not bound to pay more than ¾ths of the nikasi assumed by the Settlement Officer for the puppose of assessing Government Revenue, that is, ¾ths of double the amount of Government Revenue. In a previous case between the parties, it was decided that the rent payable by the appellants depended upon the nikasi of each year and had not been fixed for the term of a settlement. The appellants contended that the decision was not binding upon them, first, because the point now in issue was not then definitely decided, and secondly, because that decision was based on Rent Act Ruling No, 62, which was overruled by a later decision of the Judicial Commissioner's Court. Held, that the previous decision operated as res judicata, and that a decision inter partes, if, in other respects, it fulfilled the requirements of s. 13 of the Code, could not be avoided by showing that it was erroneous in law. There is nothing in the section to indicate that the judgments in two suits must be open to appeal in the same way in order that the decision upon any issue in the earlier suit can bar the trial of the same issue in the later one. The word "substantially" signifies "in effect though not in express terms." And the word "directly" is used in contradistinction to the words "incidentally" and "collaterally." (24 C. 569, 11 C. 301, P.C. 3 C.W.N. 266=26 C. 428, F.B., R.) But where, in a rent-suit, the alleged tenant denies the plaintiff's title to the land and sets up his own title to the same, the issue as to the title to the land becomes a substantial issue in the suit, and the decision of the Court on the question of title becomes res judicata in a subsequent suit between the parties for establishment of title to the land. (21 W.R. 349, 15 C. 756, 25 C. 136, R.) Where, in a suit brought by the plaintiff against the defendant for rent in respect of an alleged jama of Rs. 7, the defendant pleaded that he did not hold any separate jama of Rs. 7 under the plaintiff, but that the lands covered by the suit were included in a jama of Rs. 33 and odd which they held under the plaintiff and the Court held that the defendant did not hold any separate jama of Rs. 7 under the plaintiff and the lands of the alleged jama were included in the defendant's jama of Rs. 33 and odd. Held, that the decision that the lands were included within the defendant's jama of Rs. 38 and odd, was not necessary for the decision of the suit, and, consequently, could not be res judicata in a subsequent suit, brought by the plaintiff against the defendant for the declaration of his title to those lands and for khas possession thereof. This previous judgment was pleaded as res judicata in bar of the present suit. Held, there was no res judicata, since the finding, in the prior judgment, as to the non-collection of kattubadi for twelve years, was not one of final adjudication on the essential point of denial of the plaintiff's right to the kattubadi. It is neither competent nor proper for the Court to depart from the clear statement in the judgment as to what was decided and, because such decision would, by itself, be unsound with reference to the reason assigned for it, to substitute something else quite different, in order to make it seem right so as to enable one of the parties thereto to found a plea of res judicata, thereon. (229)—S. 11 (=Civ. Pro. Code, 1877, s. 13, Expl. II).—Pending a suit to establish her right to property attached in execution of a decree against her husband, the plaintiff (claimant) died, devising such property by will to her sons, and the suit proceeded in the names of the sons who claimed the property under the will. Eventually it was decided by both the lower Courts that the property belonged to the claimant and not to her husband, and was, therefore, not liable to be sold in execution of the decree against him. In second appeal, however, the High Court allowed the claim of the execution creditor to proceed against a fourth share of such property, on the ground that the husband was entitled to such share as heir of his deceased wife. The sons, however, did not contend before the High Court that they were entitled to the whole of the property under the will. The High Court having allowed the execution-creditor's contention, and a fourth share of the property having been brought to sale in execution of the decree, and purchased by the execution-creditor, held, in a suit by the sons claiming such property under the will, that such ground of claim should have been made a ground of defence by the sons in the course of the second appeal, and not having been pleaded in such appeal, it was res judicata in the sense of Expl. According to Act XXVI of 1867, stamp duty on plaints was fixed on the market-value of the property, which, where the property was a revenue paying property and the settlement was temporary, was eight times the revenue so payable, and unless and until the contrary was proved. Plaintiff, who was a remote reversioner in respect of an estate left by a Hindu in the hands of his widow, brought a suit in the Court of the Munsiff, along with the next reversioner, in 1868, for a declaration that a certain alienation made by the widow was invalid. He valued the suit at Rs. 237-9, eight times the Government Revenue. The alienations were declared invalid as against his interests. He subsequently brought the present suit, after the death of the widow, for possession, in the Court of the Subordinate Judge. The Revenue payable was still Rs. 52-14: Held, that the former suit of 1868 operated as res judicata between the parties. In order to see whether in 1868 the Munsiff would have had jurisdiction to try the present suit, one must look to the state of affairs in 1868. The present valuation cannot be looked at for the purpose. The decision of the Munsiff was that of a competent Court, and his findings, which were upheld on appeal, were binding on the parties, and they were not entitled to go behind them. The plaintiff being the next reversioner, his right to sue for possession arose on the death of the widow; the former decision was conclusive between the parties only upon the point that the alienation by the widow was invalid as against the plaintiff's interest. A plea that an alienation made by a widow is valid, owing to the next reversioner having given his consent, ought to be raised when a reversioner sues for a declaration that the alienation is invalid. If it is not raised then, it cannot be raised in a subsequent suit by the revesioner for possession. CHURAMAN KANDU v. ADJUDHIA SINGH, 3 Ind. Cas. 117. (5 A.L.J. 1=3 M.L.T. 1=12 C.W.N. 74=9 Bom. After his death his widow R got into possession. On her death one Rudra got it as next reversioner. R had contracted certain debts, Rudra borrowed money on the security of the property and paid up R's debt. The defendant P brought a suit against Rudra and his transferees, the plaintiff, N being among them, for possession of R's entire property, on the ground that it belonged to him. N pleaded that P had no right to question the transfer made in his favour. No specific issue was framed. P obtained a decree against all the defendants, N being one of them. N then brought a suit against P for sale upon his mortgage executed by Rudra and pleaded that P was estopped from denying his title as mortgagee. Held, that the plaintiff ought to have raised the question of estoppel in the previous suit brought by P, and not having done so, the present claim was barred by the rule of res judicata. When N advanced money to Rudra, he did not make any enquiry as to his title. It was found that he resided in the same locality as Rudra and had been lending money to the family for a long time. Held, he could not claim to be a bona fide transferee within the meaning of s. 41, Transfer of Property Act. The fact that money advanced to Rudra was applied in payment of R's debts did not make a mortgage made by Rudra a valid mortgage. PATERSHRI PARTAB NARAIN SINGH v. (240 a)—S. 11—'Res judicata'—Consent decree — Estoppel, distinguished. — A consent-decree has, to all intents and purposes, the same effect, as res judicata, as a decree passed per invitum. A consent-decree, come to between the predecessors-in-interest of the parties, touching matters substantially and directly in issue between them, is res judicata. Res judicata differs from estoppel. The former ousts the jurisdiction of the Court, while the latter does no more than shut the mouth of a party. To put it colloquially and compendiously, estoppel never means anything more than that a person shall not be allowed to say one thing at one time and the opposite of it another time; while res judicata means nothing more than that a person shall not be heard to say the same thing twice over. (6 C.W.N. 889, Rel. on.) The plaintiff sued for the ejectment of the defendant on the allegation that the defendant's interest (under-raiyati) was an encumbrance which he had annulled by a notice under s. 167 of the Bengal Tenancy Act; the suit was dismissed because the notice was not served within the statutory period. The plaintiff then brought the suit to eject the defendant as a trespasser with an alternative plea that, even if the defendant's under-raiyati be admitted to be valid, he can be evicted on notice under s. 49, which has been given. Held, that the plaintiff's claim to eject the defendant as a trespasser ought to have been made a ground of attack in the former suit, and that the cause of action in both cases was exactly the same, namely, that the plaintiff is entitled to possession of the land and was being wrongly kept out of it by the defendants. If, however, the plaintiff could show that the defendant's under-raiyati was terminated by a legal notice under s. 49, he would be entitled to eject the defendants. SHERJAN GAZI v. The claim was decreed in favour of R on the ground that she was absolute owner of the property. Later on D brought a suit against R claiming that the ornaments belonged to the estate of M and praying for a declaration that he was entitled to succeed as his son and heir. The claim was resisted on the ground of res judicata: Held, that the plea of res judicata must be disallowed, inasmuch as, in the first suit, there was no final adjudication as between R and D, and it was a matter of no consequence whatever to the defendant therein, for the purposes of relief to be given against him, whether R or whether D succeeded. As between co-plaintiffs a finding to become res judicata must have been essential for the purpose of giving relief to the plaintiff in the previous suit. The Court ought not to hold apoint to be res judicata, unless it is clear from the pleadings and the findings in the previous suit. on a mortgage made to pay off the family debt, the son was not entitled to redeem it on the sole ground that he was no party to the suit on the mortgage. Per Karamat Hussain, J.—A private sale by the father in a joint Hindu family or an auction-sale by a Court is held to be binding upon his sons because of their pious duty to pay their father's debt, and not because the sale has taken place, and as there is no pious duty to abstain from redeeming the mortgage made by the father, an auction-sale cannot extinguish the right to redeem. When they claim redemption, they, in fact, come forward to perform the pious duty cast upon them by the Hindu Law, and an auction-sale cannot stand in their way. The right to redeem a mortgage is quite distinct from the right to get back a share in a property sold in execution of a decree upon a mortgage. BALDEO SINGH v. In suit for sale on foot of this mortgage, they put up the mortgaged property to sale and themselves became purchasers thereof. The sons and grandsons of the mortgagor, who were defendants to the present suit, brought a suit to set aside the auction-sale in respect of their two-thirds share in the property. The mortgagees in that suit set up a usufructuary mortgage in their favour made in June 1879. A decree was made in favour of these sons and grandsons conditional upon their paying the amount due under the usufructuary mortgage. The mortgagees did not in that suit set up their rights under the mortgages of 1879 and 1883 which were the subject-matter of the present suit ; held, that the plaintiffs were debarred from maintaining the suit by the principle of res judicata, inasmuch as what the plaintiffs acquired by the auction-sale was the full proprietory title over the property originally mortgaged, what they paid for it was not the trifling sum paid at the auction-sale, but this sum plus all that was due to them under the usufructuary mortgage of 1879 and the two simple mortgages of 1879 and 1883, and they ought to have pleaded in reply to the suit brought by the present defendants that the latter were entitled at most to a conditional decree subject to payment of whatever was due to the auction-purchasers on account of the antecedent mortgages subject to which the property was sold. dated 3rd June, 1904. Held, that the present suit was barred by Expl. IV to s. 11 of the Civ. Pro. IV*—Res Judicata—suit for redemption—Failure of suit—Second suit in ejectment—Court—Discretion—In ejectment-suit a redemption decree can be passed—Mortgage—Redemption—Practice.—Where a person sues to redeem a mortgage from the defendant and fails, he can bring a second action against the defendant in ejectment. The second action is not barred by res judicata. The question whether any matter might and ought to have been made a ground of defence or attack in a previous suit must depend on the facts of each case. One important test is, whether the matters in the two suits are so dissimilar that their union might lead to confusion. The matter involved in a suit in ejectment is essentially different from that involved in a suit for redemption. In the first place, where a person sues to eject, he sues as owner of the property; where he sues to redeem, he sues as owner of an interest in it, namely, the equity of redemption and the defendant as mortgagee is sued as holding the property as security for the debt. Secondly, in a suit for redemption, no question of title to the property is necessarily involved, because, if the mortgage set up by the plaintiff is proved and alive, the mortgagee cannot deny the mortgagor's title but must allow him to redeem and sue him separately on the question of title. If the mortgage is not proved, the suit fails, independently of the question of title. It has been the practice of the Bombay High Court to pass a decree for redemption in a case in which the plaintiff has sued in ejectment. This is purely in the exercise of the Court's discretionary power; and it can hardly be maintained that the plaintiff failing in an ejectment suit ought to pray for the alternative relief by way of redemption, when the Court is not bound to grant it as a matter of right. declaration of title. Held, that the parties to the former suit did not litigate in respect of the private right claimed in common for themselves and others within the meaning of s. 11, Expl. VI of the Code. In order that Expl. VI might be applicable, there must be community of interest. Held that the dismissal of the suit did not bar the trial of the issue as to title as regarded J and others who had not been made parties to the previous suit. Per Karamat Husain, J.—The doctrine of res judicata with certain limitations prohibits a Court of justice from deciding in a subsequent suit an issue which has been decided in a previous suit. When a Court, with reference to an issue involved in a subsequent suit, is of opinion that res judicata bars the trial of that issue, it refrains from deciding that issue. To call this action of the Court a decision of that issue in the subsequent suit is a misnomer and can in no way deprive it of the power of deciding that issue between the plaintiff and the rest of the defendants. What it does enact is that no Court shall try any suit, in which the matter directly and substantially in issue has been directly and substantially in issue in a former suit, and has been heard and finally decided. That a claim has been included in a previous suit, without its having been directly and substantially put in issue and decided, does not upon the dismissal of that suit preclude a subsequent suit upon it. In order to determine whether anything ought to have been set up in the previous suit, the scope of that litigation ought to be determined; and, when a decree simply dismisses a suit, it is necessary to look at the pleadings and judgment in the suit, to see what were the points nothing was said as to who was to receive that sum or whether the Rs. 350 forming a portion of that sum was to be deducted on account of the alleged mortgage. R., were two. The decree was against each of the four for one-fourth of the total sum decreed. R. R. having died, leaving J.R., co-judgment-debtor, as his heir, M. M. applied for execution as regards R. R.'s one-fourth share by attachment of his share in certain house property. J.R., objected to the attachment, and his appeal against the order rejecting the application was dismissed. On revision, the Chief Court remanded the case for inquiry on the merits and disposal according to law. The original Court executing the decree, on the date fixed for evidence, on the decree-holder not appearing when the case was called, passed two orders, first, in the execution case, to the effect that the decree-holder being absent, the file should be consigned to the record-room; and, secondly, in the objection case, to the effect that "the decree-holder is absent, and under s. 331, Civ. Pro. Code, the decree-holder is a quasi-plaintiff, and the objector a quasi-defendant, and that, therefore, in the absence of the decree-holder, the objection must be allowed, and the property released." The decree-holder did not attempt to have these orders set aside, but subsequently applied again for execution attaching the same property. J. R., again objected, urging that the decree-holder had finally lost his right of executing the decree against that property, because of the previous order passed in the objection case. The executing Court disallowed the objection. On appeal, the Divisional Judge held that the previous order was a bar against a subsequent application for execution of the decree by attachment of the property then released. The decree-holder appealed to the Chief Court. Held, that the order in the execution case was not a bar to further execution; that the order passed in the objection case could not legally be passed under s. 331, Civ. Pro. Code, (that section only relates to cases in which a decree for possession is in question, and resistance or obstruction is offered to the officer charged with the execution of the warrant by a person who is not the judgment-debtor); that s. 244 (c) was applicable to the case, and the objection must be deemed to have been allowed under the section. J.R., the objector, being a judgment-debtor, s. 278 was not applicable. Where the heir and representative of a deceased judgment-debtor being himself a judgment-debtor under the same decree objects to the attachment of the property of the deceased man, on the ground that the objector has a lien upon it, the matter falls within the scope of s. 244 (c), that taking the order as one under s. 244 (c), the acceptance of the objection and release of the property in the absence of the decree-holder without any evidence being taken from the objector amounted to nothing more than a dismissal for default of the execution application, that the decree-holder was entitled again to apply for execution against the same property, and the first Court was right in declining to treat the matter res Judicata. XVIII, r, 1—Specific performance of contract of sale of land—Parties to the contract proper parties to the suit—Costs—Powers of appellate Court with regard to question of costs—Practice—Raising of issues—Waiver*—Res judicata—Misjoinder of parties and causes of action.—A son of the plaintiff had filed a suit against the plaintiff and his other son in 1884 for a partition of the property in the plaintiff's possession. The two main questions in that suit were, first, whether the property in the hands of the plaintiff was ancestral property and as such belonging to the joint family, and, secondly, whether the son could, during the plaintiff's life-time, claim partition of that property against his wishes. The Court of first instance decided both the question in favour of the plaintiff's son. The appeal Court reversed the decree of the Court of first instance holding that the plaintiff's son could not claim partition of ancestral property during the plaintiff's life-time. Having found this, the appeal Court observed that that was sufficient for the decision of the case, but they thought it "advisable to express an opinion on the question" whether the property was ancestral. On that question the appeal Court came to the conclusion that the son had failed to give such proof, that the property that came to the hands of his grandfather contributed materially to the funds which the grandfather employed in the business. In 1907 the plaintiff entered into a contract for the sale of a plot of land with one Awabai. Under the agreement it was provided "That the vendor will clear at his own expense, all incumbrance, and claims on the said property and will otherwise make out a good title thereto free from all reasonable doubts, claims and demands." As some sons and grandsons of the plaintiff objected to the alienation of the property by the plaintiff, Awabai's solicitors called upon the plaintiff to obtain concurrence and consent of all persons who would be entitled to an interest in the property on the footing that it was ancestral. The plaintiff thereupon sued Awabai for specific performance of the contract. On her death the plaintiff brought on the record her executors. He made also his sons and grandsons parties to the suit, praying that, should they or any of them set up any claim against the said premises, his sole and absolute rights to the said premises might be declared and given effect to. The executors (defendants I & II) denied the right of the plaintiff to enforce the contract on the ground that he had failed to make out a good title to the property by removing or clearing the claims of his male issues, and submitted that the plaintiff had no right to drag them as parties to a litigation between him and his sons, and that they could not be expected to wait for the completion of the sale of the land until such litigation was over. Defendant No. III, one of the sons of the plaintiff, contended that the plaintiff had misjoined causes of action and that the had interest in the property in the suit which was ancestral. The other sons also contended that the property was ancestral and sought for a declaration that the property was joint family property, and prayed for an injunction restraining the plaintiff from alienating the same. It was contended on behalf of the plaintiff that the question as to the nature of the property was res judicata in view of the decision of the Appeal Court in the suit of 1884. The Court of the first instance held that the question as to the nature of property was not res judicata, as all that the Court of appeal in the prior suit decided was that a son could not according to Khoja Law enforce partition against his father, that the suit was bad for misjoinder of parties and causes of action, and that the plaintiff was not entitled to enforce specific performance of the contract. On appeal; Held, confirming the decree of the lower Court, (1) that the only question decided by the appeal Court in the suit of 1884 was as regards partition, that the question as regards the character of property, although directly and substantially in issue between the parties to that suit, was not heard and finally decided between the parties, so as to estop the plaintiff's sons and grandsons from claiming to have the question tried and determined when properly raised. (2) That the suit was bad for misjoinder of causes of action and parties. (3) That the plaintiff was not entitled to enforce specific performance of the contract owing to the dispute between him and his sons regarding the character of the property. Before different sets of defendants can be joined in the same suits or different causes of action united in one suit, two conditions must be fulfilled; first, the right to relief sought in the suit must arise against all the defendants from the same act or transaction or, the same series of acts or transactions; and, secondly, some common questions either of fact or law should arise against the defendants if separate suits were brought against such persons. In a suit for specific performance of sale or purchase of property, parties other than those who are parties to the contract cannot be joined in the suit. Where there are claimants adverse to the vendor-plaintiff whose claims are not purely illusory or manifestly unmaintainable, the existence of such adverse claims entitles the defendant-purchaser to a decree in his favour in a suit for specific performance. The appellate Courts have the fullest power and the widest discretion to alter, vary, or reverse any portion of a decree under appeal, including the portion that deals with costs. It is the settled practice of the appeal Court never to interfer with the Judge below in his order as to costs, unless the order offends against some well-recognised principle, or unless the appeal Court feels that it would be unjust to the party against whom it is made if the order be allowed to stand. A question arose whether the defendants, by not urging the objection as to non-joinder or mis-joinder of parties or mis-joinder of causes of action, in the form of an issue, were to be taken as having waived the objection: Held by Davar, J.—That there was no waiver; for 'though it has been the practice of the Bombay High Court to allow the defendants' counsel to raise issues soon after the pleadings are read, the duty of framing and recording issues is cast by law upon the Court. Defendants' counsel is under no obligation to raise or frame issues. He is only bound to give such information to the Court on behalf of his client as may be necessary to form a correct appreciation of the disputes and differences between the parties. Any omission on his part, when suggesting issues to the Court, ought not to prejudice his client to the extent of holding that they had waived the objection." Held by Robertson, J.—That the objection was waived: for "in the Bombay High Court it has always been the practice for counsel for the defendant, after the reading of the pleadings, to suggest to the Court the issues which he desires raised. These are generally recorded by the presiding Judges with but slight modification. It is, no doubt, due to the fact that these Courts can and do rely on the assistance of an able and highly trained bar, that the provisions of O. O. XXI, r. 35 of the Civ. Pro. Code of 1908 has not conferred on Civil Courts a new power of granting a decree for joint possession. It only shows in what manner a decree for joint possession should be executed. A right to joint possession is a right which existed long before Act V of 1908 came into force. In 1908, plaintiff brought a suit for exclusive possession of certain property. The suit was dismissed on the ground that, on plaintiff's own statement, the property was part and parcel of an undivided mahal. In 1909, plaintiff instituted a fresh suit on the same cause of action paying for a declaration of ownership, for possession of the property and for joint possession if the plaintiff was entitled to that. Held, that the suit was barred partly by s. 11 and partly by O. suit for possession of the same land by way of redemption—Adverse possession— Construction of decree—Bar to recovering shamilat—Res judicata.—In 1897, S sued G and A for possession of 246 kanals and 18 marlas of land, without mentioning anything about the shamilat appertaining thereto, on the allegations that he was the owner of that area, but the defendants had taken forcible possession of it under an alleged title of mortgagee. S got a decree therefor, conditional on his paying to G and A Rs. 837-8-0. The decree was in the following terms :—" Yeh hukm diya jata hai ke agar mudai 857 Rupia 8 anna barai muda alai adalat mendakhal kare to dakhal arazi mutdawiya par pawe." S failed to execute the above decree. The plaintiffs paid a part of the consideration-money and were put in possession of the estate subject to the supervision of the defendants. The sale was to be completed and the balance of the price was to be paid after a certain time. The purchasers cultivated the estate and paid off the mortgages and made some other payments on behalf of the vendors. Then disputes arose and each party accused the other of delay. The vendors eventually sued for possession of the estate and for general relief. The purchasers defended themselves in that suit, and sued for possession under s. 9 of the Specific Relief Act and for damages and for an injunction. There was no relief prayed and no issue framed in either suit on any point except possession and compensation. The purchasers did not ask for completion of the agreement, nor the vendors for its cancellation. Plaintiffs were allowed the management of the estate, but refused possession thereof. After the disposal of both the suits, the plaintiffs instituted the present suit for specific performance of the agreement for sale. Held that the suit was barred by s. 43, Civ. Pro. Code. (318)—S. 11, O. II, r. 2 (=ss. 13, 42, Civ. Pro. Code, 1882)—Relief omitted in former suit, suit for—Declaration of title—Relief claimed in subsequent suit which could have been claimed previous suit—Res Judicata.—The appellant (talukdar) caused a notice of ejectment to be served on the respondents as thekadars of a village, under the provisions of ss. 54 and 55, Oudh Rent Act. The respondents sued to contest their liability to be ejected, and the notice was set aside. Thereupon, the appellant brought a suit against the respondents in the Court of the Subordinate Judge for possession of the village, alleging that they were thekadaras and liable to be ejected by the Revenue Courts. The appellant did not ask in his plaint for a declaration of his title. His suit was dismissed. The appellant subsequently instituted the present suit against the respondents in which he alleged that they were thekadars of the village and claimed a declaration that he was the absolute proprietor of the village, and the only right which the respondents had was to receive one-tenth of the proceeds of the village, and that they were liable to be ejected by the Rent Court. The suit was dismissed on the ground that it was barred by the provisions of s. 43 or s. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Held, that the present suit could not be held to be barred by s. 13, Civ. Pro. Code, for, it could not be said that the appellant claimed a declaration of his title in the former suit and that the Court refused to grant him relief. But it was barred by s. 43, Civ. Pro. Code. The causes of action in the two suits were the same; the Courts which heard the former suit were competent to grant the appellant a declaration of his title; the appellant had an opportunity of obtaining in the former suit the relief which he now sought; and, having omitted to sue for it in the former suit, he could not sue for it now. Code, 1882, ss. 13, 43)—Partition of house-sites by Revenue Court—Ouster—Suit for possession—Dismissal—Subsequent suit for partition, whether barred.*—On an application to the Revenue Court for partition, the sites to certain houses were partitioned and certain portions allotted to the plaintiffs, who were under the belief that by the partition not merely the site but the houses were partitioned. The defendants ousted the plaintiffs from possession of the portions of the houses which the plaintiffs so believed had fallen to them on partition, and in consequence of this they instituted a suit for recovery of possession, which was dismissed on the ground that the Revenue Court had no power to partition house property and that, consequently, the plaintiffs had not acquired any title to the specific portions of the houses which they claimed. They then brought a second suit for partition of the house property which was contended to be barred by the provisions of ss. 13 and 43, Civ. Pro. Code. Held that the suit was not barred either by s. 13 or by s. 43, as the cause of action was not the same, and the property, the subject-matter of the two suits, was not identical, nor was the title upon which the two suits were based identical. The parties referred the whole case to an arbitrator. Two days before the date fixed for the delivery of the award, the arbitrator asked for time. On the same date, the parties executed a razinamah to the effect that the plaintiff had understood all the accounts and had settled them and that, they had no further dispute. This was forwarded to Court with a petition by the arbitrator setting forth, that he had explained the accounts to the parties and that they, after fully understanding the accounts, had executed the razinama and that the suit should, therefore be consigned to the record room. The parties were examined by Court and the plaintiff stated that he had fully gone into the accounts and considered and understood them and that then and thereafter he and the defendant had no further dispute relating to them. The defendant attested the razinama and the Court thereupon dismissed the suit. The present suit was subsequently filed and the plaint was in substance to the same purport as that in the former suit with the important addition that the defendant had, in the presence of the arbitrator, promised to explain the accounts to him and to pay whatever sum was found due thereon, provided the plaintiff first filed a razinama in the case already instituted, and that in pursuance of this agreement, the razinama was drawn up and filed in Court and the case dismissed, but subsequently the defendant failed to render such accounts, though demanded by the plaintiff. The defendant denied the promise on which the suit was brought and pleaded that it did not lie as the claim on the agency was barred by time and by s. 13 of the Civ. Pro. Code, and that the plaintiff was estopped by the razinama. Held, that the contentions of the defendant were not valid. That the petition of the arbitrator was not an award ; that the matter directly and substantially in dispute in the present and the previous suits was not the same ; that the provisions of s. 373 of the Civ. Pro. Code, which should be strictly construed, had no bearing on the present claim, the former suit being disposed of under s. 375 ; that the plaintiff was in no way estopped from making the present claim ; and that proof of oral promise was not excluded by the provisions of s. 92 of Evidence Act. Code, 1882 s. 16—Object—Power of Indian Courts*—Varashasans (annual allowances) charged on villages situated in Nizam's territory—Their nature—Suit in Court in British territory for share in such allowances—Jurisdiction.—The object of the detailed provisions of s. 16, Civ. Pro. Code, 1882, is to limit jurisdiction in respect of claims to immoveable property to the Court within whose local jurisdiction such property may be situated; and as a rule, Indian Courts have no power to decide on rights and interests in immoveable property lying outside their local jurisdiction. Varashasans (or annual allowances) charged, on certain villages situated in the Nizam's territory are, in their nature, immoveable property. So, a suit by the plaintiffs for obtaining a declaration that they are entitled to a certain share in such allowances, being one for determination of their right to, or interest in, immoveable property, must, under s. 16, Civ. Pro. Code, 1882, be brought in the Courts of the Nizam in whose territory the Varashasans are granted and paid to the defendants. Such a suit should not be brought in a Court in British territory, simply because the defendants (the recipients of such allowances) happen to reside there. KESHAV v. Code, 1882) —Proviso to—'Personal obedience,' interpretation of—Applicability of the proviso where all the defendants do not reside within the jurisdiction of the Court where the suit is instituted.*—The expression 'personal obedience' in the proviso to s. 16 must be interpreted with special reference to the fact that the defendants reside or work within the jurisdiction of the Court, whose order is to be obeyed. The obedience must be such as the defendants could render without going beyond that jurisdiction. In the case of more than one defendant, the proviso is inapplicable, unless all the defendants reside or carry on business or personally work for gain within the jurisdiction of the Court where the suit is filed, if that is not the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the property is situate. (404)—*S. 16 [=Civ. Pro. Therefore, a suit for a declaration that the plaintiffs were the persons really beneficially interested in such a decree, though the decree is not in their names, is not a "suit for the determination of a right to or interest in immoveable property," within the meaning of cl. The proceeds of the sale, after deducting commission, were made over to another defendant, who was the mortgage-creditor of the defendant, and the plaintiffs sued the mortgagee-creditor for a refund of their two-thirds share of the purchase-money. Held that the suit directly affected an interest in immoveable property, and, as such, was one "for the determination of any right to or interest in immoveable property," within the meaning of s. 16 (d) of the Civ. Code, 1882, shows that the object of the Code is to limit the territorial jurisdiction of the Courts in regard to the property that they are to deal with. A comparison of S. 223 with the last paragraph of S. 649 indicates that territorial jurisdiction is a condition precedent to a Court executing a decree. So a Court, in execution of a decree, has no jurisdiction to sell property, over which it had no territorial jurisdiction at the time it passed the order of sale. Mortgaged property, which was situate within the territorial jurisdiction of one Court, passed under

It can be entertained by any Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction any portion of the property is situate, if the entire claim is cognizable by such Court. But a suit relating to several properties situate within the jurisdiction of different Courts and based on separate and distinct causes of action cannot be tried anywhere, being bad for multifariousness, until it is confined to the property, claim to which, is based on one of the causes of action. Several separate invasions of plaintiff's rights constitute different causes of action and each one arises on the day of infringing the right. The Court returned the plaint for presentation in the proper Court. On appeal the order was set aside. Both Courts found that specifiic contract for payment at any particular place was proved. Held, that the finding of the lower Courts must be accepted, and, this being a small cause, no further appeal lay, and that, for the same reasons, no appeal lay under s. 70 (1) (b) of the Punjab Courts Act. The Chief Court treated the further appeal as an application under s. 70 (1) (a) of the Courts Act to consider the question of jurisdiction, and held that the Delhi Court had jurisdiction, the cause of action having arisen at Delhi, by reason of the fact that the plaintiff paid on the defendant's behalf money to the Delhi firm at Delhi. (10 B. 202, D.) The duty of the serving Court under s. 85 is to proceed, on receipt of the summons, as if it had itself issued it, and then to return it, with the record (if any) framed under the section, to the Court from which it orginally issued. (10 B. 202, D.) It then devolves upon the latter Court, when the defendant does not appear, to determine upon the sufficiency of the service before proceeding to try the suit. Failure to do this will amount to an irrgularity not cured by s. 578. The Chief Court, as the Court of the highest appellate authority in the province, has inherent jurisdiction to rectify errors, omissions and defects which, unless so rectified, would result in serious miscarriage or failure of justice. If, therefore, a judgment of a lower Court is irregular as pointed above, the Chief Court has power to remand the case to the lower Court for a fresh decision according to law. SHER ALAM v. Code, 1882, ss. 220, 584)—Costs, order as to—Second appeal against order as to costs—Discretionary power of Court, jurisdiction to interfere with.*—The plaintiff brought a suit against the defendant for arrears of rent for 1304 and the kharif of 1305 Fasli. The suit was founded on the provisions of s. 127, Oudh Rent Act. The defendant pleaded that the land had been in his possession for many years, that he was the owner of it, and that the provisions of s. 127 were not applicable. The Assistant Collector held that the defendant was not the owner of the land, but, as he had not occupied it without the landlord's consent, the suit would not lie under s. 127; and upon this ground he dismissed the suit. The plaintiff subsequently brought another suit against the defendant in which he claimed arrears of rent for 1305 Fasli in respect of the land, founding the suit on the provisions of the same section. The defendant pleaded that the suit was barred by s. 13, Civ. Pro. Code, and that he was proprietor of the land. The Court of first instance decreed the suit. On appeal, the District Judge dismissed it upon the ground of res judicata, but he ordered that the defendant should pay the plaintiff's costs in both Courts; the reasons given for this order being that the defendant, in spite of the judgment of the Assistant Collector in the previous suit, dishonestly alleged that he was owner of the land and pleaded adverse possession, etc., etc. The defendant preferred a second appeal to the Court of the Judicial Commissioner on the question of costs only. Following the law laid down in 16 B. 676, held that an order of an appellate Court as to costs is "contrary to law," within the meaning of s. 584, Civ. Pro. Code, not only when the Court's discretion has been exercised contrary to law, in the ordinary sense, but, also, when that discretion has been exercised in such circumstances as would justify the correction of the order by the appellate Court, had it been passed by a Court of original jurisdiction. Held further, that there had been an illegal exercise of discretion on the part of the District Judge in the matter of costs and that, therefore, a second appeal would lie from his order. The grounds taken in second appeal should be full and specific and should clearly indicate the error of law assigned, or the substantial error or defect in law or procedure or investigation which is imputed, and, in the latter case, it should be made to appear, on the face of the grounds of appeal, that such error or defect probably produced error or defect in law in the decision on the merits by stating what bearing the supposed error or defect had on the merits of the case. Code, 1882, ss. 223 and 244)—Execution of decree—Jurisdiction of Court to attach and sell property situate outside its territorial jurisdiction—Questions relating to execution—Separate suit.*—In this case the suit was transferred from the Court of the District Judge of Amritsar to the Court of the District Judge of Lahore which passed a money decree in favour of the plaintiff. After the final decision of the case by the Chief Court the District Judge of Lahore upon the application of the plaintiff attached and sold immoveable property belonging to the defendant situate in the Amritsar District. The present suit was filed by the judgment-debtor against the plaintiff for possession of the property sold and purchased by the plaintiff contending, inter alia, that the Court of the District Judge of Lahore had no jurisdiction to attach and sell property situate outside its territorial jurisdiction, and the order of attachment passed by it was a nullity. Held, that the suit was barred by s. 244 of the Civ. Pro. Code, and the order passed by the Court of the District Judge of Lahore was not a nullity. The terms of s. 223, Civ. Pro. Code, are not mandatory. SARDAR GURBACHAN SINGH v. He had it transferred to another Court for execution. Meantime the judgment-debtor's properties, in the place where plaintiff's decree was obtained, were attached and sold in execution of some other decree against him and the proceeds of the sale were paid into Court. Thereupon, the present plaintiff applied that the proceeds of the execution sale might be rateably distributed under s. 295. The application was refused, on the ground that, as the decree obtained by him had been transferred to another Court and was in course of execution there, no application under s. 295 of the Code could be entertained by the Court, which passed the decree, till the decree had been re-transferred and the certificate contemplated by s. 223 of the Code obtained. Hence the present suit by the plaintiff to obtain his share of the assets paid under s. 295 of the Code to the defendants. The lower Court dismissed plaintiffs' suit on the ground that he was not competent to apply to the Court, which passed the decree so long as the execution was pending in another Court. Held, s. 295 of the Code provides that, whenever assets are realised by sale or otherwise in execution of a decree, and more persons than one have, prior to the realisation, applied to the Court by which such assets are held, for execution of decrees for money against the same judgment-debtor, and have not obtained satisfaction thereof, the assets, after deducting the costs of the realisation, shall be divided rateably among all such persons. There could be no doubt that the plaintiff complied with the requirements of the section, for, before the realisation of the assets, he did apply to the Court by which the assets were to be realised, for execution of his decree for money against the same judgment-debtor. It was also clear that he did not obtain complete satisfaction of his decree in the Court to which it was transferred. The contention that, once the decree was transferred, the Court to which passed it had no jurisdiction to entertain any application for execution thereof and that there could not be two simultaneous executions of the same decree could not be accepted as correct. (8 C. 687, 14 M.I.A. 529, 27 C. 488, 25 A. 443, R.) [R., 11 C.L.J. 69=14 C.W.N. 396=3 Ind. Cas. 105.] A decree may be executed simultaneously in two or more districts. And, although a decree may have been transferred for execution, it is open to the decree-holder to make an application for execution, in order to enable him to obtain rateable distribution under s. 295 of the Code, to the Court which passed the decree and which holds the assets realised. Upon such application being made, the Court to which the decree has been transferred should be called upon to certify, under s. 223 of the Code, what portion, if any, of the decree has been satisfied; and upon obtaining such certificate, the assets may be rateably distributed. It is not necessary to have the decree formally transferred before the application under s. 295 of the Code can be made. Appeal allowed and case remanded for trial on the merits. BAIJ NATH GOENKA v. Nor does the Court passing the decree cease to have jurisdiction to execute the decree by virtue of the transfer. S. 223 provides that a decree may be executed by the Court that passed it. Therefore, that Court, in spite of the transfer of jurisdiction, has power to execute the decree. (25 C. 315, R.) The decree-holder is bound to apply to the Court which passed the decree, for a transfer to the other Court, and such an application is a step-in-aid of execution within the meaning of cl. Code, 1882) whether bars the trial of an issue involved in the questions mentioned in the section—Issue raised at the instance of a defendant in a suit brought against him.*—The effect of s. 244, Civ. Pro. Code, is to debar a plaintiff from bringing a suit for the determination of a question relating to the execution, discharge, or satisfaction of a decree which has arisen between himself and the defendants as parties to the suit in which the decree was obtained, but not to debar a defendant from setting by way of defence a matter which relates to the execution, discharge, or satisfaction of a decree obtained in a suit to which he and the plaintiff were parties. All that s. 244 enacts is that certain questions therein specified shall be determined by the order of the Court executing the decree and not by separate suit; the section bars a suit brought for the determination of certain questions, but does not bar the trial of any issue involved in those questions, if the issue is raised at the instance of a defendant in a suit brought against him. The first mortgagee then sued on his mortgage and bought the property in execution of his own mortgage-decree. The first mortgagee afterwards sued the puisne mortgagee, and claimed that the puisne mortgagee should either give up possession or redeem him. Held, that the suit was not barred by s. 244, Civ. Pro. Code. (25 B. 631, R.) In order that s. 244, Civ. Pro. Code, should apply, two conditions must be fulfilled. The question must relate to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree, or stay of execution thereof; the question must arise between parties to the suit or their representatives. In the present case the question at issue arose only after the satisfaction of the original decree, and it was not between parties to the same suit or their representatives, but between representatives of the same party. Held, also, that, the defendant being a puisne mortgagee, his only right was to redeem the plaintiff. Where no objection to the procedure adopted is taken in the original Court, held that, in such a case, it is not necessary an appeal to set aside proceedings of the Court below as the forum both for the application for review of judgment and for an appeal, if any, from the order passsd in review would have been the same as the forum selected for the application for refund and for the appeal from the order dismissing that application. If it has been so reversed or superseded, the money recovered under it ought certainly to be refunded and is recoverable either by summary process or by a new suit or action. The true question, therefore, in such cases is whether the decree or judgment

Reading s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure in the light thrown by the principle thus laid down by the Privy Council, it must be taken to relate to decrees which are still subsisting and in force and which have not been superseded in appeal, and to be no bar to the institution of a suit for restitution after the decree has been reversed. But when the decree itself is, on the face of it, wholly irrelevant to the question raised, and the wrong-doer takes the plea of bar to shield his unlawful gain secured even against the express orders of the executing Court, possibly in collusion with the officer executing the decree, and in the absence of the judgment-debtors, s. 244 would seem to have no application. So, where a person sued to enforce his right of pre-emption, in a property subject to mortgagee, and got a decree directing delivery of possession of the equity of redumption therein, but, in execution, of the decree, the Patwari delivered possession of the property itself, instead of the equity of redemption, a regular suit by the mortgagee, claiming restitution of the property so wrongfully delivered cannot be said to be barred by s. 244, as the question raised in the suit does not relate to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree. Pro. Code, when taken with reference to the judgment-debtor, does not mean only his legal representative, that is, his heir, executor, or administrator, but it means his representative-in-interest, and includes a purchaser of his interest who, so far such interest is concerned, is bound by the decree. There is no reason for excluding from its signification an execution-purchaser of the judgment-debtor's interest. Per Banerji, J.—Every purchaser of the judgment-debtor's interest who is bound by the decree is a representative of the judgment-debtor within the meaning of the section, whether he is a purchaser under a private sale from the judgment-debtor or a purchaser at a compulsory sale held in execution of a decree obtained against the judgment-debtor. There is no distinction between the case of a purchaser under a private sale and an auction-purchaser, provided that the decree in execution can be enforced against him. The word "representative" means a person against whom the decree can be enforced either as legal representative of the judgment-debtor or as his representative in interest. Per Curiam:—An auction-purchaser at a sale held in execution of a simple money-decree against a judgment-debtor whose property has been ordered to be sold at the suit of mortgagees in a mortgage-suit, is a representative of the judgment debtor within the meaning of s.244, sub-s. The widows would have represented the estate if the alleged adoption had failed. In execution, plaintiffs purchased a portion of the lands and applied for delivery of possession. They were resisted by a third person, who alleged himself to be the nearest reversioner to the estate and to be in possession in his own right, because S himself was said to have been adopted by his father in conjunction only with the deceased widow and because the surviving widow had, under such circumstances, no interest in the estate at all. He also relied on a release deed, alleged to have been executed in his favour by the survivor of the two widows, who were defendants in the suit. The lower Court dismissed the application for delivery of possession. Hence the present appeal. There was a preliminary objection to the effect that no appeal lay. Held, that, if the objector had inherited the estate on the death of the deceased widow, he would be the person entitled to represent the estate; if, on the other hand, the surviving widow were in possession as the adoptive mother of S, even then the objector must be a person claiming from the surviving widow, who was one of the parties to the suit. In either view, the objector was a 'representative' within the meaning of s. 244 and the matter must be dealt with and decided in execution-proceedings only. The appeal therefore, did lie. Code*, 1882, Representative of judgment-debtor — Money-decree—Sale of property before attachment by judgment-debtor.—The judgment-debtor in a money decree sold certain property belonging to him. On the same day, the decree-holder applied for execution and some time afterwards attached the property and purchased it himself in execution. Held, that the first private purchaser, was in no sense a representative of the judgment-debtor, inasmuch as the decree which was being executed had no relation to the property, and that his title was superior to that of the subsequent execution purchaser. (9 C.W.N. 134, R.) It cannot be laid down generally that an order under s. 173 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, is in no case appealable. The mortgagee sued for and obtained a decree for sale and an order absolute for sale against the mortgagee. The mortgagee died before execution, and the decree-holders then applied to bring on to the record as her representatives the reversionary heirs of the judgment-debtor's husband. These persons resisted the application upon the ground that they were not the legal representatives of the widow, and the lower appellate Court decided that they were not and dismissed the decree-holders' application for execution. Held that, inasmuch as the reversionary heirs had repudiated the notion of their being legal representatives of the mortgagor from the outset and established to the satisfaction of the Courts that they were not such representatives, the order of the Court was correct. (645)—S. 47 (=s. 244, Civ. Pro. Code, 1882)— Stranger auction-purchaser, suit against, to set aside sale not maintainable—Auction-purchaser not representative of decree-holder.—It is well settled that, as between the judgment-debtor and the decree-holder, an objection to the sale in execution can only be taken in execution, and s. 244, Civ. Pro. Code, prohibits a suit by a party or his representative against an auction-purchaser to raise a question which, as between the judgment-debtor and the decree-holder, must have been determined under that section. The auction-purchaser derives his rights from the sale, which the party to the execution-proceeding should not be permitted to impeach except by application to the executing Court. A suit against an auction-purchaser is not maintainable, as s. 244 is a bar to set aside the sale except in a proceeding between the parties. A stranger purchaser in execution of a money-decree can never be treated as representative of the decree-holder. He purchases the rights of the judgment-debtor in the property attached, and not those of the decree-holder between whom and himself there is no privity of estate.

The true rule is that, where the decree is a mortgage-decree, the purchaser in execution will be the representative of the judgment-debtor. Where property is attached and sold under a money-decree, a stranger purchasing the property obtains the rights of the judgment-debtor in the property, but is not the representative even of the judgment-debtor; still less can he be the representative of the decree-holder. But the question whether a fraud has been committed in connection with such a sale by auction-purchaser alone is not triable under that section. Held further, that an auction-purchaser cannot be taken to be a representative of the decree-holder. In execution of this decree against S, M obtained possession of a seventh share of a "bagh" called 'Inam Bakhshwala.' F, who held a decree against M, brought to sale in execution of that decree M's one-seventh share of the grove in question and purchased it himself. S, alleging that the grove was a part of the zemindari estate known as mauza dilawal, and therefore belonged to him, brought the present suit against F to set aside the sale. The lower Court held that the suit was not maintainable, having regard to the provisions of s. 244 of the Civ. Pro. Code, and on that ground dismissed the suit. Held, on appeal, that F had not become, by virtue of the transaction, the "representative" of M in the sense of s. 244; and that still less can the question as to the title to this grove, now raised between S and F, be regarded as a question arising between the parties to the suit between M and S, or as a "question in anyway relating to the execution, discharge, or satisfaction of that decree;" and that, therefore, s. 244 was no bar to the present suit. (658)—S. 47 (=s. 244 of Code of 1882)—Parties to suit--Representative.--Where a decree has been passed and proceedings taken under it to obtain execution against a party in representative character, there seems to be no good reason for saying that he should not be considered a party to the suit with respect to any question which may arise between him and the other parties relating to the execution of the decree ; but (semble) a person who is a party to a suit in some capacity is not a party in every other capacity he may happen to fill. So, an objection by the judgment-debtor that the property attached was not his private property, but one held by him as trustee or executor does not fall under s. 244, Civ. Pro. Code, 1882, so as to bar a fresh suit. When the judgment-debtor sues to eject a stranger to the former suit, who has purchased the property at the auction, and not simply his decree-holder, the purchaser being neither a party to the former suit nor the representative of a party, does not come under the purview of s. 244 (c) of the Code of 1882 ; and if the auction-purchaser represents any body at all, it is the judgment-debtor ; and hence the dispute would virtually become one between a party and his representative. Accordingly, the representative of a deceased judgment-debtor, who, as such representative, was a party to the proceedings in execution of the decree, not having taken an objection in these proceedings that the property was his own and not assets of the deceased judgment-debtor, and the property having accordingly been sold in execution of the decree, neither he nor his subsequent vendee could question the title of the purchaser at the sale under the decree. (663)—S. 47 (=s. 244 of 1882)—Construction--Questions relating to execution—Parties to suit—Position of representatives added before or after decree.—The words " or their representatives " in s. 244 apply to persons against whom or against the property in whose hands the execution is sought, on the ground that they are the heirs of a judgment-debtor who has died after decree. The cases fall into two classes. The first class consists of cases in which a person is originally made a party in a representative capacity, or is subsequently made a party in consequence of the death of an original party before decree. In this case, such a person is a party to the suit within the meaning of s. 244, and a question between him and the decree-holder as to whether property has come to him as the representative of the judgment-debtor, and so is liable to be taken in execution of the decree against him as such representative, or on the other hand belongs to himself alone and not in such representative character, is one that must be decided in the execution-proceedings and not by suit. The second class of cases consists of those in which the representatives have not been made parties to the suit before decree; but in which, in consequence of the death of the judgment-debtor after decree, a question arises as to the rights of the decree-holder to execute the decree against the representatives or the property said to have descended to them. In such cases questions arising between a decree-holder and the representatives of the judgment-debtor as to whether property has come to the representatives as such, and so is liable to be taken in execution, or is their own property derived from any other source, and therefore not so liable, must be decided in the execution-proceedings and not by suit. (679)—*S. 47 (=Civ. Pro. Execution of this decree was taken out in 1861, but the matter remained pending till 1882. In December 1882, the defendant obtained possession of the lands in suit, being a portion of the lands to which his father (then dead) was entitled under the provision of the decree. The plaintiff objected that these lands were not included in the decree and on application by him for an order that the same should be given back to him was dismissed on 31-3-1883. The plaintiff thereupon instituted the present suit to recover the lands from the defendant, which was dismissed by the Court of first instance on the ground that the question between the parties was a question relating to the execution of the decree, and, as such, could not, under s. 244 of the Civ. Pro. Code, 1882, be determined by a separate suit. On appeal by the plaintiff to the Assistant Judge the latter reversed the decree of the lower Court. The defendant preferred a second appeal to the High Court. Held that the plaintiff's suit should be dismissed under s. 244 of the Civ. Pro. It was said that the sale was not an ordinary sale of attached property in execution of decree, that it purported to be a sale in execution of a mortgagee-decree, which directed the sale of the mortgaged property in accordance with the provisions of ss. 88 and 89 of the Transfer of Property Act, but that there was no such decree in existence, as only a decree nisi had been made, and not a decree absolute directing the sale. It was further argued that, until a decree absolute was made for the sale, the right to redeem existed and that the suit, might be regarded as a suit to redeem: held, that the suit was not maintainable. V's sons and that s. 244 of the Civ. Pro. Code, 1882, was a bar. It was contended that s. 244 did not apply, because V's sons were parties to the decree in their representative, and not in their own personal capacity, and as such were not bound to plead that the property was theirs; and that the question arising in the suit was not one between parties to the decree, because the auction-purchaser was not a party thereto. Held, (1) that the decree in the previous suit having been against the plaintiff's assignors as V's sons, it was a decree against them in respect of a debt of their father, which it was their pious duty to pay; and that, when the assignors were brought on the record as their father's representatives, they were in their own as much as in their representative capacity (20 B. 385, Appl.) that the mere fact that the auction-purchaser was not a party to the previous decree, did not prevent the applicability of s. 244; (19 C. 683, F.) that the question whether the property was ancestral or self-acquired, liable or not, in the hands of the sons to satisfy their father's debt under Hindu Law, was one relating to the execution of the decree and could not be raised in a separate suit. The judgment-debtor contended that the decree, so far as it made him (son) personally liable, was a nullity, and that he was not, therefore, liable to arrest. Held, that, though, when a decree is passed without any jurisdiction whatever, it is open to a judgment-debtor, in proceedings for execution, to impeach the decree as a nullity notwithstanding the fact that he took no steps to get it set aside in appeal or otherwise, this was not a case of that kind, for it would not have been incompetent to the Court to pass a decree personally against the son, if there should be evidence to warrant such a decree. Nor would the fact, that a decree was passed in the absence of such evidence, make it one passed without jurisdiction. In a case of such a character, a party to the suit will be precluded, in execution, from impeaching the decree, which was passed without opposition and which had not been set aside (21 B. 205, 27 M, 118, F.; 26 M. 31, D.) The High Court set aside the order of the lower Courts refusing execution and ordered the re-placement of the petition on file. Where the parties on record at the time were the plaintiffs and the representatives of the defendant, the question whether the sale was valid was a question whether a proceeding had in execution should be set aside and so one falling under s. 244 of the Civ. The suit was referred to arbitration, and the arbitrator awarded Rs. 1,05,000 to be paid by the first defendant to the plaintiff—Rs. 40,000 at once and Rs. 65,000 on the plaintiff handing over to the first defendant certain moveable and immoveable property and executing certain deeds of conveyances and releases. No objection having been filed to the awarded, a decree was passed in accordance therewith. Subsequent to the decree, one of the moveable properties which the plaintiff was to deliver to the first defendant before being entitled to receive Rs. 65,000 from the latter, i.e., a vessel which was at sea—was lost in the voyage. The plaintiff offered to pay its value which he estimated at Rs. 1,000. The first defendant having refused it, the plaintiff issued a notice calling upon him to show cause why, in execution of the decree, the Court should not ascertain and fix some sum as the value of the vessel to be allowed to the first defendant out of Rs. 65,000, because the vessel could not be delivered to him. The Court dismissed the notice on the ground that what it was asked to do amounted to making a fresh decree. Thereupon the plaintiffs took out a summons for an order to be made under s. 244, Civ. Pro. Code, 1882, in one of 3 alternative ways, viz., (1) to ascertain and fix a sum as the value of, or compensation for the vessel which had been lost, (2) to declare that the properties in the hands of the plaintiff may be retained, used and appropriated absolutely by them, seeing that the plaintiff could not hand over all the property referred to in the decree, and that, consequently, the first defendant was not liable to pay Rs. 65,000, and (3) to restore the suit and ascertain the rights of the parties. With reference to the first prayer, the Court held that it could not grant it, because such prayer, if granted, would amount to making a fresh decree. The second prayer also was refused because the Court held that the application was not one in execution of a decree, nor was the question one arising between the parties in the course of the execution of the decree, but that the decree having become incapable of execution, the summons asked the Judge to decide what were the rights of the parties in consequence of its non-execution. As to the third alternative relief, the Court, held that the matters in issue in the suit had been fully heard and determined and the rights of all the parties had been settled by the decree and consequently there was nothing further to be tried. The Court could not, in this suit, after passing a decree, proceed to ascertain the rights of the parties under a state of facts quite different from those which appeared in the pleadings and arising subsequent to the decree. On the dismissal of the appeal, some of the persons thus brought on the record applied for execution of the decree, excluding the rest on the ground that they were not real representatives. The application was objected to by the persons excluded, who claimed also to be entitled to the benefit of the decree. The first Court stayed proceedings and referred the parties to a regular suit. On appeal, the District Judge directed that the point in dispute should be determined in execution. Held that an appeal lay to the District Judge inasmuch as the first Court passed a definite order rejecting the application to execute the decree until it had been decided in a seperate suit as to who were the legal representatives of the original plaintiff. Held, also, that the first Court had no jurisdiction in execution to re-open the question as to whether certain persons brought on the record of the suit as representatives of the deceased plaintiff and as such made respondents in the appeal had been properly joined as parties or not. The matter was settled by the Appellate Court before passing its decree and therefore could not be questioned in execution. The orders of the first Court and the District Court were both set aside. (8 C. 51. 11 C.L.R. 113, 8 I.A. 123, 6 A. 269, 11 I. A. 37, 7 A. 102, 11 I,A. 181, F.) This principle is based on the assumption that the person debarred had an opportunity to contest the validity of the order. It has consequently no application when it is proved that there was no adjudication by reason of the failure of the decree-holder to prosecute the execution-proceedings with due diligence. Consequently, where there has been no judicial determination of the objection of the judgment-debtor by reason of the default of the decree-holder, it cannot be held that the previous order operates as an effective bar to an enquiry into the merits of the objection on the occasion of a subsequent application for execution. In cases, to which the provisions of O. XXI, r. 2 of the Code, are applicable, if appropriate application has not been made within the prescribed time, the alleged payment or satisfaction must be ignored, and the party, who seeks the benefit thereof, cannot indirectly obtain an extension of the period of limitation, on the ground that the question falls within the scope of s. 47 and may be determined thereunder. Where the contest lies between the assignee of the decree and the execution-purchaser of the interest of the judgment-debtor in the properties covered by the decree, and the latter makes allegations of fraud and conspiracy between the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor in the matter of the assignment of the decree, O. XXI, r. 2, has no application to the case, which falls within the scope of s. 47 under which the matter may be investigated. The question whether a regular suit is maintainable for the determination of the question of fraudulent assignment, or whether it ought to be determined in execution-proceedings, does not become one of practical importance, where the Court, in which the question has been raised, is the Court competent to execute the decree as also to entertain the suit. The matter is one of form, and the Court will not, by a strict adherence to the form, defeat the ends of justice. Under s. 49 of the Code, the assignee of a decree stands in no better position than the assignor, and takes it subject to all the equities and defences subsisting at the time of the assignment which the judgment-debtor could have asserted against it in the hands of the judgment creditor, notwithstanding that the assignee may have had no notice thereof. preferred.—It cannot be assumed that there is a right of appeal in every matter which comes under the consideration of a Judge; such right must be given by a Statute or by some authority equivalent to a Statute; consequently, if the right of appeal is challenged, it is incumbent upon the appellant to establish the right to appeal. But unless the objection was obviously sound, the appellant could hardly be expected to answer by anticipation the grounds that might possibly be assigned by the respondent in support of the objection. The practice therefore, usually followed in the Calcutta High Court, has been to require the respondent at the outset to indicate concisely the ground upon which his objection is based. (8 B. 287 Not. F.) The expression "an order relating to execution of a decree" is comprehensive enough to include an order relating to the stay of execution thereof. (29 B. 71, Expl.) An interlocutory order which does not conclusively determine the rights of the parties in controversy in the execution-proceedings is not a decree within the meaning of s. 47 read with s. 2 of the Code of Civil Procedure. On the plaintiff applying to execute the decree, the Court ordered that he might be allowed to do so if he fulfilled certain conditions at different stages of the proceedings. The Court determined various questions as to the character of the conditions to be imposed and called upon the decree-holder to comlpy with them. Before the time for compliance was over the jndgment-debtor appealed Held, that the orders were interlocutory and were not orders determining a question relating to execution within the meaning of s. 47. S. 51 of the Code is to be read with r. 11 of O. XXI and r. 1 of O. XL. When a Court appoints a Receiver for purposes of execution of a decree, the order is one under r. 1 of O. XL read with s. 51. If a Receiver is appointed without any direction given as to security, the order takes effect at once, and he is validly in possession though no security has been given. If the appointment is conditional upon the furnishing of security, the giving of security is a condition precedent, and there is no effective appointment till security has been given. Upon an appeal preferred under cl (e) of r. 1 of O. During the pendency of the suit, M having died, his widow, R and his brother, N were brought on the record as his legal representatives. The suit proceeded to a decree, which awarded the claim out of the property of M. Before, however, the decree was executed, both R and N died. C thereupon brought on the record the defendants as the legal representatives of M, and applied for execution of the decree by attachment and sale of the property in dispute. The defendants denied that they were legal representatives of M, and that they had any property of M which could be liable for the decree. The Court negatived the objections and sold the property which was purchased by the plaintiff. The plaintiff sued to recover possession from the defendants. The defendants contended that the property was joint family property of M and defendants, and that at his death it survived to the defendants. The plaintiff contended that the defendants were debarred by s. 244 of the Code of 1882 from asserting their title. The lower appellate Court disallowed the contention. On second appeal; Held, that, so far as the sale of the property by the Court at the decree-holder's instance as that of the deceased was concerned, the question was one relating to the execution of the decree arising between the decree-holder and the defendants as judgment-debtors under s. 252 of the Code. It was, therefore, a question in relation to them falling within s. 244 of the Code by reason of the explanation to s. 647. The defendants, were, therefore, bound to object to the attachment and sale under that section, so far as the decree-holder's action was concerned. On further contention that, whatever might have been the result if the decree-holder had been a party to the suit, the dispute now was between the auction-purchaser, who was a stranger to the previous suit and the execution proceedings therein, and the defendants, and that, therefore, s. 244 did not apply. Held, negativing the contention, that, though an action-purchaser at a Court-sale in execution of a decree was not a party to the suit in which the decree was passed, and though he was not a representative of either the decree-holder or the judgment-debtor for the purposes of s. 244, yet if the question raised by the judgment-debtor as to the legality of the Court-sale was virtually one between the parties to the suit, that is, between the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor, and if in the decision and result of that question the auction-purchaser was interested, the judgment-debtor should not be allowed to attach the sale in a suit, because he was precluded by s. 244 from raising the question by, or relying upon it as a defence in, any proceedings other than those under s. 244. (19 I.A. 166, 7 M. 255, F.) The test in all such cases is, whether the ground upon which the Court-sale is attached as conferring no title upon the auction-purchaser, affects the parties to the suit, and could have, as between them, been raised and determined under s. 244, and whether the auction-purchaser, though not a party to that suit, is a party interested in the result. H, another decree-holder against the same judgment-debtor, applied to execute his decree and prayed for rateable distribution under s. 295 of the Civ. Pro. Code, 1882. The execution proceedings were transferred to the Collector under s. 320 of the Civ. Pro. Code. The properties were sold by the Collector in execution of C's decree. Within thirty days of the sale, the judgment-debtor, applied under s. 310-A of the Civ. Pro. The Subordinate Judge declined to set aside the sale, inasmuch as the judgment-debtor had not deposited also the amount due under H's decree. The judgment-debtor appealed, but the District Judge dismissed the appeal on the ground that no appeal lay. On appeal to the High Court, it was contended, (1) that no appeal lay; (2) that inasmuch as the execution proceedings had been referred to the

Collector, s. 310-A of the Civ. Pro. The power to act under s. 310-A continued in the Court notwithstanding the transfer of execution to the Collector; that there was nothing in s. 310-A which precluded the Court from setting aside the sale merely because it had been confirmed, that it was erroneous on the part of the Subordinate Judge to hold that it was incumbent upon the judgment-debtor to deposit in Court anything except that for which s. 310-A has made provision. sold at the other creditor's instance under the attachment—Questions relating to execution—Second appeal—High Court.—In execution of their decrees, two decree-holders attached the judgment-debtor's property; other decree-holders also applied to execute their decrees against the judgment-debtor without issuing attachment. On the 22nd September, 1909, the day fixed for the sale, a third person, at the instance of the judgment-debtor, paid into Court, under O. XXI, r. 55 of the Code of 1908, money sufficient to satisfy in full the decretal claims of the two attaching creditors. On an ex parte application made to it, the Court ordered rateable distribution of the monies so paid into Court and sale of further properties which had been attached towards further satisfaction of the claims of the judgment-creditors. Against this order the judgment-debtor appealed to the District Court. During the pendency of the appeal, the other properties were sold in execution in January 1910, and the sale was, notwithstanding the judgment-debtor's objections, confirmed. The judgment-debtor appealed to the District Judge who dismissed the appeal on the 30th June, 1910. In June, 1911, the first appeal by the judgment-debtor came on before the District Court, but as the question of the confirmation of the sale had already been decided by that Court against the judgment-debtor, no further proceedings were taken. On appeal: Held, (1) that the order dated the 20th June 1910, having been a question in execution between the parties to decrees, fell under the provisions of s. 47 of the Code of 1908, and was appealable, (2) that the sale in January 1910 was not valid, for the propertywas not duly attached at the time of the sale, and the attachment already levied had come to an end by the payment into Court on the 22nd September, 1909. (3) That the money paid into Court under O. D., defendant in a partition suit was deprived by the High Court of a house allotted to him by the first Court and, subsequently, the High Court, acting under Ch. XLVII, set aside its decree and M. D., having recovered possession of the house, applied under s. 583 of the Code for mesne profits. Held, that s. 583 had no application, the order entitling M. D to restitution having been passed under Ch. XLVII, not in appeal under Ch. XLI. Held, further, that, it was not necessary for M. D., to bring a separate suit, one of his remedies was by "summary process," i.e., by an application under s. 244, and the application might be deemed to be one under that section. Where, under an erroneous decree, which is since reversed on appeal, the party succeeding in the lower Court has obtained possession of the land, the successful appellant may recover back the land, with mesne profits for the period during which he was out of possession, though the appellate Court does not award him mesne profits. It was transferred for execution to the Court of Munsiff of (South) Lucknow. In execution of his decree the respondent attached certain houses alleging that they belonged to the appellant's husband. The appellant thereupon lodged objection to the effect that the property attached was her exclusive party. The objection was allowed by the Munsiff, but was, on appeal, disallowed by the Subordinate Judge, who directed that the execution should proceed. Held, that the objection made by the judgment-debtor was governed by s. 244, Civ. The non-issue of notice to a party concerned is not a material irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale under s. 311 of the Civ. Pro. Code, 1882. It is rather an irregularity in proceedings which are anterior to the publishing or the conduct of the sale. The words "publishing or conducting" in s. 311 of the Code refer respectively to the proclamation of sale under s. 287 and to the action of the officer by whom the sale was held. been confirmed do not affect the case. (24 C. 355, R.) S. 244, Civ. Pro. Code bars a suit brought for the determination of certain questions, but does not bar the trial of an issue involved in those questions, if the issue is raised at the instance of a defendant in a suit brought against him. Per Abdur Rahim, J.—It is a well-established rule of law that a party relying upon fraud, either as the basis of his action or as a defence to a suit, must plead it in distinct terms, so that the party, whose act is impeached as fraudulent may have full notice of the charge he has to meet. The restriction imposed upon a decree-holder buying the property of the judgment-debtor, in execution of his decree, is the creation of a statute, and the Court cannot attach to the disregard of a rule like these consequences other than those contemplated by the Legislature. (23 M. 227, 5 B. 575, 11 B. 588, 14 M. 498, 22 B. 628, 11 C. 731, R.) A Court should not be hasty in inferring fraud, but should, on the other hand, construe strictly and narrowly all charges of fraud. (23 M. 227, 10 C. 757, 5 C.W.N. 265, R.) Questions bearing on the exercise of the discretion vested in the executing Court under s. 294, Civ. Pro. Code, cannot be properly determined in a suit for recovery of the property purchased. Per Sankaran Nair, J.—If a defendant would, in a suit brought or application made by him, be entitled to a relief which would be a complete answer to the plaintiff's claim, then, as a defendant, he is entitled to put forward his claim, unless he is estopped or otherwise barred. Where a decree-holder purchases property in contravention of s. 294, Civ. Pro. Code, and the judgment-debtor seeks to set aside the sale, it is unnecessary for the latter to allege fraud or that the property has not been sold for its proper value; it is for the decree-holder to satisfy the Court that the sale should be confirmed. Pro. Code, to have the sale set aside. The Court dismissed the application on the ground that the decree was one for the sale of the property passed under the Transfer of Property Act, and the provisions of s. 310-A of the Code of Civil Procedure were not applicable to a sale made in pursuance of such a decree. The judgment-debtors applied to the Judicial Commissioner's Court under s. 622, Civ. Pro. Code, for revision of that order. Held that the question whether the judgment-debtors had a right to apply under s. 310-A, Civ. Pro. Code, to have the sale set aside and the other questions arising in the case were question relating to the execution of the decree, that they arose between the judgment-debtors and the decree-holder and that, therefore, there was an appeal in the case; and an application under s. 622, Civ. Pro. Code, on the application of the judgment-debtor and the purchase-money, which had been paid in by the purchaser, was returned to him. On appeal, however, by the decree-holder, the order setting aside the sale was quashed and the sale was confirmed. The decree-holder now sued to compel the purchaser to re-pay, with interest, the money representing the price of the property which had been returned to him. The purchaser had not obtained possession, nor applied for a certificate of sale. Held, the suit was not maintainable. The subject-matter of the suit was clearly a matter coming within s. 244 (c) of the Code, and it ought to have been dealt with in execution. It was a matter relating to execution and discharge of the decree, and no independent suit could be maintained, (26 A. 447, F.B., F.) The course which the plaintiff-decree-holder ought to have adopted, was to have applied to the execution Court to call upon the purchaser to re-deposit in Court the purchase-money of the property, which had been returned to him. Subsequently, the sale was set aside on the ground of irregularity under s. 311, Civ. Pro. Code. The plaintiff then applied for a refund of the purchase-money paid by him, but his application was refused. Hence the present suit. The defendants contended that the suit was not maintainable, having regard to the provisions of s. 244, Civ. Pro. Code. Held the suit is maintainable. The case does not fall within s. 244. It is not a question between the parties to the suit or their representatives and relating to the execution of the decree. But even if it were, the suit may be taken as one instituted in a Court which had jurisdiction to execute the decree, and the plaint may be regarded as an application to the Court for determining the question, whether the purchaser was entitled to a refund of the money from the decree-holder to whom the money had been paid. suit, as being all interested in the land sold, to set aside the sale on the ground of fraud : Held that, as between the landlord and the tenants, who were parties to the prior rent-suit, the questions as to the propriety of the execution of the rent-decree by sale of the property, and as to the suppression of the sale-proclamation, were questions, which could and ought to have been decided under s. 244, and that as regards the tenants (parties to the rent-suit), the suit would not lie: Held also that, it was competent for the other two sons of the deceased, who were not parties to the prior rent-suit, to sue at least to have it declared that the sale in question did not affect their rights, and that, although as heirs of a deceased registered tenant, who had not got themselves registered in the landlord's sherista, they might not be able to question the decree obtained for arrears of rent, yet that fact did not preclude them from contesting a sale fraudulently obtained under colour of that decree, if it be true that the decree did not warrant any sale at all in execution of it. In such a case the judgment-debtor is entitled, whether the sale has been confirmed or not, to make, as against the person guilty of the fraud or accessory thereto, such application, if any, under s. 311 as he may be entitled to make. Per Ghose, J. (contra)—An objection to the validity of the sale raised by the judgment-debtor, after the sale had been confirmed, under s. 312, Civ. Pro. Two years later, the same holding was sold in execution of a rent-decree and purchased for Rs. 25 by the decree-holder thereof. Thereupon an order was made by the Munsiff, upon an application by the petitioner under the conjoint effect of ss. 311 and 244 of the Code, setting aside the second sale. The purchaser under that sale appealed to the Additional District Judge, who, without going into the merits, reversed the order of the Munsiff. The petitioner, thereupon, moved the High Court on the ground that no appeal lay to the Additional District Judge and that the Judge was wrong in stating that the petitioner had no locus standi. Held, the effect of the order of the Munsiff was practically to hold that the second purchaser had no title to the land, and the order certainly decided a question relating to title to the land or to some interest in the land as between parties having conflicting claims thereto. Here the parties had conflicting claims thereto. An appeal, therefore, did lie to the Additional District Judge, under s. 153 of the Tenancy Act, and, consequently, he was not acting without jurisdiction, when he made his order. (28 C. 116, D.) As to the second point:—What the Additional District Judge meant by stating that the petitioner had no locus standi was that the petitioner was not a representative of any of the parties within the meaning of s. 244. If the Judge was wrong on that point, he was wrong upon a question of law, and not of jurisdiction, and the case, in consequence, did not fall within s. 622. In the absence of fraud or misrepresentation, an execution—sale cannot be set aside under s. 244 merely on the ground that the auction-purchaser thought that A and B were the judgment-debtors and he purchased the interest of both, whereas in fact A was the judgment-debtor and his interest alone passed at the sale. took possession of the property purchased through Court. On appeal to the Judicial Commissioner's Court, the sale was set aside. The appellants then paid the decretal amount and applied to the Court to get back possession of the property. After having got back possession, they applied to the same Court, under s. 583, for a determination of the mesne profits and for the award of such amount as may be found due. The first Court dismissed the application, holding that the order setting aside the sale was not a decree and therefore no restitution could be claimed. Held, that the question whether the sale was a valid one or otherwise was a question between the parties to the suit in which the decreee was passed relating to the execution of the decree and as such was covered by s. 244 (c): Held, further, that the order setting aside the sale passed by the Judicial Commissioner's Court was an order under s. 244 and consequently could be treated as a decree and the application under s. 583 of the Code was maintainable. S. 244 (c) does not apply to such a case. (3 AL J. 234. 1906 A W.N. 87, Overruled.) Per Stanley, C.J., dissentiente (Knox, J., concurring with him) : The rule, which forbids a mortgagee-decree-holder to purchase, has no force if permission to bid be given to him by the Court and when the grant of permission to bid has been given, such mortgagee is no longer under disability to purchase, but qua the right to purchase, is on the same footing as strangers to the suit who may be bidders at the sale. The recognition of a dual personality in a decree-holder-purchaser would be to introduce a strange and novel legal fiction. An executor who is sued as such only cannot in his personal capacity be prejudiced by any decree which may be passed in the suit. In order that he may be personally bound, he must be sued in his personal as well as in his representative capacity. An executor not merely claims title from a deceased person but he represents the deceased person. If he institutes a suit in respect of the estate of the deceased, he does so not presumably for his own benefit, but for the benefit of the estate of the deceased. If he be sued as an executor only, he is sued as representing the deceased. On the contrary in the case of a decree-holder, he sues on his own behalf and for his own benefit. If he gets leave to bid and buys the mortgaged property, he does so on his own account and in his own interest alone. By becoming a purchaser he does not cease to be a party to the suit and as such be bound by any order which may be passed therein. The intention of the Legislature in passing the enactment in question was to prevent any question which could be disposed of in execution becoming the cause of fresh litigation. (5 M. 217, 13 M. 504, R.) The word "representative" in s. 244 of the Code includes a party who by assignment or gift succeeds to the rights of the decree-holder after decree. Art. 138, Limitation Act, 1877, might be applicable to the case of a purchaser who was a stranger to the suit in which a decree for sale was passed and, not being a party to the suit, was not entitled to take proceedings under s. 244. When a Court has passed a decree for sale in a mortgage-suit, the proceedings are not at an end when the sale to the decree-holder who has obtained leave to bid has been confirmed and a certificate of sale granted. Delivery of possession is necessary and until such possession is given, the decree cannot be said to have been executed or satisfied Per Banerji, J. (Aikman and Griffin, JJ., concurring). In order that cl. (c) of s. 244 may apply, two conditions are essential ; first, that the question arises between the parties to the suit, in which the decree was passed or their representatives, and second, that it is a question relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree. As regards the first condition it is manifest that the party must be arrayed as decree-holder or his representative on the one side and judgment-debtor or his rspresentative on the other. Any question arising between the decree-holder and his representative or between the judgment-debtor and his representative is clearly not a question within the purview of s. 244. (7 A. 681, 25 B. 631, F.) The decree-holder as such is not entitled to possession as the decree does not award possession. It is only in his capacity as auction-purchaser that he can apply for and obtain possession. In this respect his position is no better and should be no worse than that of any other purchaser. The fact that the decree-holder has purchased the property is a pure accident. Although the same person may be the decree-holder and the auction-purchaser, he fills two different capacities and it is in the latter capacity only that he can obtain possession. All auction-purchasers, whether they are decree-holders or not, and whether they purchased under a mortgage-decree or under a simple-money-decree, are in the same position as regards recovery of possession of the property purchased by them, and it is only in their capacity as auction-purchasers that they can obtain possession. The question therefore which arises under s. 318 or 319, Civ. Pro. Code, is not a question between the parties to the suit or their representative and cannot be determined under s. 244. (16 C. 682, P.C., R.) A question between the auction-purchaser or his representative and the judgment-debtor or his representative relating to the delivery of possession is not a question relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree. Under the meaning of s. 244, cl. (c), upon the judgment-debtor's property being sold and the amount due under the decree being realised, the decree is fully executed, discharged and satisfied, and no question relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree remains to be determined. Whether or not the auction-purchaser obtains possession of the property sold, is wholly immaterial for purposes of the decree and does not in anyway affect it. The validity of the sale or the completion of it does not depend on the decree-holder's obtaining possession. So far as the purchaser is concerned, he does not obtain possession by virtue of the decree, and the question of delivery of possession to him is not one relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree. That the Legislature intended that a purchaser at an auction-sale may obtain possession by means of suit is manifest from art. 138, Limitaiton Act. A decree-holder auction-purchaser, like any other auction-purchaser, is entitled to claim possession, not only by an application under s. 318 or s. 319, but also by suit; he has alternative remedies, one of the remedies being a summary application for possession, and s. 244 is not a bar to such a suit and does not apply to such an application. No appeal lies from an order under s. 318, Civ. Pro. Code (A.W.N. 1886) 45 13 A.W.N. 122, 1 Agra 5 Mis. App. 1 C.W.N. 658, 6 C.L.J. 746, F.) An application under s. 318 is not an application for execution, and so also an application for delivery of possession is not an application to take a step-in-aid of execution. (1092)—S. 48—Decree for sale upon mortgage passed before 1908—No curtailment of right to execute—Application of section—Retrospective effect—Statutes.—The right to enforce the execution of a decree is a substantive right. That right cannot be lost without an express provision of law to that effect. A decree for sale of mortgaged property was passed while Act XIV of 1882 was in force. Twelve years expired, but the decree was not satisfied. In the meantime, Act V of 1908 was passed, s. 48 of which was made applicable to all decrees. Held that the decree passed before the passing of that Act could be executed more than twelve years after the date it was passed. No statute shall be so construed as to have a retrospective operation, unless such a construction appears very clearly in the terms of the Act, or arises by necessary and distinct implication. Statutes are to be construed as operating only on cases or facts which come into existence after they are passed. KOUNSILLA v. ISHRI SINGH, 7 A.L.J. 420 = 6 Ind. the defendants that might be found at whatever place within the jurisdiction of the Amerli Court. The Court made the order of attachment. Subsequently, on the plaintiff's application, the decree was transmitted for execution to the High Court of Bombay on the 25th July, 1909. The plaintiff applied to the High Court, on the 15th October, 1909, to execute the decree by attaching the moveable property of defendant No. 2 in Bombay. The defendant No. 2 objected that the application was barred by the provisions of s. 48 of the Civ. Pro. If the Judgment-debtor, by fraud or force, at sometime prevented the execution, it is not necessary for the decree-holder to show that the judgment-debtor, guilty of fraud, had means to pay the decree amount or that the decree-holder exercised continuous diligence and would have realised the fruits of his decree but for such fraud or force. It is sufficient to show that the judgment-debtor, on various occasions within the aforesaid period, dishonestly prevented the execution of the decree against him by frivolous devices. On 17th September, 1883, another application was put in by the decree-holder wherein time was granted by the Court to the judgment-debtor for payment. Upon his failure, the Court ordered attachment. The judgment-debtor appealed on the ground that the application of September 1883 was beyond the period of 12 years and hence barred: Held, that the application of May 1883 not having received any judicial treatment was revived by the application of September 1883 which, owing to time being granted to the judgment-debtor for payment, remained still pending in January 1885 when attachment was ordered, and that therefore execution was not barred. Consequently, where, by many devices for keeping out of the way when warrants were issued or for preventing the execution of processes of attachment, the judgment-debtor has dishonestly evaded payment, for more than twelve years, of the money due under the decree, such conduct on the part of the judgment-debtor eluding the creditor until the expiry of the 12 years' period, should be held to be "fraud" within the meaning of s. 230. be strictly observed.—An order directing an application for execution to be struck off the file does not in itself necessarily involve the removal of the subsisting attachment, but the passing of such orders as have the effect of striking off the application for execution, and at the same time, allowing the attachment to remain in force, ought to be discouraged. The question whether an application for execution is only ancillary to the previous application or is a fresh application is to be decided according to the circumstances of every case. The twelve years' rule laid down in s. 48, Civ. Pro. Code, is a salutary one and its evasion should not be permitted. Execution proceedings should not be allowed to be dragged on beyond twelve years merely because it suits the convenience of the decree holders. If a decree-holder desires to come to terms with his judgment-debtor in such a manner as to allow a longer period than twelve years for the satisfaction of the decree, he may enter into a fresh contract. A few days prior to the passing of the decrees, the decree-holder for the smaller amount assigned his decreee to another. Notice of the transfer was not given to the cross-decree-holder till long after the date or the decrees. The transferee then applied for recognition of the transfer and execution of the decree transferred to him. Held that the transfer operated against the cross-decree-holder only subsequent to the date of notice to him. That being so, on the date of the cross-decrees, the decree for smaller amount became incapable of execution under the equitable principle enunciated in s. 246 of the Code. At the date of the completion of the transfer by notice as against the cross-decree-holder, the decree transferred was subject to such equity, and therefore under s. 233, the right of the petitioner, as assignee of the decree brought to be executed, was subject to such equity. S. 246 is not inapplicable to a case where the cross-decrees are passed by the very Court whose duty it is to execute them and neither has been transferred for execution to another Court. Subsequent to the assignment, an appeal was preferred against the decree. The appellant, however, suffered the original decree-holder's name to remain on the record and proceedings to be taken accordingly. In the appeal the decree of the first Court was confirmed. Before the assignee was brought on record, the respondent who held a decree for a much larger sum against the original decree-holder, applied that the amount due to him under his decree might be set off against the amount due by him under the other decree. An order was made to that effect. On the disposal of the appeal, the appellant applied for execution of his decree. It was contended on his behalf that he was not an assignee of the decree within the meaning of ss. 233 and 246 of the Code, inasmuch as the assignment took place before the appeal was instituted and the sections applied only to the case of an assignment of an existing decree. It was said that the appeal decree, which was sought to be executed, did not exist on the date of the assignment. Held that, as the appellant was clearly a transferee of the decree in existence when the transfer took place, he did not cease to be transferee by reason of the fact that an appeal was presented. Code, 1882)—Death of judgment-debtor after transfer of decree to another Court for execution—Application for execution against representative, to which Court to be made.*—The point referred to the Full Bench for decision, in this case, was, whether, when, after the transfer of a decree to another Court for execution, the judgment-debtor dies, the application for execution, under s. 234 of the Code, against the legal representative of the deceased judgment-debtor, ought to be made to the Court to which the decree has been transferred or to the Court which passed the decree. Held (by the Full Bench), that the application ought to be made to the Court which passed the decree. Per Arnold White, C. J.—'An order under s. 234 is not made in the exercise of powers in executing a decree,' but as a preliminary step towards those powers being exercised by the Court to which the decree has been transferred. The first paragraph of s. 234 is neither useless nor superfluous. That section contemplates the making of an order in general terms—'let the decree be executed against A B, the personal representative of the deceased judgment-debtor.' The provisions of s. 234 can be given effect to without doing violence to the language of the other sections in the Chapter relating to execution. The canon of construction is that statute ought to be so construed that, if it can be prevented, no clause, section, or word, shall be 'superfluous, void or insignificant.' The reason for the application under s. 234 of the Code to be made to the Court that passed the decree, is the same as that for an application being made to that Court under s. 232 of the Code, when the decree is assigned, after transfer thereof, to a different Court for execution. (5 B.L.R. 497, 18 B. 224, 17 A. 431, 22 C. 558, 27 C. 489, R.) The last para. of s. 244 only applies where a question arises as to who is a reprsentative of a party for the purposes of that section. It ought not to be construed as cutting down the powers given to the Court which passes a decree by the express words of s. 234. Per Davies, J.—There is a direct conflict between the provision in the first paragraph of s. 234 and that in cl. (c) of s. 244, read with the last paragraph in the same section which was enacted later. SWAMINATHA AIYAR v. VAITHIANATHA SASTRIAL, 15 M.L.J 116, F.B.=28 M. 466. [R., 17 M.L.J. 300.]

Code, 1882, ss. 234, 244)* — "Representative" — "Legal representative"—Decree—Appeal.—A certain judgment-debtor having died, application was made by the decree-holders to execute the decree against his widow, not as his "legal representative" but as his "wife and heir." Notice was issued on this application to the widow to show cause why execution should not be had against her, but nothing further appears to have been done at that time to bring the widow on to the record as legal representative of the deceased judgment-debtor. Subsequently, another application was made by the decree-holders alleging that the widow had misappropriated certain moveable property of the deceased judgment-debtor, and notice having been served on her, she appeared and inter alia, disputed the Court's jurisdiction over her under s. 244 of the Civ. Pro. Code. Orders were passed on this last mentioned application, but it does not appear that any issue was then raised as to the widow being either the legal representative of her deceased husband in the sense of s. 234 of the Civ. Pro. Code, or his representative in the sense of s. 244. Held in appeal from the order of the Court on the widow's objection to the second of the above-mentioned applications, that, on the facts as stated above, the widow had never been brought on the record as the representative of the deceased judgment-debtor and, therefore, no appeal could lie from that order by virtue of s. 244 of the Civ. Code, 1871, ss. 234, 248, 711) -- Legal representatives of deceased judgment-debtor—Title of purchaser at sale in execution without notice to representative—Right of redemption of mortgagor's representatives—Limitation.*—This was a suit by the heirs and representatives of the original mortgagor; deceased, to redeem the mortgage from the defendant and the son of the original mortgagee. The questions that had to be decided in second appeal were (1) whether the sale certificate of the equity of redemption granted by the Court to defendant's father legally, conveyed the equity of redemption in the mortgaged premises to him so as to extinguish it, and (2) whether assuming that not to be the case, defendant's father acquired a title by estoppel or acquiescence on the part of the plaintiffs, representatives of the original mortgagor, or by limitation, to the equity of redemption, so as to prevent them now from redeeming. Held, that the only mode in which a holder of a decree for money can execute his decree after the death of the judgment-debtor is by application to execute it against the legal representative of the deceased as provided in s. 234 of the Civ. Pro. Code. Not only must there be such an application against the legal representative, but there must be also a notice issued to him. In the absence of such a notice, whether, under the circumstances, the sale in execution was only irregular, or was a absoltely null as regards the legal representatives who were no parties to the execution proceedings, such representatives can sue to recover the property sold so long as their right to do so has not become barred by the law of limitation, i.e., by twelve years' adverse possession on the part of the purchaser. Taking it that notice under s. 248 to the legal representatives was absolutely necessary, but that the proceedings and sale, if not challenged according to law, conveyed title to the purchaser, and also that the legal representatives had the right to object, by regular suit, the present suit to redeem, brought within twelve years of the Court-sale, did in effect challenge the sale, and therefore the plaintiffs were entitled to redeem (Per Candy and Jardine, JJ.) Per Ranade, J.—In respect of the plaintiffs, in this case, the true legal representatives of the deceased judgment-debtor, the sale proceedings were invalid and null and void, and the auction-purchaser acquired no rights, as against them under his certificate of sale. Defendant No. 1 stood surety for him by executing the bond in suit, by which he covenanted that, if defendant No. 2 did not apply to be declared an insolvent within one month or if the said application was rejected, he would produce defendant No. 2 when required by the Court, or pay Rs. 500. Defendant No. 2 applied for insolvency within the time specified but his application was dismissed. The plaintiff made a fresh application for execution and the defendant No. 1 failed to produce defendant No. 2. Then the bond having been assigned to him, he sued to enforce the bond. Held, that the bond was not opposed to public policy or without consideration, and was enforceable. (16 A. 37, 31 C. 242, 19 B. 694, 5 C. 437, Rel. on). The defendant No. 1 was directed to produce the defendant No. 2 on September 27th, 1904. The time was subsequently extended to September 30th, on which date he failed to produce the judgment-debtor, and became liable on the bond: held, that, as the suit was brought within three years from that date, it was not barred by limitation. On the dismissal for default of such petition filed by the judgment-debtor, the creditor applied for execution by arrest of the surety. Held that the insolvency petition was filed in due time and that it was on a subsequent occasion that the judgment-debtor failed to appear when called upon. Thereupon the respondents who were not parties to the proceeding put in a surety bond covenanting to pay the decretal amount in the event of the judgment-debtor not paying it within a month, and stipulating that, if they failed to pay "the decree-holder would be at liberty to realise the amount by auction-sale of their moveable and immeveable properties and by arresting them." The judgment-debtor not having paid the money within a month as stipulated, the decree-holder sought to execute the decree against the sureties, who came in and applied for two months' time to pay in the decretal amount and time was allowed. No payment was, however, made and the decree-holder applied for execution and had one of the sureties' property sold. The sale was subsequently set aside. On a fresh application for execution against the sureties, they objected that no execution could be levied against them and the decree-holder ought to institute a separate suit. Held—That although the proper course for the decree-holder in such a case would be to institute a separate suit against the sureties, still, having regard to the agreement that was come to and the conduct of the parties in the previous proceedings it ought to be taken that the sureties had waived their right to insist upon a separate suit being brought against them. The judgment-debtor filed an insolvency petition within the time fixed, but subsequently withdrew from it. The decree-holder applied for the issue of a warrant of arrest against the surety and the Court ordered accordingly. Held, that the decree could not be executed against the surety inasmuch as the judgment-debtor had applied within the time fixed to be declared an insolvent. The fact that he subsequently withdrew his application did not affect the question. Further, the surety's bond provided that the surety was to produce the debtor when ordered to do so within one month. (1208)—Ss. 55, 145 (=ss. 336, 258, Civ. Pro. Code, 1882)—Summary enforcement of security bond.—It would appear that a security bond, under s. 349, Civ. Pro. Code, cannot be enforced summarily. However that may be, there is certainly no provision in the section for enforcing it under s. 253, and the security given under s. 336 is practically on the same footing as security under s. 349, once the judgment-debtor has filed his insolvency application. S. 336 does not say that s. 253 applies where there has been failure to appear. It says "But if he (i.e., the judgment-debtor) fails so to apply, the Court may either direct the security to be realised or commit him to jail in execution of the decree. In the case of a surety, such security may be realised in manner provided by s. 253." Now, this can only mean that, if a judgment-debtor fails to apply to be made an insolvent in fulfilment of his undertaking there are two alternative penalties that may be inflicted upon him—he may either be sent to jail or the security he has given may be realized. Such security might be money or other valuable thing placed in deposit by the judgment-debtor himself. But, if the security is personal security given by a surety, it may be realised as laid down in s. 253. That is the penalty for not making the required application may be realised in that way. There is no mention of any penalty for mere fuilure to appear when called upon. For a breach of the conditions of the bond in that respect there would be the usual remedy for breach of a security bond under the Code, whatever that may be. The provision at the end of the section concerning s. 253 does not apply to the realization of the security on failure to comply with the first condition, but only on breach of the second condition. The surety agreed that if, the judgment-debtor, did not either apply within one month to be declared an insolvent or appear in Court on the due date, he would be liable to the decree-holder. Before the due date fixed for judgment-debtor's appearance in Court, he applied under s. 337-A, instead of applying for insolvency. The Court heard the application when the judgment-debtor was present in Court, and postponed its further consideration to a date subsequent to the date originally fixed for the judgment-debtor's appearance; but on this date the judgment-debtor remained absent. The executing Court at first discharged the surety, but on review it made him liable. Held, that the surety was absolved from his liability, as from the proceedings of the Court, it appeared that the original date fixed for the judgment-debtor's appearance was no longer to be regarded as the date fixed for his appearance, and no proceedings took place on that date, and consequently, the executing Court had no power to review its order releasing the surety from the obligation undertaken by him. But the attachment was refused by the Court on the objection of a reversioner. Then, the decree-holder applied for execution of his decree by sale of the widow's right to receive the rents and profits of the village. The widow contended that the right was not saleable and that the application was barred by res judicata. Held that the order made between the reversioner on the one side and the judgment-debtor and the decree-holder on the other, was no bar to the present application, that the right to receive the rents and profits of the village was attachable and saleable. Such right is not a right of future maintenance within the meaning of s. 266, Civ. Pro. Code, for, though one of the objects of the transfer of the estate was to afford maintenance to the judgment-debtor, the rents were not specifically assigned as maintenance. Nor, was this an attachment of any contingent or possible right or interest within the meaning of the section. JAIRAJ KUARI v. DEBI, A.W.N. 1883, 9. [R., 12 C.L.J. 146.]

(1249)—S. 60 (=s. 266, cl. (b), Civ. Pro. Code, 1882)—Land granted for maintenance without any right of alienation—Maintenance right not liable to be sold in execution of decree—Estoppel by judgment.—The respondent, as guardian of her minor grandsons, borrowed money from the appellant, who brought a suit impleading her in it and got a personal decree against her. In execution of the decree, her maintenance right in certain immoveable property, notwithstanding her objections, was attached and put up for sale. But when, however, the question of confirmation of the sale came up for decision, the then District Munsiff set aside the sale accepting the objections of the respondent, that her maintenance right was not such as could be sold. On appeal, it was contended, on behalf of the appellant, that the respondent's interest in the property was attachable and that she was estopped, by the order of the District Munsiff, from raising any question as to the saleability of her interest, since she did not appeal against the order. Held, the instrument, by which the maintenance of the respondent was provided for, allowed her the enjoyment of the income only of the lands, without the right to make any alienation by way of sale or otherwise. Accordingly, her interest in the land, thereby created was, with reference to s. 266, cl. (b), incapable of being sold in execution of the decree. (10 B. 344, F.) [R., 12 C.L.J. 146]. Held, also, that there is no estoppel in this case. No doubt, "estoppel is not confined to the judgment but extends to all facts involved in it as necessary steps or as the ground-work upon which it must have been based. It is allowable to reason back from a judgment to the basis on which it stands, upon the obvious principle, that, where a conclusion is indisputable and could have been drawn from certain premises, the premises are equally indisputable with the conclusion. Such conclusion must be inevitable, or it cannot be drawn." What is relied on as an estoppel must be certain to every intent. Under the circumstances of the case, the word 'attach' used by the District Munsiff is ambiguous and not free from doubt, because there were two objects sought to be attached, viz., her right to maintenance and her right under certain instrument of lease. (1250)—S. 60 (=Civ. Pro. Code, 1882, s. 266) Execution of decree—Right of maintenance and residence—Saleable interest.—In execution of a decree for costs the plaintiff decree-holder sought attachment and sale of a house in which the defendant judgment-debtor resided. The judgment-debtor objected to the attachment on the ground that the house was wakf and he had no proprietary interest in it, but merely a right of maintenance and residence, which was exempted from attachment and sale under s. 266 (1), Civ. Pro. Code. As a matter of fact, it had been decided in the suit, to which the decree related, that the plaintiff was entitled, as Mahant, to the property claimed, which included the house in dispute, and the defendant was entitled as a dependant of the shrine, to which the property belonged, to a right of maintenance and residence only. The Divisional Judge disallowed the objection on the ground that the defendant-judgment-debtor was estopped from saying that the house could not be attached as it was wakf, that the plaintiff being Mahant and entitled to the reversion of the house could attach and sell it to recover the costs, and the sale would be for necessity. Held, that s. 266, Civ. Pro. Code, requires a preliminary condition to attachment that the property sought to be attached should be saleable, or that, over it or its profits the judgment-debtor should have a disposing power, which he may exercise for his own benefit; and that the defendant's interest in the house, which was merely a right of residence and maintenance, was not capable of attachment, as the defendant had no disposing power over it. Held, also, that the defendant had a sufficient interest in the institution to entitle him to object as against the Mahant, that the house as wakf property could not be sold, though the decree was against himself; and he was not estopped from raising the objection. Held, further, that since the defendant had no saleable interest in the house, the question of necessity did not arise. But in the case of private alienations, the prohibition is not of general application, such alienations to strangers only being generally discouraged. The defendant then contended that as he was an agriculturist and as the house was occupied by him, the materials of it could not be sold having regard to s. 266 (c) of the Civ. Pro. (1274)—S. 60 (1) (c)—Agriculturist's house—Sale, in execution of decree on mortgage, whether legal.—Held per Richards, C.J., and Tudball, J. (Banerji, J., contra), that the house of an agriculturist (which is not an appurtenance of his holding which he is forbidden by law to transfer,) is liable to sale in execution of a decree obtained on foot of a mortgage made by him, there being nothing in s. 60, cl. 1 (c) of the Code of Civil Procedure to render such sale illegal. Per Richards, C.J.—The Code of Civil Procedure is an Act which deals entirely with matters of procedure; and prima facie it is very improbable that the legislature intended to deal with matters of substantive law. Where it was considered necessary for the protection of certain classes of tenants that their powers of transfer should restricted, the legislature, by express provisions in the Tenancy Act, has so enacted. S. 60 and the proviso to it deal with simple money decrees and not with mortgage decrees. Per Banerji, J.—The legislature clearly intended that no Court should sell a house belonging to and occupied by an agriculturist, provided that the house is of the description mentioned in cl.(c) of the proviso to s. 60, Code of Civil Procedure, and it makes no difference in the powers of the Court, whether that house was mortgaged by the agriculturist for his debt or was not so mortgaged. The proviso forbids both attachment and sale, that is, where an attachment must precede a sale, it forbids attachment, as well as sale, and where attachment is not a preliminary step, it forbids sale. (1274-a)—S. 60, cl. (n) — Attachment in execution of a decree—Crops standing on land given for maintenance—Such crops, whether liable to attachment—Distinction between them and a right to future maintenance, pointed out.—Where a certain land is given to a Hindu widow by the will of her deceased husband, to be enjoyed by her during life in lieu of maintenance, what she acquires under the grant is not a right to maintenance but to the usufruct of the property; so that the produce of the land, as it accrued, becomes at once her property. Therefore the crop growing on the land, being her property, must be available to answer her debt and is liable to attachment in execution of a decree obtained against her. (15 M.L.J. 7, 10 B. 342, D.) What is interdicted by the legislature in cl. (n) of s. 60 of the Civ. Pro. Code, is attachment of a mere right to a future maintenance, and not of a debtor's property or any interest in property, though such property or interest in property, might have been granted to him or her for maintenance. Quære:—Whether cl. 'Debt.'—A decree-holder applied for attachment of the allowance due to the judgment-debtor for the half of a month. An order, purporting to be made under s. 268 of the Code, was accordingly issued by the Court. The judgment-debtor, thereupon, objected, inter alia, on the ground that the attachment was premature inasmuch as the allowance for the month did not fall due till the 1st of the next month. It was also objected that the allowance was not an attachable 'debt,' within the meaning of s. 266 of the Code. Held, that, under the circumstances of the case, the allowance was, in no sense, a compassionate one, but was an acknowledged debt, accruing due and actually existing, with a right to payment on and after the first of the following month. The allowance was in consequence attachable; and the prohibitory order, which was only for the attachment of half the judgment-debtor's allowance for a month, was against an existing debt, which had then accrued due, though payable on the first of the following month. The attachment was, therefore, validly made. MAHARANI DAMBAR KOERI v. RAI SHAM KISSEN DAS, 9 C.W.N. 703. (27 C. 38, 14 M. I.A. 40, R.) [R., 7 C.L.J. 658=12 C.W.N. 145.]

Pro. Code, cl. (1), not liable to attachment or sale in execution of the decree against her. The High Court, on appeal, reversed the order of the first Court and allowed her objections, on the ground that the rights and interests which have been made over to a Hindu widow, by the family to which she belonged, in lieu of maintenance, cannot be attached and sold by auction in satisfaction of a decree against her, by reason of the proviso, cl. (1) to s. 266 of the Code. On an appeal under the Letters Patent, s. 10, it was held that the application by the widow to the first Court was to be treated as one made under s. 311 of the Code, and that Court's order was therefore an order passed under s. 312, and consequently that, by reason of the prohibition contained in s. 588, no appeal lay from the order of the single Judge of the High Court on appeal to him from the first Court's order. The term "grade" in s. 285, Civ. Pro. Its provisions are directory as to which of the Courts shall exercise what would otherwise be concurrent jurisdiction and do not in anyway annul the jurisdiction of the Court of lower grade when it comes into competition with the jurisdiction of a superior Court. The sale by the Court of lower grade being in such a case merely irregular, the purchaser at the sale will take an indefeasible or defeasible title according as he knows or does not know of the irregularity. If he buys bona fide and without notice his title will be perfect and he will not be affected by the irregularity of the proceedings resulting in the sale. The defendant in this case did not set up the plea that he was a bona fide purchaser without notice. The Court which sold had full knowledge of the proceedings in the Subordinate Judge's Court and there was no reason to suppose that the defendant had not similar knowledge. The provisions of the Code and those of the Rent Act relating to execution of decrees are widely different. Although the provisions of s. 285, Civ. Pro. On 4th May, 1909, S applied to the Township Court for the sale of the said properties in pursuance of the attachment made at his instance by the Sub-Divisional Court and for leave to bid at such sale. The leave was granted. On 19th May, 1909, S again applied to the Sub-Divisional Court, stating that the property had been already sold by the Township Court in execution of A's decree, and praying for rateable distribution. The application was forwarded to the Township Court on 12th June, 1909, which Court refused to give rateable distribution on the ground that it was too late under s. 73 (2), Civ. Pro. Code, 1908. Held, that S was entitled to get a refund of the share of the sale-proceeds, which he would have received on a proper rateable distribution, from the person to whom it was wrongfully paid. (23 A. 106, 29 C. 773, 12 C. 333, 2 C.W.N. 126, 1 L.B.R 121, R.) Under s. 63, Civ. Pro. Pro. Code.* 1882.—R got a decree for money against I in Sub-Judge's Court at Faridpur, and, on the 21st November, 1908, purchased the attached property of the judgment-debtor, and the amount realized by the sale was set off against the decree. In the meanwhile, G had got a decree for money against I in the Munsiff's Court at Goalundo, and applied for execution against the same property. On the 19th September, 1908, he applied to the Sub-Judge at Faridpur for an order on the Munsiff at Goalundo not to sell the property, and also for rateable distribution of the assets which might be realized by sale in the Faridpur Court. The first prayer was rejected, and it was ordered that the second prayer might be considered when assets were realized. G then applied to the Goalundo Court for transmission of his execution case to the Faridpur Court, which application was refused. He then applied to the Faridpur Court for rateable distribution. That application was granted, and R was directed to refund the sum which was set off against his decree. Held, that, as G had made no application, prior to the realization of the assets, for execution of his decree, to the Faridpur Court, he was not entitled to a rateable distribution under s. 295, Civ. Pro. Code, 1882, and that his application to the Faridpur Court for an order on the Goalundo Court not to sell the properties cannot be deemed to be an application for execution of his decree. (21 C. 200, 2 C.W.N. 126, R.) A decree cannot be executed simultaneously against the same property in more than one Court. S. 285, Civ. Pro. Code, 1882, is governed by the immediately preceding sections with which it must be read, and the words "shall determine any claim thereto and any objection to the attachment thereof" mean any claim or objection of the sort, which can be summarily enquired into and decided in execution-proceedings. Therefore, an application for rateable distribution cannot be deemed to be an application for determination of any claim, to attached property, or of any objection to the attachment thereof, within the meaning of s. 285. But, before the sale, another oreditor, who had the same property attached before judgment, obtained a decree in the Court of a Subordinate Judge and applied to the Subordinate Judge for execution of the same, a few days after the sale above referred to. The Subordinate Judge sent down an order to the Munsiff, calling for the record of the execution-case, pending before him, for the purpose of rateable distribution of the proceeds of the sale, between the decree-holder in his Court and the other decree-holders in the Munsiff's Court. The Munsiff, instead of complying with the order of the Subordinate Judge, made a rateable distribution of the sale-proceeds among the decree-holders in the Court and afterwards sent the records to the Subordinate Judge. The latter Officer determined the matter of distribution of sale-proceeds between the decree-holders in both the Courts, and ordered that the decree-holders in the Munsiff's Court, who had obtained more money than they were entitled to get, should refund the amounts obtained by them in excess of their legitimate dues. One of the decree-holders in the Munsiff's Court moved the High Court for setting aside the orders of the Subordinate Judge above referred to. Held, though the sale took place before the decree in the Subordinate Judge's Court, still the amount was realized only after the application was made by the decree-holder in the Subordinate Judge's Courts for execution of his decree. Hence the decree-holder in the Subordinate Judg's Court is one of the persons referred to in s. 295. Although the attachment took place before judgment, still a decree having been subsequently obtained, the attachment that had already been put upon the property, became operative, and the decree-holder in the Subordinate Judge's Court stood in the same position in respect to the property attached as the decree-holder in the Munsiff's Court. That being so, in view of the provisions of s. 285, the Subordinate Judge's Court was the only Court, which could determine any claim to the assets realised by the sale in the Munsiff's Court. (4 A. 359, R.) Consequently, after the Subordinate Judge had called for the record of the execution-case from the file of the Munsiff, for the purpose of distribution of sale-proceeds, the Munsiff had no power to distribute the money among the decree-holders in his own Court. He ought to have at once sent up the record to the Court of the Subordinate Judge, for the purpose of distribution being made by that officer in accordance with s. 225 Quere :—Whether the Subordinate Judge had the authority to make the order that some of the decree-holders in the Munsiff's Court should refund the sums drawn by them in excess of what was legitimately due to them? Pending this attachment the judgment-debtor sold one portion to the appellant and another portion to the respondent in 1867. Subsequently, the application for execution was struck off. In 1878, the decree-holder again filed a fresh application and again attached the property sold to the appellant. The property so attached was put up for auction-sale and was purchased by the respondent. Now the respondent sought to set aside the sale-deed of 1867 and recover possession from the appellant. Held that the purchase made by the appellants could not be assailed as invalid or "void" on the strength of the rule of s. 276 of the Code. The alienation impugned in this suit was made under the old and long extinct attachment of 1867 and under that attachment no claim was enforced. GOBIND SINGH v. Where a mortgagor, for paying off a previous mortgage-decree, executes a mortgage free from incumbrances, in favor of a third party and if, after paying off the mortgage-decree with the fresh loan, he makes over the old mortgage-deed to the new mortgagee, the old mortgage is kept alive for the benefit of the new mortgagee. An attachment of the property compromised under the mortgage though prior to the fresh mortgage, does not affect the interest of the new mortgagee. An attachment of property over which there is a mortgage subsisting affects only the equity of redemption. S. 276 of the Code does not make the new mortgage void as against the attaching creditor. In pursuance of the terms of the sale to him, the present plaintiff paid the amount due to the decree-holder, who attached the property, into Court, and satisfaction of the decree was entered up but without prejudice to the rights of the other creditors to question the sale to the plaintiff. Subsequent to the payment of the money into Court, the other creditors, above-said also obtained orders for attachment of the same property. The present plaintiff preferred a claim, and, on its being rejected, brought the present suit to establish his right by purchase to the property. The question for determination was, whether the sale to the plaintiff was void as against the defendant under s. 276 of the Code. Held, there was good consideration for the sale and the transaction was bona fide. The rights of the defendant-decree-holders depended upon s. 295 of the Code, and, if they had no rights under that section, they could have no "claims enforceable under the attachment" within the meaning of s. 276. In the circumstances of the case, there was no realization of assets by 'sale or otherwise in execution of a decree.' The sale to the plaintiff was not made under any process of Court. It was made under a private arrangement betwen the judgment-debtor and the plaintiff. The realization of assets in this instance was not a realization in execution. The words "wherever assets are realized by sale or otherwise in execution of a decree" do not mean "where assets are realized for the purposes of satisfying a decree." The payment of the judgment-debt into Court could not make the money so paid "assets realized in execution." The words "in execution" mean by execution, i.e., by some process of Court. S. 295 shold be construed strictly as against judgment-creditor, who claim reteable distribution. The effect of such a claim, if allowed, necessarily diminishes pro tanto the amount available for the judgment-creditors, through whose diligence the assets have been realized. The fact that the satisfaction, entered up, was without prejudice to the rights of the defendants did not affect the legal rights of the parties. The test to apply in these cases is whether the assets were realized by sale or otherwise by a process in execution provided for by the Code. In the present case, the realization of the assets resulted not from the attachment of the property but from the sale of the property by the judgment-debtor to the plaintiff. Consequently there was no realization of assets in execution within the meaning of s. 295. Hence the plaintiff was entitled to a decree. VIBHUDA PRIYA THIRTHA SWAMI v. On the 30th July the parties entered into a private compromise with the result that B sold the property to M and paid off D. This private satisfaction of the decree was certified to the Court and D's darkhast was disposed of by the Court on the 1st December, 1902. In the meanwhile, on the 11th August, 1900, H, another decree-holder against B, presented an application to execute his decree, praying that either he should be held entitled to rateable distribution under s. 295 of the Code of 1882, or that the property already attached in execution of D's decree ought to be attached in execution of his own. The Court granted the prayers. The property was sold at a Court-sale and purchased by the defendant on the 17th February, 1905. M's representative (the plaintiff) sued to recover the possession of the property relying on the sale-deed to M: Held, (1) that, when D's attachment proved abortive by the compromise for the purposes of H's decree, it survived for the purposes of H's decree by force of his application for either rateable distribution or a second attachment. The execution was thereafter transferred to the Collector under s. 320 of the Civ. Pro. Code of 1882. While the execution-proceedings were pending before the Collector, the plaintiff obtained another money-decree in another suit against B and in execution of it the same property was again attached. The proceedings under the latter decree were also transferred by the Civil Court to the Collector, as the latter was seized of the property of B in execution of the first decree. While the Collector was in management of B's property and taking steps for the execution of the first decree, the plaintiff informed the Mamlatdar who was carrying on the execution work on behalf of the Collector, that, as B had satisfied the decree, the necessity for sale had disappeared and that the darkhast could be disposed of. This was done on the 21st May, 1904, when the Mamlatdar made the following endorsement on the plaintiff's application; "as the darkhast has been disposed of, the papers are sent that they may go to the Court." On the 8th June, the Collector formally forwarded the papers to the Court, where they were received on the 16th June, 1904. In the meantime, that is, on the 31st May, 1904, B executed a deed of sale of the property to the defendant in consideration of the latter's satisfying the plaintiff's first decree and other debts of B. The plaintiff obtained a third decree against B in execution of which the property was sold through the Civil Court in March 1905 and was purchased by the plaintiff himself at the Court-sale. He then sued for a declaration that the property in the hands of the defendant was liable to be attached and sold in execution of his second degree which remained unsatisfied. It was contended (1) that the deed relied on by the defendant was invalid having regard to the provisions of s. 325-A of the Code, the sale having been made before the 16th of June, 1904, until which date the Collector was, in the eye of law, capable of exercising any of the powers conferred on him by the Court; (2) that the Collector was not warranted in acting upon the plaintiff's admission that the decree had been satisfied, because the satisfaction was one made out of Court and, not having been certified to the Court, it could not be recognised as the payment of the decree under s. 258; (3) that the sale in question was illegal and void under s. 276 by reason of the circumstance that the Civil Court had not received papers from the Collector until the 16th of June, 1904 and that the property had been attached by the Civil Court in execution of the second decree and the execution under that decree transferred to the Collector. Held, (1) that the sale in question was not void under s. 325-A, for ss. 322 to 325 presupposed a decree which had to be satisfied and which was, therefore, capable of execution. That could not be said of a decree, which its holder, by his declaration to the Collector or his agent the Mamlatdar, acknowledged to have been satisfied. (2) That the action of the Collector on the 8th June, 1904, in forwarding the papers to the Civil Court related back to the date on which the Mamlatdar, as the Collector's agent, had, on the plaintiff's application, passed his order disposing of the darkhast i e., 21st May, 1904. (3) That the intimation to the Collector, who was in charge of the execution, amounted to a due certifying of the adjustment of the decree which satisfied the conditions of s. 258. (16 A. 228, F.) (4) That s. 276 did not apply, since, though the attachment had existed at the date of the sale and was never formally raised, the darkhast claim having been satisfied was no longer enforceable under it. Held, further, that the second attachment itself was illegal under the provisions of the last portion of the first paragraph of s. 325-A, and it could not affect the private sale to the defendant by B; and that the sale was not illegal and void under s. 276, there being no claim enforceable under such an attachment. Held, also that the sale could not be invalidated, even under the combined effect of ss. 276 and 295 read together. The moment the attachment of the plaintiff came to an end by reason of the satisfaction, of his first decree sent to the Collector for execution, all claims enforceable under attachment ceased to be enforceable under it. A claim under another decree cognizable only under s. 295 ceased to be operative for the purposes of ss. 276 and 295, the same being dependant upon the continuance of the said attachment. (16 B. 91, D.; 8 C. 279, 6 A. 33, 23 M. 478, R.) When a decree-holder intimates to the Collector that his decree has been satisfied and that the necessity for its execution, by the Collector has ceased to exist, the Collector's powers under ss. 322 to 325 of the Civ. Pro. Code of 1882 also cease, because the very foundation of them, consisting in the fact of a decree which is alive and capable of execution, has disappeared. The provisions of s. 276 of the Code make the private alienation void, not absolutely but only "as against all claims enforceable under the attachment," referred to in it. Where the execution-proceedings, in the course and for the purpose of which the attachment was made, have come to an end on account of satisfaction of the decree by the judgment-debtor, and in consequence the decree is no longer alive, the attachment also ceases, and there is no longer any claim "enforceable" under the attachment to make the private alienation effected by the judgment-debtor during the attachment, void. The person for whose protection s. 276 was primarily intended had had his claim in that event satisfied otherwise than by attachment. As to any claim under another decree cognizable under s. 295, that would be dependent on the continuation of the said attachment. Where that attachment itself was swept away, (as by the disposal of the darkhast by the Collector) all other claims cognizable under it ceased to be operative for the purposes of ss. 276 and 295. The only bar in the way of the private alienation was removed as if it never existed in law; and the question as to private alienation during attachment became reduced to one between the judgment-debtor and his alienee. The mortgagor sued the mortgagee and the sub-mortgagee for possession, and in that suit the sub-mortgagee contended that the mortgage-amount had not been paid. Held that, if the order in the execution-proceedings allowing the plaintiff's objection had been made after due investigation, in the sense of ss. 278, 279, 280, the fact that the sub-mortgagee had not contested that order in a civil suit would preclude him from raising the defence in the present suit. (1341)—S. 64, O. 21, r. 55 (=Civ. Pro. Code, 1859, ss. 240, 245)—"Private alienation," meaning of.—S. 240, Civ. Pro. Code, declares that any private alienation of the property attached, whether by sale, gift, or otherwise during the continuance of the attachment, shall be null and void. The words "any private alienation" in the section were not intended to apply to an alienation effected with the acceptance of the decree-holder to satisfy the decree and duly sanctioned by the approval of the Court which issued the process of attachment. This is clearly shown by s. 245 of the Code providing for the withdrawal of an attachment upon satisfaction of the decree otherwise than by payment of the amount decreed and all costs and charges into Court. Under this provision, an alienation of the property under attachment, accepted by the decree-holder in satisfaction of the decree, may, after execution, be sanctioned by the Court, and an order thereupon be made for the withdrawal of the attachment. An alienation so sanctioned cannot therefore be considered as one to which s. 240 was meant to be applicable. ANNAVUNDAVAN v. IYASAWMY PILLAI, 6 M.H.C. 65. [R., 7 C. 107, P.C.]

While the attachment was subsisting, the judgment-debtor sold a certain part of the property to the appellant. In a suit for partition of the property brought under the Land Revenue Act, the respondent, as a co-sharer, contended in vain that the judgment-debtor had no title to the property sold and that he had acquired title to it by adverse possession. Subsequently, the respondent, as a co-sharer, brought a suit which was dismissed in the Civil Court for a declaration of this title to that property. Consequently, he applied for sale of the property in execution of his decree, to which objection was raised by the appellant on the ground that, in consequence of the previous litigation, the matter had become res judicata. The appeal was preferred, the objection having been overruled. The respondent took preliminary objection to the effect that no appeal lay, the appellant not being judgment-debtor or his representative. Held, that the appellant, having purchased the property pending the attachment, was the representative of the judgment-debtor within the meaning of s. 244, Civ. Pro. Code, and that an appeal would lie, inasmuch as the order of the Court below amounted to a decree within the definition of the Code. (19 A. 332, R.) Held, also, that a sale of property under attachment was not void, but was only voidable under s. 276, against the attaching creditor, and that the sale could only be avoided by the attaching creditor if he wished to proceed against the property of his co-sharer. That, in the suit brought by the respondent, not as attaching creditor, but as co-sharer, he need not have raised the plea that the sale to the appellant was not a valid sale, because the property sold had been attached before the sale. If they do deal with it, they and those with whom they deal do so subject to the result of the suit as to the attachment being maintained. (1355)—*S. 65, O. 21, r. 94 (=s. 316, Civ. A Court, therefore, should hold its hand and refuse to grant a certificate, if, before it is issued, the decree is set aside. A person, whose property has been sold, is, in such case, entitled to his property, and not the purchase-money. RAM SUKH v. RAM SAHAI, 4 A.L.J. 486=A.W.N. 1907, 198=29 A. 591.

(1360)—S. 65, O. 21, r. 94 (=Civ. Pro. Code, 1882, s. 316)—Purchase at execution-sale—Right of purchaser before confirmation—Equitable interest.—On the 27th February, 1886, the property in dispute was sold at an execution-sale and knocked down to the plaintiff. On the 10th March, 1886, the property was sold again, also in execution of a decree, and knocked down to the defendant. The latter sale was confirmed on 3rd July, 1886, and the former; subsequently, on 21st July, 1886. Certificates of sale were issued both to the plaintiff and to the defendant on 22nd September, 1886, and on 14th February, 1887, the defendant was put in possession. Held that the plaintiff was entitled to recover. Per Telang, J.—The words of s. 316, Civ. Pro. Code, 1882, "the title to the property shall not vest before the certificate" are not necessarily inconsistent with the subsistence of an equitable interest short of the full perfected title in the purchaser even before the certificate issues. And the facts that the transaction which takes place at the time of the auction is called a sale, that a cancellation of it is called the setting aside of a sale, that a subsequent auction after the failure of the first is called a re-sale—all these things show that in the contemplation of the Legislature the transaction even before confirmation and issue of a certificate is a sale—though a sale liable to be set aside. It is something more, therefore, in its legal aspect, than a mere contract for sale. Per Jardine, J.—The reference to the parties and persons claiming under them in the addition made to s. 316 in Act XII of 1879, re-enacted in the Code of 1882, would be surplusage if the Legislature had intended the addition to apply to third parties. The new words in s. 316, Civ. Pro. Code, as to the date when "the title to the property sold shall vest" seem to be technical and to point to the complete title arising on the sale becoming absolute, such as might be requisite to enable the purchaser to bring a suit in ejectment, but distinguishable from the inchoate title which suffices for a suit of an equitable nature. (1370)—*S. 66 (=s. 317, Civ. Pro. The remainder Rs. 300 and Rs. 1,400 more which A obtained from H were spent in repairs to the house. The house underwent extensive repairs, to meet the costs of which A mortgaged it to M, who claimed to be a bona fide purchaser for value without notice of H's title. All through the time H remained in possession of the house. Subsequently she used both A and M for a declaration that she was entitled to the property free of all incumbrances. During the pendency of the suit A, and later on his legal representative, his widow, died ; and no one was brought on the record to represent him. Held that the suit was not maintainable in view of the provisions of s. 317 of the Civ. Pro. Code of 1882, for M, the mortgagee, claiming under the Court-sale purchaser A, enjoyed the same immunity from suit as his mortgagor A. (8 Bom. L.R. 873, R.) That M's plea of bona fide purchaser for value without notice was also a good defence to the suit. The doctrine of constructive notice applies in two cases: first, where the party charged had actual notice that the property in dispute was charged, incumbered or in some way affected, in which case he is deemed to have notice of the facts and instruments to a knowledge of which he would have been led by an enquiry after the charge on incumbrance of which he actually knew ; and, secondly, cases in which the Court has been satisfied from the evidence before it that the party charged and designedly abstained from enquiring for the very purpose of avoiding notice. The expression "reasonable care, &c." in s. 41 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, means that, although a purchaser of property is under no legal obligation to investigate his vendor's title, yet, in dealing with real property as in other matters of business, regard is had to the usual course of business ; and a purchaser who wilfully departs from it in order to avoid acquiring a knowledge of his vendor's title is not allowed to derive any advantage from his wilful ignorance of defects which would have come to his knowledge if he had transacted his business in the ordinary way. The occupation of property which has not come to the knowledge of the party charged is not a constructive notice of any interest in the property. MANJI KARIMBHAI v. HOORBAI, 12 Bom. They applied for leave to bid, but the Court refused the application. They then, according to the finding of the Court, purchased the property in the name of the defendant who promised to convey it to them. Upon the defendant's refusal to convey, they brought this suit for specific performance of the contract of sale, or in the alternative for recovery of the money advanced. The first relief was subsequently withdrawn. Held that the money could not be recovered as money lent, as in fact no money was lent. Held further that even if the suit could be treated as a suit for money received by the defendant for the plaintiffs, the plaintiffs could not succeed except by showing that the defendant made the purchase on their behalf. Code, is rather to enable the Judge as a matter of administration to distribute the price according to what seem, at the time, to be the rights of the parties, and does not import a conclusive adjudication on these rights, which may be re-adjusted subsequently by a suit. [F., U.B.R. 1904, 4th Qr., Limitation, sch. II, 13.] An order under s. 295, Civ. Pro. Code, for distribution of sale-proceeds is a step in an execution proceeding in the suit in which the decree was made and is thus an order in a suit. A suit for refund of money paid to the defendant under an order of Court made under s. 295, Civ. Pro. Code, on the ground that the plaintiff was entitled to it in preference to the defendant, is not a suit to set aside the order of distribution and does not come within art. 13 of the Limitation Act. (15 B. 438, Approved). The application of art. 13 to such suits is precluded by the fact that the order for distribution is an order in the suit. SANKAR SARUP v. money against the same judgment-debtor." These words clearly indicate that those decree-holders only could share in the rateable distribution who have actually applied for execution of their decrees to the Court holding the assets. In the present case the salary of a Karkun who was employed in the Sub-Judge's Court at A was attached in execution of a decree of the Sub-Judge's Court at B, by an order issued by the latter Court to stop and remit, every month, a moiety of the Karkun's salary to itself (the Court at B) until satisfaction of the decree. While this decree was in execution another person obtained a decree against the Karkun in the Court at A, and applied to that Court for rateable distribution of the moiety between himself and the decree-holder of the Court at B. Held that the application was not sustainable, because the decree of the Court at B was being executed by itself; and not by the Court at A to which the order of attachment was sent not as to a Court executing the decree of another Court, but only as to the head of a department, or, to adopt the language of s. 268, Civ. The application was made after payment into Court of the sale-proceeds in respect of two of the four items sold and before payment of the sale-proceeds of the remaining two items. The properties sold were the joint family properties of the father and son. Held, that the word "assets" in s. 295, Civ. Pro. Code, means the proceeds of the sale of the property which is sold in execution of a decree. In the present case, the assets could be said to be realized when the whole of the proceeds were paid into Court. At the time the application was made under s. 295, the assets had not been realized for the purpose of the section. Only a portion of the assets had been realized. Consequently the petitioner was entitled to participate in the sale-proceeds of all the items sold. Held, also, that as the property from which the assets were realized by the sale was the ancestral property of the family of which the father and son were undivided members the judgment-debtors were the same for the purposes of s. 295 of the Code. The applicant objected that, since the decree was not 'against the same judgment-debtor' the respondent was not entitled to a share. Held, that, the object of s. 295 being to provide rateable distribution of moneys to two or more persons equally situated, the expression 'against the same judgment-debtor' must be interpreted as referring more to the property than to the person; the test is, not whether the decree has been passed 'against the same judgment-debtor' but whether the rateable distribution has been applied for 'against the same judgment-debtor.' According to s. 295, the twenty-five per cent. of the purchase-money, deposited at the time of an execution-sale, is not assets and is not immediately available for payment to the decree-holder, because it is merely a deposit. The effect of s. 308 is to show that until, at any rate, the whole purchase-money is paid in, in neither the decree-holder, nor any other attaching creditor has any interest whatever the twenty-five per cent. If the property is to be sold free of the mortgage and the mortgage is to be extinguished out of the sale-proceeds, there is no reason why the purchaser should know anything about the mortgage, and the sale-proclamation, therefore, ought not to contain any reference to the existence of the mortgage. If, on the other hand, the sale should be "subject to the mortgage," care should be taken that the proclamation is properly worded and that the bailiff explains to bidders that he is only selling the judgment-debtors's right to redeem, and that the mortgagee still retains his right to realise his money by sale of the property. The mortgaged property having proved insufficient to satisfy the decree, the plaintiff obtained a decree under s. 90 of the Transfer of Property Act, personally against S and the representative of R, who was then dead. Defendants' decree was a simple decree againt S alone. Defendants realised a certain sum in execution by attaching and selling S's interest alone in a property belonging to him. Plaintiffs claimed a rateable distribution of the money so realized by defendants to satisfy their decree as far as it could. Defendants contended that the rateable distribution could not be allowed, since their decree was against S alone and the sale was of S's interest alone, whereas the decree of the plaintiffs, was one against S and another. Held, that, under the provisions of s. 295, the plaintiffs were entitled to a rateable distribution of the money realized by the sale of the common judgment-debtor. Code, 1882, a mortgagee is entitled to claim, in satisfaction of the mortgage-debts due to him the surplus sale-proceeds arising from the sale of the mortgaged property in a suit by the prior mortgagee. But, because he has such a right, he is not under any legal obligation either to the mortgagors or their co-mortgagors so to appropriate the surplus sale-proceeds. The principle last cited is necessary, as otherwise it would be prejudicial to the mortgagors, out of the sale-proceeds of whose property, the payment is made, and might give their co-mortgagors an undue advantage. If, under s. 44, I.C.A., the release of one of several joint promisors does not affect the rights of the promisee as against the other promisors, the qualified release, by a part, of the mortgage security in favour of some of the several joint mortgagors, resulting from the mortgagee not choosing to enforce his rights as against any surplus sale-proceeds of such part when sold in satisfaction of a prior mortgage, ought not to affect the mortgagee's right. The decree of the plaintiffs against B and the three others was held not to have lost its character as a money-decree, merely because a sale of the property of the other three judgment-debtors had been directed thereby. The sale in execution of the other mortgage-decree was adjourned meanwhile, and that mortgagee applied for rateable distribution of the proceeds of the other execution-sale, which was refused; and he brought a suit for the same. It was held that he was entitled to rateable distribution, since every decree directing the payment of money is a "money-decree" within the meaning of s. 295 of the Civ. Pro. Code. Though it was true that the plaintiff was entitled to proceed against other properties, only when the proceeds of sale of the hypotheca were found insufficient for the decree, the other mortgagee was also in the same position, and the properties ought not to have been sold in execution of his decree before the hypotheca had been sold. L obtained another against the same debtor, G in the High Court of Bombay and got the decree transferred for execution to the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Poona and attached the property which had been previously attached at the instance of K. On the motion of L. the execution proceedings of the Small Cause Court were transferred to the Sub-Court by the District Judge, and L thereupon claimed to share rateably in the proceeds of the execution-sale. Objection was taken that L was not entitled to rateable distribution under s. 295 of the Civ. Pro. Pro. Code, to another Court which had previously attached the same property in execution of a decree, being executed in that Court by another judgment-creditor, for a rateable division of the assets realized by that Court has been refused because it was inadmissible under s. 295, has not a right because of anything provided in s. 285 of Civ. Pro. Code, to have the execution-proceedings in that Court re-opened and to compel restoration of any portion of the assets thus realized and paid by the Court which realized the assets to that other decree holder. (21 C. 200, 4 M. 383, 6 M. 357, 4 B. 472, 5 B. 198, 9 C. 920, Dist.) But an attachment of property under a decree does not cease to constitute a charge upon the attached property, merely because s. 295, Civ. Pro. Code, deprives the first attaching creditor of the priority enjoyed under ss. 270 and 271 of Act VIII of 1859. If a judgment-creditor executing his decree in an inferior Court gets the property of his judgment-debtor attached before another creditor executing his decree against the same debtor in a superior Court gets the same property attached, then, there is no room for holding that, upon application being made to the superior Court which has realized the assets by the earlier attaching creditor even after realization and even without transfer of his execution proceedings to the superior Court, such an application may well be treated as a claim to a share of the assets based upon the earlier attachment and made under ss. 278 and 282 of Civ. Pro. Code, and such superior Court acting on the ground that the line obtained by a prior attaching creditor is not entirely extinguished by the principle of rateable distribution introduced by s. 295 of the Code may well give recognition to such a claim by setting free a rateable share of the realized assets, to be made available, upon the proper steps for that purpose being taken, for the satisfaction of the decree of the creditor who has made the earlier attachment in his execution proceedings in another Court. The decision in 21 C. 200 is strongly in favour of that contention. But the authorities show that, if the applicant to the superior Court has not placed the earlier attachment, he can only claim a rateable distribution of assets on the terms and conditions laid down in s. 295, that is, by applying for the execution of his decree to the Court, which has realized the assets before such realization has taken place. The suit related to collections made in faslis 1302 and 1303. Notice of suit had been given in respect of fasli 1302 by only two out of three plaintiffs. That object was fully attained by two out of the three plaintiffs giving the notice. Held also that the expression "cause of action," in s. 424 should not be taken in a narrow sense, the object of the section being merely to inform the defendant substantially of the ground of complaint. The notice given was that the defendant had no right to collect anything on account of fasli jasti and that the collection which had been made on that account for fasli 1302 was illegal. —If any suit is instituted against the Administrator-General in respect of any act purporting to be done by him in his official capacity, he is entitled to notice under s. 424. The phrase "cause of action" in s. 424 of the Civ. Pro. Code, should not be construed narrowly, the object of the section being merely to inform the defendant of the ground of complaint. It is only when notice is not given that the suit is liable to be dismissed. The plaintiff filed a suit to have it declared that the order was null and void. The notice, required by s 424 of the Code of 1882, was not given. Held, that the notice was compulsory, for the declaration was a distinct act of the Collector, done in the exercise of a statutory power, and therefore in his official capacity The true test of an action for the purposes of s. 424 (which is the same as s. 80 of the new Code of 1908) is whether the wrong complained of as having been done by the public officer sued amounts, first, to a distinct act on his part, and secondly, whether that act purported to have been done by him in his official capacity. The plaintiff stated that a cause of action accrued to him when the defendants sent him up for trial and when the complaint was made by S to the Court. He claimed one lump sum as damages for both. The question for consideration was whether, under s. 424 of the Code, notice of suit should have been given to the defendants. Held, that if the defendants induced S to make a report or file a complaint they did not act in their official capacity, and, therefore, so far as the report and complaint were concerned, no notice of suit was necessary ; but that the other alleged acts of the defendants purported to be done by them in their official capacity, within the meaning of s. 424 of the Code, even if they were acting in pursuance of an illegal conspiracy, and therefore, the defendants were entitled to notice, under that section, in respect of them. Held, further, that having regard to the frame of the suit, no amendment could be allowed but the suit should be dismissed in toto. Pro. Code, regarding suits against Sovereign Princes and Ruling Chiefs. One of the questions to be decided was whether a consent given after the commencement of such a suit—a consent not to its being instituted, but to its being proceeded with, was a sufficient consent. In other words, whether a consent with regard to proceeding against the defendant with a suit previously instituted without such consent was a consent which, having regard to the terms of s. 433 of the Code, would make a suit maintainable against a Ruling Chief. It was held that the language of the section was inconsistent with any other view than that the consent of the Governor-General in Council must be obtained before the institution of the suit. The word 'sued' includes every part of a suit, every step in it including the filing of the plaint. Further, a Sovereign Prince or Ruling Chief may be sued with the consent of the Governor-General in Council "but not without such consent." Consequently, the filing of the plaint and every other step in the suit before obtaining the consent is suing "without such consent," and, therefore, a violation of the section. It would be inconsistent with the intention of the Legislature to hold that the Court has power to adjourn a suit to enable the plaintiff to obtain the necessary consent. A Ruling Chief who was not precluded himself from raising the objection of want of such consent is entitled to apply for the dismissal of the suit on the ground that is barred by the section. Also even where the consent obtained has not been a sufficient consent, the objection to the jurisdiction of the Court on such ground may be liable to be waived by the defendant where he has taken any step in the proceedings before applying to dismiss the action. Pro. Code, a suit against a Ruling Chief, filed without the consent of the Governor-General in Council, cannot be tried by a Civil Court. But this exemption of the defendant does not create a defect of jurisdiction properly so-called but only a privilege in his favour, and this may be waived by the defendant. Where the defendant took objection as to the Court's jurisdiction for the first time on further appeal before the Chief Court, held, that the defendant by not taking objection at the proper time had waived his privilege, and was not competent to raise the question at that stage of the case. Liability to pay money under a written contract may be transferred to another person by word of mouth with the consent of the creditor and the person taking upon himself the liability for the original debtor, the old contract being entirely rescinded or put an end to, S. 92, Evidence Act, has no application to such a case. The latter section does not dispense with the requirements of the former, but has been enacted to enable a Court, in the case of defendants residing out of British India, to impose conditions upon the plaintiff before allowing him to proceed with the suit, even where due service of summons has been proved. So, in the case of a defendant residing out of British India, it would not be sufficient if it is merely shown that the summons was issued by post in the manner required by s. 89. Code, 1892 (=s. 92, Civ. Pro. Code, 1908), it would preclude suits between parties to establish a private right, which, if established, would interfere with a charitable scheme settled by Court. A scheme once settled by Court cannot be altered except by the Court and then only on substantial grounds. A person cannot sue under s. 539, Civ. Pro. Code, merely to establish his right as hereditary trustee. The High Courts and the District Courts in this country to which this jurisdiction is confined by s. 92, Civ. Pro. Suits brought not to establish a public right but to remedy a particular infringement of an individual right are not within the section. (d), sch. II, art. 17. cl. (VI).*—The provisions of s. 539 of the Civ. Pro. Code, would be seriously interfered with, and defeated, if every suit under that section, in which an appointment of trustees is prayed for, or the removal of a trustee is sought, has to be treated as a suit for possession of the property concerned. Instances may often arise in which the trust property is of considerable value. If Court-fees had to be paid with reference to that value whenever it was found necessary to bring a suit to remove a trustee who had committed a breach of his trust, such Court-fees might be prohibitive and might prevent the institution of the suit. So, where such a suit embraced first, a claim for a declaratory decree to the effect that the property in suit was endowed property, a Court-fee of Rs. 10 was held to be payable as for such claim; and, for the second prayer in the suit for the appointment of the plaintiffs as trustees, as it was impossible to estimate such prayer at a money-value, a Court-fee of Rs. 10 had to be paid in respect thereof, as under cl. 6, art. 17 of the second schedule to the Court Fees Act. For the further prayer contained in the same plaint for an injunction against interference with the discharge of the duties of the plaintiffs as superintendents, Court-fee was payable under s. 7, sub s. 4 cl. (d) of the Act according to the amount at which the relief sought was valued in the plaint. THAKURI v. (2 C.L.J. 431, F.) In a suit under s. 539, the Court has jurisdiction to make a decree for the removal of the trustee. (17 M. 462, Diss.; 24 C. 418, F.) The cases upon Sir Samuel Romilly's Act, 1882, are not always applicable in case of construction of s. 539, Civ. Pro. Code. Persons, who are officiating priests of a temple, carry on the worship in the absence of the high priest and receive maintenance from the income of the shrine, as also persons who act as pandas or guides and priests of the pilgrims, have an interest in the trust within the meaning of s. 539, Civ. Pro. Code, and are competent to maintain an action under that section. Effect of the amendment made by Act VII of 1888 discussed. (23 B. 659, 24 C. 418, F.) S. 539, Civ. Pro. Code, is applicable when it is sought to remove the trustee from a religious office, if, as the holder of such office, he is called upon to exercise business functions, either as trustee or as manager of temple funds and properties and thus, necessarily, possesses civil rights and consequent liabilities. (12 B. 247, M.H.C. 301, F.; 19 M. 62, D.) In the case of public temples, the ideal owner of the properties dedicated is the Thakur, and the Shebait or the high priest is merely the natural custodian of the properties, having no beneficial interest therein, and thus occupying the fiduciary position of a mere manager, subject strictly to the liabilities of a trustee. (27 M. 435, D.) Although no proof can be admitted of any matter, during the trial of a suit, which is not noticed in the pleadings, yet, where a trustee is sought to be removed under s. 539, Civ. Pro. Code, by reason of his fraudulent conduct and improper behaviour, in illustration of which certain specific facts are alleged in the plaint, the plaintiffs are not precluded from producing evidence of other instances of misconduct and misbehaviour. Under s. 539, the Court will not dismiss a trustee although he may have transgressed the strict line of his duty, provided there has been no wilful default but merely a misunderstanding; the Court will, however, remove him if he has misconducted himself by dealing with the trust-property for his own personal benefit or set up an adverse title thereto. (1629)—Ss. 92 and 93 (=s. 539, Civ. Pro. Code, 1882)—Public charity — Jurisdiction—Stranger, eviction of—Interest in trust, what constitutes — Sir Samuel Romilly's Act (St. 52, Geo. III, C. 181), scope of—Reg. II of 1819, jurisdiction of Revenue authorities under—Resumption proceedings, scope of—Kanungoe—Inam.—It is not necessary, in order to make s. 539, Civ. Pro. Code, applicable, that the existence of the trust for public charitable or religious purposes, alleged by the plaintiff should be admitted by the defendant. If the trust is disputed, the question must be decided by the Court upon evidence, the evidence, however, must be strong and clear that the lands have been inalienably and, in perpetuity, dedicated by the founder for a public charitable or religious purpose. (25 A. 631, Expl. 2 C. 341, F.) When the Jurisdiction of a Court to take cognisance of a suit instituted before it is disputed, the Court must adjudicate upon the question; mere denial of jurisdiction does not oust it. In a suit under s. 539, Civ. Pro. Code, a decree for ejectment cannot be made in favour of the plaintiff against a stranger to the trust, who sets up a title hostile thereto. (20 A. 46, 24 B. 170, F., 24 C. 418; Diss.) A suit, the sole object of which is to eject a trespasser or to recover possession of trust-property from the hands of a person, who has acquired it on the basis of an improper alienation by a trustee, does not fall within the scope of s. 539 of the Civ. Pro. Code. Per Mookerjee, J.:—The language, scope and object of Sir Samuel Romilly's Act are materially different from those of s. 539, Civ. Pro. Code, and decisions upon the former Act cannot be safely relied upon in interpreting the latter. (24 C. 418, 21 A. 200, 21 B. 48, 14 M. 186. F.; 17 M. 462, Diss.) Persons claiming a title purely adverse to a trust are not proper parties to a suit for the execution of the trust. As the possession of an interest in the trust is an essential condition precedent to the maintenance of a suit under s. 539, Civ. Pro. Code, the plaint ought to contain a specific statement of the grounds upon which such interest is claimed. A plaintiff, merely as the heir of the trustee against whom misconduct is alleged, has not such an interest in the trust as would entitle him to maintain an action under s. 539, Civ. Pro. Code. The interest referred to in the section must be an existing one, and not a mere contingency like the possibility of a succession. (20 C. 810, F.) If the trust to be administered is one for the feeding of wayfarers and the poor, it does not necessarily follow that every member of the public has an interest in the trust. Reg. II of 1819 conferred, upon Revenue authorities, jurisdiction to determine whether lands ought to be exempted from assessment of Revenue on the ground that they constitute a valid rent-free grant; the question whether they had been absolutely dedicated for a public charitable purpose, is wholly foreign to such an enquiry. (1630)—Ss. 92, 93 (=s. 539, Civ. Pro. Code, 1882)—Scope of suit—Jurisdiction of District Judge—Recovery of truste-property improperly alienated—Court-fees.—There is no good reason for holding that, under the section, the Court cannot determine of what the trust-properties consisted or find that particular alienation of them could not be maintainted, provided all proper parties are represented before it. Semble, if transferees or mortgagees, who have been impleaded in a suit instituted under s. 539, do not accept the findings of the Court in that suit, it may be necessary for the trustee appointed by the Court to manage the trust-property to institute a suit for recovery of possession. Semble (per Stanley, C. J.)—A suit for the dismissal of a trustee and for recovery of trust-property from the hands of a third party, to whom the same had been improperly alienated fell within the scope of s. 539. (24 C. 418, Appr.) A suit instituted under s. 530, is not a suit in which plaintiffs claim, or can claim for themselves, possession of the trust-property. They merely ask the Court to vest the trust-property in the trustees duly appointed to manage the trust and to take it out of the hands of trustees, who have been guilty of mismanagement. No change in the beneficial ownership is sought. The Court has undoubtedly power, under the section, to vest the trust-property in the new trustees, and it seems to be reasonably clear that the Court may direct a trustee, who is being removed, to make over the trust-property to the new trustees. The plaintiffs in such a suit carry on the suit for the benefit of all persons interested in the trust and continue to act as plaintiffs until the decree has been fully executed. As regards the Court-fees, in many cases, the costs of such a suit as this fall on the trust-estate, and that, as the decree in such suit works no change in the beneficial ownership of the property, it would be a hardship to impose on the trust-estate the payment of the ordinary Court-fee payable in respect of a hostile suit for recovery of land on title. Per Burkitt, J.—By s. 539, the Legislature do not create a new class of civil rights nor constitute a Court empowered to hear suits relating to infringements of those rights. Were it not for s. 539, the class of suits, which the section makes triable by the District Judge only, would be cognizable by the ordinary Subordinate Court empowered to hear original suits. A suit to recover possession of immoveable property on title (even though it be alleged that the property in suit forms part of a waqf property and had been improperly alienated by the mutwalli) is not a suit of the nature specified in s. 539, and, therefore, it is not within the power of the District Judge, when hearing a suit under s. 539, to pass a decree for recovery of possession of such property. But the plaintiff in such a suit can obtain a direction from the District Judge to the mutwalli instructing the latter to get in the trust-property as ascertained by the Judge. The defendant pleaded that he could not be removed under s. 539, as the section is inapplicable to such a suit by two lay disciples, and that consequently he could not be deprived of the Devastanam properties, and that the position of the Head of a Mutt was analogous to that of a Corporation Sole. Held, that the suit under s. 539 was maintainable, and it was not necessary to have a legal successor appointed first, and for him to have sued for possession. (26 M. 450, 15 C. 329 =15 I. A. 1, F.; 16 M. 31, Not F.; 22 M. 117, D.) Held also, that, even supposing that the defendant cannot be removed from headship of the Mutt under s. 539, and that the headship of the Mutt carries with it trusteeship of Devastanam, there is no reason why the properties held by the defendant in trust should not be protected, if it be proved that the defendant has been guilty of waste and mismanagement, or why, if a proper case is made out, the Court should not make the necessary provisions for a proper administration of the trust. A Court of equity always exercised jurisdiction to make whatever arrangements may be required for carrying out the object of the trust. Code, 1882, s. 539)—Suit instituted on sanction—Reliefs to be limited to matters covered by sanction.*—This was a suit brought in the District Court by the Collector on sanction obtained from Government under s. 539 of the Civ. Pro. Code, which instructed him "to move the District Court to appoint trustees newly for the administration of the trust-funds and to settle a scheme for their management." It was contended for the defendants that, as the sanction by Government was of a limited character, and did not include the relief in the plaint in respect of the removal of old trustees and of rendering of account and refund of monies, the suit was not maintainable in its enlarged form as including such reliefs, and the High Court upheld the contention. The lower Court was in error in inquiring into matters not covered by the order of sanction, thereby enlarging the scope of the suit so as to enable it to grant reliefs not included in the sanction. The plaint, so far as it prayed for the appointment of new trustees and the settlement of a scheme for administering the trusts, was strictly within the limits of the sanction. In so far, however, as the enquiry was extended to the investigation of breaches of trust and to the passing of an order requiring the old trustees to refund certain sums, the action of the lower Court was not warranted by the terms of the sanction and, as such, was ultra vires. The plaintiffs, therefore, prayed that defendants be removed from their office, or that the terms of the decree might be enforced by imprisonment of the defendants and attachment of their property. The District Judge dismissed the application on the ground that even if the applicants proved their allegations, he did not consider that the defendants could be removed in execution-proceedings and that the plaintiff's remedy lay in a regular suit. Held, that as the scheme was framed, there was no provision for removing the defendants, for proved misconduct; that the proper course in order to remove the trustees was not to bring a fresh suit under s. 539 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, but was to have the scheme amended so as to include in it a provision for their removal, if necessary; that s. 260, Civ. Pro. After the year 1841, the British Government withdrew from all interference with its management, and the management was handed over to the head of a Mutt, the sunnud granted to him providing that he and his successors were to continue as managers of the temple. A series of managers having mismanaged the affairs of the temple and misapplied and misappropriated its funds, the present suit was instituted for the settlement of a scheme. The history of the temple showed that the successive Mahants, or heads of the Mutt were utterly incompetent to manage its affairs, and that the arrangements made in 1843 for the administration of the institution failed to answer the expectations then entertained. The District Judge, in the Court of first instance, by his decree, appointed a committee of five members to exercise minute and complete control over the Mahant. The contentions for the defendant, Mahant, were: that the Courts had no jurisdiction to appoint new or additional trustees or to establish a controlling authority. The contentions were based on the meaning of the words 'under the trust' in s. 539 of the Code, it being urged that the Courts, if they had jurisdiction to interfere, ought to conform to the original constitution of the trust or to the rules now in force in respect to it. Held, that District Courts and High Courts in this country, exercising jurisdiction under s. 539 of the Code, have powers similar to those of Courts of Chancery in England, i.e., powers of appointing additional trustees, even though such appointment might involve a departure from the arrangement contemplated in the constitution of the trust,—and that there was no reason for supposing that the Indian Legislature meant to control the powers of the Courts in respect to the appointment of new or additional trustees. Held, further, that, as, in this case, the Mahant did not derive his power of management under the original constitution laid down centuries ago, but under the British Government in 1843, the contention that the original constitution ought to be conformed to, does not hold good in this case. The arrangement under which the Mahant came to be in office was one made by the Board of Revenue when it withdrew from the management of the temple. Such an arrangement was analogous to a scheme settled by a lawful authority, and, as such, it was liable to be varied by that or other authority legally competent to alter or modify it. There was, therefore, nothing to prevent a scheme being framed by the Court providing, inter alia, for the appointment of an additional trustee or the creation of a controlling body. The High Court, following the cypres principle, settled a scheme for the management of the temple and for the expenditure of its surplus income, the scheme providing, among other things, for the appointment of an additional trustee and the constitution of a controlling body and reserving a power to the trustees to apply to the District Court with reference to the carrying out of the directions of the scheme. This contention in regard to want of jurisdiction was overruled by the High Court which held that the prayers for the removal of the trustees and for requiring them to give an account, fall within the scope of s. 539 as distinctly as the appointment of new trustees and the settling of a scheme for the management of the charities. The suit was instituted in the District Judge's Court with reference to the provisions of s. 539, Civ. Pro. Code. The District Judge came to the conclusion that a trust for public charitable purposes, when created by a Mahomedan, is a wakf, that the deed amounted to a wakf-bil-wasiat or testamentary wakf, and that under Shia Law, the wakf was null and void, because the wakfi died before delivery of the property. He held that the plaint had been wrongly presented to him and returned it to be presented to the proper Court. Held, that the District Judge should have entertained the suit. The suit as brought clearly related to a trust for public charitable or religious purposes and one which should have been instituted in the District Judge's Court, and, if the deed did not create the alleged trust, that circumstance was not a ground for returning the plaint to be presented to another Court. Pro. Code of 1882. (8 B. 365, 15 B. 148, 24 B. 170, F.) Whece the trustees named by the testator for the purpose of making and completing the trust at the point of time fixed by him are dead, and the object of the trust as named by him is specific and definite, the Court will take the administration of the trust. Where the testator names certain persons to carry out the trust pointed out by him, and those persons die before the period for the creation and completion of the trust, in the absence of any provision made by the testator to meet such a contigency, the right to do that which those persons would have done devolves, according to Hindu Law, on the heir of the testator. He takes either their place or his. Where a Hindu, who has directed a trust of his property for a religious purpose, dies before giving effect to it, the Hindu Law authorises his heir to take steps for carrying out his directions after recovering the property from a trespasser. Where the testator merely directs that his property should be endowed for a certain purpose at a certain time by certain persons after his death, then, until the arrival of the time and the complete dedication of it in the manner and for the object pointed out by the testator, the property must be regarded, in the eye of law, as part of his estate, but impressed with a trust or an obligation on the part of those taking that estate as heirs to carry out his directions at the appointed time. He who succeeds him as heir has the right to do what the owner himself would have done or has directed to be done so as to complete the trust, with the sanction of the Court, if necessary. Before he can do that, he must first secure the property from the wrong-doer into whose possession it has passed. A person suing as a trustee for the purpose of the recovery of the property impressed with a trust is not barred by res judicata by reason of the judgment in the previous suit brought by him in a different capacity, i.e., as the heir on his own account. (13 O.C. 79, 5 Ind Cas. 1005, 2 O.C. 340, R.) Per Chamier, J.—In order that a trust may be a trust for public purposes, it is not necessary that there should be a trust for the benefit of the public at large. It is sufficient to show that there is a trust for the benefit of a section of the public. (23 B. 659, R.) It is not necessary in every case to produce definite evidence of the creation or the origin of a trust. Per Karamat Husain, J.—(1) (i) The creation of a public or of a private trust, save by making a wakf is unknown to Muhammadan law. (ii) A Muhammadan Ruler could not make a wakf in respect of property which was not his private property. (iii); The property which is made wakf must be in existence at the time of the wakf; the future revenue was not property which could be a fit subject of wakf. (2) A public trust must be proved by strong and clear evidence; the mere fact that the income of the property has for a long period been spent to support fakirs and visitors is not sufficient to establish a public trust. (2 C. 341, R.) (3) In the absence of evidence to the contrary, a Nanakshahi gaddi is analogous to a mutt and not to a temple which is the abode of a deity. The Mahant of the gaddi is not a mere trustee like the head of a temple. He is not legally bound to spend the income of the gaddi on public purposes of a charitable or religious nature, and is not accountable in law. (27 M. 435, R.) (4) From the fact that a grant was made to a Mahant it does not follow that a public charity was created. The question whether certain property is a public charity is not a pure question of fact. All the legal requisites essential for the constitution of a public charity must be established by strong and clear proof, in order to enable a Court of

Pro. Code (inter alia), to have trustees appointed for the management of the plaint mentioned property—a temple and its accessories, and to have the property made over to such trustees. The District Judge rejected the claim and dismissed the suit, without recording the evidence, on the ground that it was res judicata by reason of the decision in a previous suit by the plaintiffs against the defendant. The High Court, however, held that the present suit was not barred by the proceedings in the former suit. That suit was brought on the allegation of the plaintiffs that they had been appointed trustees of the charity by its founder and the defendant was sought to be evicted on the ground that he had been appointed by them as their gumasta, that they had dismissed him and that he refused to give up the property to them. The High Court then, without finding whether plaintiffs had or had not been appointed as trustees, dismissed the suit on the ground that their claim to recover possession of the property from the defendant was barred by limitation. In the previous suit, plaintiffs had based their title to sue on their particular appointment by the founder of the charity, and when it was found that they had, by limitation, lost their right to any title derived from such appointment, they ceased to represent the public just as though they had been removed from the office. The plaintiffs in that suit had no general warrant such as the one in their present suit under s. 539, to represent the public as the objects of the charity. LAKSHMAN DAS v. S. 95 of the new Civ. Pro. Code provides for compensation as a limited and incidental relief; and in cases of wrongful attachment, it gives an alternative remedy. The rule in England is that actual malice must be proved, while this section allows a limited remedy without such proof. S. 95 is analogous to s. 250 of the Crim. Pro. Code. It has three meanings—the particular damage resulting from the particular circumstances of the case; the actual and temporal loss caused where the damage done is the wrong and no actual right has been disturbed; and the particular loss of the individual in cases of nuisance, over and above the loss sustained by the public in general. The offices sued for formed portions of a permanently settled estate. Subsequent to the institution of the suit, a notification was published under s. 2 of Madras Act II of 1894, the effect of which was that, from the date of the notification, s. 11 of Regulation XXV of 1802 and Regulation XXIX of 1802 ceased to apply to the office of Karnam. The District Judge held that notwithstanding the notification, he had jurisdiction, to hear the suit on the ground that it had been instituted before the notification into force. The question was whether an appeal lay to the High Court from the decree of the District Court. Held that the High Court had jurisdiction to entertain the appeal. The appeal was from a Court exercising original jurisdiction, and the High Court, if Act II of 1894 had not been passed, would have had appellate jurisdiction by virtue of s. 548, Civ. Pro. Code, in suits brought under the above said Regulations. The appellate jurisdiction of the High Court, in cases where the Court of first instance had jurisdiction to entertain the suit and the parties had a right of appeal when the suit was instituted, is saved by s. 8 of the Madras General Clauses Act, 1891, unless the right of appeal has been taken away in express terms. The plaintiff and A.S., brought a suit against the defendant for possession of the aforesaid taluka on the 21st February, 1891. In the plaint it was stated that, not having sufficient funds to carry on the suit, A.S., had sold half the share in the estate to the plaintiff who was joined as a co-plaintiff. Three days before the date of first hearing A.S., filed a petition and a compromise stating he was satisfied that under law and custom he had no claim to the estate; that he had been persuaded by the plaintiff to execute a sale-deed in his favour for which he (A.S.) got no lawful consideration; and he prayed that the suit might be dismissed under s. 373 of the Civ. Pro. Code. Some three days after, A.S. registered a petition in the office of a Sub-Registrar under s. 373 of the Civ. Pro. Code, praying that his suit be unconditionally dismissed. Subsequent to this, the defendant filed a written statement in which, among other pleas, it was urged that the plaintiff's suit was champertous and unmaintainable, and was also bad for mis-joinder of parties. The Court of first instance dismissed the plaintiff's claim. Held (per W. Blennerhaussett, J. C.) that the joinder of the plaintiff in this suit as the purchaser of half of A.S's share did not amount to a misjoinder of parties. (18 A. 131 Not F.) ; that the specific English law of maintenance and champerty has not been introduced into India. The defendant, therefore, could not directly plead that the suit was unmaintainable on the ground of champerty ; that the agreement on behalf of the plaintiff to supply A.S. with the necessary funds was a fair agreement and was in no way contrary to public policy and the suit was maintainable; that where an assignee sues on his assignment and proves it, an adverse party cannot take objection that there was no consideration. Held (per R. Scott, A.J.C.) that whether the contract between A.S. and the plaintiff was void or voidable or a valid and binding agreement, the plaintiff could not sue for possession of half the taluks in the present suit. Held further, that the agreement relied upon by the plaintiff was a gambling in litigation and opposed to public policy and, therefore, void. Held (per Spankie, A.J.C.) that there was a contract of sale between the plaintiff and A.S. under which there was a present transfer of a moiety of the taluks to the plaintiff. That a contract of sale of property, which is not in the possession of the vendor, and which is the subject of litigation and as to which the vendor's title may never be established, can operate to give to the purchaser a right to obtain possession of the property, and that, therefore, the contract of sale between A.S., and the plaintiff could operate as a present transfer of a moiety of the taluks to the plaintiff; that the defendant could not defend the suit on the ground that the contract of sale was extortionate, unconscionable and fraudulent, and that there had been a failure of consideration ; that there was nothing in the contract of sale "against good policy and justice, tending to promote litigation or what is in the legal sense immoral," and that the suit was maintainable; that the withdrawal of A.S. from the suit might perhaps be a reason for the amendment of the plaint, but it was not a ground for dismissing the suit. Upon the defendant's attempt to address an argument upon a point with regard to which the Bench had come to a unanimous decision, held, that under s. 575, Civ. Pro. Code, only the point of law on which there is a difference of opinion should be heard by the Judge or Judges to whom the appeal may be referred, and not points on which there is no difference of opinion. If the Judges differ in opinion on points of law, they must state the points on which they differ. If they do not, there is no determination of the case, which, if referred to other Judges, may be gone into by them. Under an English deed, a mortgagee is entitled to possession before foreclosure immediately upon default, and he would hold possession subject to his own right to foreclosure and to the mortgagor's right to redeem. The decree in the foreclosure suit would not be binding on a party, who purchased bona fide the rights of the mortgagor, or a portion of them, before the pendency of any suit against the mortgagor. In a suit to recover possession of land under a mortgage-deed, limitation will count as against the mortgagee from the date of default, and the pendency of a foreclosure suit will not prevent limitation from running. A agreed to receive the money that he gave on the first mortgage, from B, and allowed the mutation of names. Then A sued B on the mortgage for the recovery of the amount due to him. Held that the only claim of the plaintiff was a money-claim against B. His cause of action against B was on the agreement by which the latter took on himself the debt due to the plaintiff, but there was no mortgage made by B of the property to the plaintiff. With reference to s. 578, Civ. Pro. Code, the claim should not be disallowed on the technical ground that the right of action was in the plaint alleged to be

The disputed land was then decreed in favour of plaintiff as lakhiraj, and the decree was upheld in appeal. Held that the regular procedure for the Munsiff would have been to require the plaintiff to file an entirely fresh plaint upon the proper stamp: but as the irregularity objected to did not affect the decision upon the merits, effect should not, under Act VIII of 1859, s. 350, be given to it in special appeal. The first Court re-tried the suit and again dismissed it. The lower appellate Court gave the respondent a decree in the suit. Held that the irregularity committed by the lower appellate Court, in ordering the plaint to be amended, was not such as in anyway to affect the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the Court; and could not, therefore, under the provisions of s. 578, Civ. (1748)—S. 99 (=s. 578, Civ. Pro. Code, 1882)—Misjoinder of different causes of action whether cured by—Damage of two persons by same tortious act—Right to sue as joint plaintiffs.—Damage was caused to two members of a firm by the same wrongful act of the defendant. The two members brought a suit as co-plaintiffs for damages. But the plaint was so framed that each plaintiff was suing, individually, for the injury to his personal reputation and credit. Held, that, in such a case, each plaintiff had a different cause of action, and that the joint suit was not maintainable. But the two plaintiffs might, had they so chosen, have instituted an action for the joint damage suffered by the firm. Though it is open to plaintiffs in England to join in one suit distinct causes of action under certain circumstances, there is no such privilege conferred by the Code of Civil Procedure. Under the Code, the plaintiff can do so only in respect of the same cause of action. The powers of the Courts are derived in India entirely from legislative enactments, and their jurisdiction does not commence till a suit has been instituted in the manner allowed by law. Hence, misjoinder of causes of action is not cured by the provisions of s. 578, Civ. Pro. Code. MANGHAM MAL ROCHIRAM v. MICHUMA REWACHAND, 1 Sind. L.R. the children of C, put in a claim-petition on the ground that the properties belonged to their deceased mother. No such claim-petition was put in when B attached these properties. The suit for declaration that the attachments made by A and B are not valid, was dismissed by the Munsiff but was decreed by the Sub-Judge. Held, that the objection that the suit was bad for misjoinder of causes of action cannot be heard in second appeal. S. 99 of the new Code provides that "no decree shall be reversed or substantially varied on account of any misjoinder of parties or causes of action." That section is one regulating the procedure of the appellate Court and was therefore applicable to all appeals heard after the new Code came into force. (34 M. 55, Appr., 7 M.L.T. 296, doubted; 1910, M. W.N. 640, 719, 33 M 241, R.,) The circumstance that the suit or appeal was instituted before Act V of 1908 came into force does not affect the applicability of s. 99 of the new Act. (20 M.L.J. 344, F.) That the plea of misjoinder of causes of action had been upheld in the Court of first instance and only failed in the first appellate Court is also immaterial in determining the applicability of s. 99. The declaration granted by the Subordinate Judge that the entire attachment of the suit-properties was invalid was bad in law, as plaintiffs were only three out of the four persons entitled to the property, and the order on the claim-petition against the 4th defendant had become final, no suit having been brought within one year from its date. The proceedings did not show that the principal was living away from the jurisdiction of the Court at the time of bringing the suit; nor was it shown that he was unable to sign the plaint himself owing to absence or any other good cause. Objections on these grounds were taken for the first time in second appeal. Held, that the mere fact that the plaint in a suit has not been signed by the plaintiff named therein or by any person duly authorized in that behalf, as required by s. 51 of the Code, will not necessarily make the plaint absolutely void, and that the defect in the signature in the plaint or the absence of signature, where it appears that the suit was in fact filed with the knowledge, and by the authority, of the plaintiff named therein, may be waived by the defendant and, having regard to s. 578 of the Code, is not a ground for interference in second appeal. Held, further, that such objections might have been raised in the original proceedings, when the fact of the plaintiff's absence or otherwise would have been inquired into by the lower Court. Defendants built upon land which was common land. Plaintiffs, thereupon, brought a suit for a mandatory injunction. The Court of first instance granted the injunction, but the lower appellate Court, finding that no special damage had occurred and the plaintiffs had committed a similar wrong before, refused it. Held, that a second appeal would lie, although the granting of a mandatory injunctionwas a matter of discretion inasmuch as, (1) the defendant having built upon common land, the decision appealed against was contrary to law as specified in the memorandum of appeal within the meaning of s. 584 of the Code, and (2) the Court below had exercised not a judicial, but an arbitratory, discretion. Sembla :—It is not the law that, where a wrong has been previously committed by the plaintiffs, redress ought not to be given to them if a similar wrong is afterwards committed by the defendant. Where a co-sharer makes constructions upon common land it is not necessary for a co-sharer, who has not acquiesced in such construction, to prove special damage. RAM BAHADUR PAL v. It can only be evidence of that person's title as owner, when taken with something else. Per Chandavarkar, J.—It is a rule of practice that a Court of appeal should not upset the judgment of the first Court on the quetion of fact, depending on the appreciation of the evidence, unless the former Court is quite confident that the judgment is wrong. This is after all a rule of practice, meant for the guidance of appellate Court having jurisdiction to deal with questions of fact and they are the sole Judges of the question whether a judgment appealed against is wrong. The High Court sitting in second appeal has no jurisdiction to interfere with the exercise of their discretion in that respect unless there is any error of the kind pointed out in s. 584 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882. Per Jacob, J.—Where there is a clear finding of fact, right or wrong, the High Court on second appeal is precluded from interfering with it. Per Aston, J. dissenting,—The fact that certain lands are entered in the Government records in the name of a particular person, is material, though not conclusive, evidence of his title of those lands. A finding of fact arrived at in a first appeal after giving insufficient or perverted consideration to matters which justly weighed with the original Court or ought to be well-weighed in appeal bears too close a resemblance to a capricious or arbitray decision to permit of its being accepted as a proper adjudication of fact in dispute and binding in second appeal. Code, was presented to the Court of the Judicial Commissioner against an order against which, under the Civ. Pro. Code, no appeal was allowed to the Court and this Court holding that an appeal lay under s. 622, Lower Burma Courts Act, treated the application as an appeal and dealt with it as such, held, that while the proper course to be followed was to have rejected the application for revision and to have directed that an appeal be filed the error, which was of a purely technical kind, did not in itself constitute a sufficient reason within the meaning of s. 623, Civ. Pro. Code, to justify a review of the order. GOVINDASAWMY NAIKEN v. KALLY, L.B.R. 1893—1900, 540. (1 C. 197, 24 W.R. 186, R.)

When the defendant-surety made default in the observance of the surety-bond, the plaintiff sued him. But the first Court held that the original judgment-debtor also should have been impleaded and that the plaintiff should also have sued for the possession of the land attached by him and returned the plaint for amendment. On appeal the District Judge remanded the case under s. 562 for decision on the merits. Held that the proper section for the Judge to proceed under was s. 588 (6), as no decree had been passed by the first Court and that the District Judge should have simply set aside the order of the first Court and directed it to decide the case on the plaint as it stood, though the error in the order of the District Judge was immaterial, considering that the order of the first Court in returning the plaint was wrong. Reference to arbitration—Difference in opinion of arbitrators on a question of law—Statement of a special case for the opinion of the Court—Appeal from the Court's order.—The parties to a suit agreed to refer their disputes relating to the properties in suit to the arbitration of two persons; and a consent of Judge's order was obtained. They further agreed to refer to the same arbitrators their disputes with regard to properties which were not the subject-matter of the suit. The agreements provided that, in case of disagreement between the arbitrators, which prevented them from making an award, the matter in difference was to be referred to an umpire who should make the award. The two arbitrators differed on a question of law arising in the arbitration. There was no reference to an umpire. But the arbitrators each expressed his opinion on the question and referred it for opinion to the High Court in the form of a special case, under the Civ. Pro. Code, 1908. sch. II, r. 11, and the Indian Arbitration Act, s. 10. It was decided by the Chamber Judge. An appeal was preferred against his decision: Held that no appeal lay, since the special case was in no sense an award. There was no award which could be adopted by the Court by the mere expression of its opinion; but there was simply a statement of a question of law for the opinion of the Court. The case was not, therefore, one which fell under r. 11 of the second schedule of the Civ. Pro. Code, 1908; but it fell under s. 10 of the Indian Arbitration Act, in so far as it related to the second agreement. PURSHOTUMDAS RAMGOPAL v. RAMGOPAL HIRALAL, 12 Bom. L.R. 852=8 Ind. Cas. 171.

(1908)—S. 104 (f), sch. 2, r. 21 (1) and (2)—Appeal—Order filing an award—Decree based thereon—Provisions of the Code, whether antagonistic—Intention of Legislature—An appeal lies, under s. 104 (f) of the Code of 1908, from an order filing an award made in an arbitration without the intervention of the Court, in spite of the fact that the Court has, under cl. 21 (1) of the second schedule to the Code, proceeded to pronounce judgment according to the award. Per Reid, C.J., and Kensington, J.—The language of s. 104 (f) is very clear and the fact that a later provision of the Code, cl. 21 (2), sch. II, bars an appeal from a decree based on an award does not cancel the earlier provision. The two provisions of the Code are not antagonistic. If the order filing an award is set aside, there is no award on which judgment and decree can be based. The absence of any ground, such as is mentioned or referred to in cl. 14 or cl. 15 of sch. II, is a condition precedent to passing an order filing the award. (33 C. 757=3 C.L.J. 450=10 C.W.N. 609, 27 P.R. 1910, Cr.=69 P.L.R. 1910=22 P.W.R. 1910, Cr.=6 Ind. Cas. 736, 1 P.R. 1908, F.B.=58 P. W.R. 1907, D.) Per Ratigan, J.—The two provisions of the Code are all for practical purposes in direct conflict. The result of allowing an appeal from order filing an award is tantamount to allowing an appeal from the decree based on the award. The intention of the Legislature expressed in cl. 21 (2), sch. II, is to all intents and purposes nullified by the provision in cl. (f) of s. 104. The intention of the Legislature is to allow an appeal from the order filing an award merely when such order dealt with the objection that the matter had not been referred to arbitration or that no award had in fact been passed.
